SENATE RENEWS FIGHT ON WARREN

WALSH FEELS CONFIRMATION GRAVE ERROR

Montana Senator Says Approval of Michigan Man For Attorney General Would Mean Suspension of Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 7.—"Confirm the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren to be attorney general and you might just as well hang out a sign on the department of justice that the Sherman anti-trust act is suspended for the duration of this administration." Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Montana, democrat, told the senate today during a three hour speech attacking the last of President Coolidge's nominations to the cabinet.

Walsh re-opened the fight against Warren in the new senate by obtaining a vote to consider the nomination in open executive session, regardless of the rule that the president's nominations be considered in secret session.

Speaker Is Vigorous.

"I do not see how any senator can do his duty and vote for his nomination," Walsh said. "You might as well turn the trusts loose and let them plunder the people unrestrained."

Eleven republicans combined with the democrats in favor of the motion to stage the debate in public, which passed, 46 to 39.

President pro-tem Moses ruled that a two-thirds majority was required to open the doors, but on appeal his decision was reversed by one vote, 39 to 38.

"In recent years it has been the custom to appoint attorneys general not for reward for eminent success at the bar, but as an award for political services," Walsh said during his attack.

Senators Not Consulted.

Walsh declared the nomination was made by President Coolidge without consultation with the two senators from Michigan as is customary. When the judiciary committee of the senate began investigation of the nomination, both Senators Couzens, republican, and Ferris, democrat, Michigan, submitted opinions Walsh said.

Couzens, according to Walsh, said that Warren was a "right intelligent lawyer," while Ferris said, "I shall not oppose the nomination, but I had hoped that the new attorney general might be selected from a group of high grade attorneys. I appreciate that Mr. Warren is a high grade politician."

Millionaire And Attorneys Jubilant Following Words Of Judge.

Believe Prosecution Will Be Unable To Repair Damage Done.

CHICAGO, March 7.—A verdict of not guilty on the first ballot is confidently anticipated by W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, on trial of a charge of conspiring to defame the character of his wife, Helen Elwood Stokes of Denver.

Stokes and his attorneys, while refusing to talk, were manifestly jubilant tonight. They believe the state will be unable to repair damage done by the introduction of numerous postal cards of unidentified authorship, but which were ascribed to Stokes.

Judge Gemmill told the state he felt the prosecution's case had been destroyed by the introduction of the cards before the jury.

"This is a reversible error in any court," Judge Gemmill declared.

Defense attorneys are prepared to push the advantage by producing evidence to show Stokes did not write the postal cards.

Stokes denied that he wrote the cards.

The cards, received by Mrs. Stokes and their two children, charged the woman with having negro lovers and colored offsprings.

The prosecution worked desperately tonight to devise some method of overcoming the difficulty.

Stokes is to take the stand again Monday. He took advantage of today's adjournment to rest for what he believes will be his final victorious appearance.

Hal Billig, with whom Stokes charges Mrs. Stokes had several intimate affairs, may be called by the state as a rebuttal witness.

Mrs. Stokes is in seclusion in her hotel. She has refused to appear in court during her husband's appearance on the stand. She is known to be keenly disappointed at the turn of affairs, and is understood to be considering some other step in the fight to clear her name.

WOMEN MUST STAY AT PEN

House Defeats Proposal To Transfer Seventeen Female Prisoners To York Reformatory.

QUESTION LEGALITY OF SUCH A CHANGE

Board Of Control's Plan to Make Room at Lancaster For Men On "Waiting List" Is Killed.

Plans of the board of control to provide more room for male convicts at the penitentiary by removing the 17 female prisoners from that institution to the woman's reformatory at York were vetoed by the Nebraska house Saturday afternoon. The bill providing for their transfer, H. R. 368, was killed in committee of the whole without a record vote.

Representative Wildman of York county led the opposition to it. He declared that some of the inmates at York, committed thither on account of having fallen into evil ways and contracted social disease, are more sinned against than sinning. They should not be placed in contact with women hardened in crime, such as those serving penitentiary sentences, Wildman insisted.

He mentioned one case of a 13-year-old girl at York who is there because she was wronged by her own father. This girl, Mr. Wildman declared, is not a criminal nor are her instincts vicious.

"It would be a sad mistake to send hardened criminals to that institution and put all together in one herd," he warned his colleagues.

Pen Inmates Also Opposed.

That female convicts at the penitentiary are just as much opposed to the idea of going to York as others are to their being received at that place was the assertion of Mr. Auten.

"I made a personal investigation by going to the penitentiary and talking to the women," he reported. "Every one of them bitterly resents being compelled to associate with women of the class that the York reformatory is now caring for."

Mr. Munn took issue with Auten, saying he had interviewed the leader of the women's ward at the penitentiary more recently and found

Four Unmasked Bandits Engage In Gun Battle With Employes and Customers In Which One Robber Is Shot.

OMAHA, Neb., March 7.—Four unmasked bandits tonight entered the Security State bank in South Omaha, and escaped with $10,000 after engaging in a gun battle with bank employes and customers.

Policeman John Bowman, detailed as vault guard at the bank was shot in the hand. Bowman who was posted as lookout at the cage above the vault, grabbed a riot gun. He was forced to cease firing.

The men tried to force W. A. Ratschak, president of the bank to open the vault, but Ratschak refused.

The men then scooped up the money in the cashiers' cages, and started to flee. A gun battle was started at once. One of the bandits was shot as he was passing through the door. His companion assisted him to a waiting automobile.

Before entering the bank, the robbers are said to have set fire to a big hay barn at the union stock yards to distract attention. 35 Hurt When Building Falls

WINSTON, Conn., March 7.—Thirty-five persons were injured, one probably fatally, in the collapse of a frame tabernacle in Mason street, Torrington, this afternoon.

Sixteen of the injured, who sustained fractures, are in Charlotte Hungerford hospital, Torrington.

Recovery of Leon Moore, whose back is badly injured and his legs broken, is regarded as doubtful.

The tabernacle was being erected by a corps of volunteer workers and was to be used for an evangelistic campaign to be conducted by Rev. Woods Anderson, who is now in Painesville, O.

Ninety men were at work when the collapse occurred, and many of them were hurtled from the roof forty feet to the ground.

UNKNOWN MAN SHOOTS PEARSON

Roomer at 1246 Q Street Suffers Gunshot Wound In Hand.

Assailant Makes Escape But Victim Gets Number of Car.

L. L. Pearson, 1246 Q street, was shot through the hand at 1:30 Sunday morning by an unknown man who is said to have rapped on the window of Mrs. Joseph Hale, who lives in the same house. Pearson, after having been shot, secured the number on his assailant's car and police are attempting to find the man.

Mrs. Hale, hearing the tapping on the window, became frightened and called to Mrs. Pearson, who lives in the next room. Mr. Pearson was undressed, so Mrs. Pearson went out to the porch, finding the man standing at the west side of the house.

"What are you doing here?" she asked.

"What do you want to know for?" the man replied.

"This isn't any place for you at this time of night," said Mrs. Pearson.

"I'm going to get her," the man declared.

Mrs. Pearson declared that the man looked as if he were demented and she ran into the house.

Car Parked at Curb.

Mr. Pearson ran out and found the man getting into a Ford coupe which he had parked at the curb. He ran to the car and asked the intruder what he was doing. "What do you want to know for?" the man again asked.

Pearson replied by swinging at the man, striking him on the jaw.

"Get out of the way or I'll plug you," the man shouted.

He then reached in his coat pocket and pulled out a gun, shooting instantly. Only Pearson's act in throwing his hand across his body prevented probable fatal injury.

While the assailant was attempting to start his car Pearson bent down and secured the license number, calling it out to Mrs. Pearson, who was on the porch. The man finally got the car started and drove away to the west.

No Clue To Intruder.

Mrs. Hale could not give any clue as to who the intruder was.

"I haven't any enemies that I know of," she declared; "at least any that would want to shoot me."

The man was described as follows: 5 feet, 10 inches tall; weight, 160 or 165; age 25 or 30; wearing a dark overcoat and a cap. Mrs. Pearson believes that she could identify him.

Ralph Andrews, 1240 Q street, who was passing by, heard the shot and called the police. Dr. W. H. Slattery attended Pearson. The wound is not serious.

Police were checking up to find the car number. No records were available of the 1925 numbers, but it was thought possible that some clue might be gained from the 1924 numbers, which are available.

Keith Evans, living at 1223 Q street, heard the shot and rushing outside saw the man as he drove away from the place. He said he watched the car as it went west until it disappeared a block or so down the street.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Keyser, who live in an apartment on the second floor of the Pearson home were also awakened by the shot and the call [illegible] Mrs. Pearson. They [illegible]

Speaker Burke Believes House Can Speed Up Remaining Work By Putting In Longer Hours Each Day.

CONTINUE GRIND ALL AFTERNOON SATURDAY

Canvass Shows That Only About Fifty Bills Are Left In Hands Of Standing Committees.

In pursuance of Speaker Burke's program for speeding up the work which remains to be done at this legislative session, the house of representatives will this week begin working longer hours each day and its standing committees will meet only as occasion requires, instead of on the schedule heretofore followed.

For the first time since the legislature convened in January, the house put in a full day Saturday, both morning and afternoon. Hitherto, it has been content to put in a half day each alternate Saturday and then adjourn over at noon until the following Monday at 2 p. m., giving members who live near Lincoln a chance to go home over Sunday. This time, the grind was kept up until 3:30 in the afternoon, and a motion was adopted to meet Monday morning at 9.

There is a long list of bills now on the house calendar, waiting to be taken up and disposed of in committee of the whole. A few important measures, including several dealing with motor vehicle license fees and highway legislation, will be added thereto early in the week. The gasoline tax bill is already on the general file. It will take a full week of solid work to wade through all the bills that are now posted.

Committees Have Few Bills.

Speaker Burke announced to the house Saturday afternoon that he did not think it would be necessary to appoint a sifting committee this year. He has made a canvass among the chairmen of standing committees and finds that only about fifty house bills still remain in their hands. Most of this number have been held at the request of the introducers, or because there are exact duplicates pending in the senate or already passed or killed by that chamber.

"Probably not more than five or six of all these bills will come before the house," said Speaker Burke. "If we buckle down and work every morning from 9 to 12 and every afternoon until 4 or 5 o'clock we can make good progress with the bills we now have on the calendar."

Luther Burbank Celebrates His 76th Birthday

SANTA ROSA, Cal., March 7.—While school children throughout the country today observed the seventy-sixth birthday of Luther Burbank, the plant wizard talked about them and their dogs, two subjects close to his heart.

"You know, the longer I live, the more I'm impressed with dogs," Burbank said, pausing for a time in the midst of answering several hundred telegrams of congratulations from all over the world.

"A child is like a tender plant. It is very easily influenced for good or bad by chance savings or actions of elders, things which we might think were unnoticed.

"In this way, you see, in some respects dogs and children are very much alike, both lovable and both improved by mutual association."

A VICTORY IS NOW CLAIMED BY SCULPTOR

Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Association Yields To Public Opinion. But Asserts Will Not Re-Employ Borglum.

(United Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., March 7.—Following weeks of bitter wrangling, involving grand jury indictments charging larceny, the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial association yielded to public opinion today and dropped its suit against Gutzon Borglum, sculptor.

Last week the association set out to prosecute Borglum after he smashed supposedly valuable models of the Stone Mountain confederate memorial, on which he had been working eight years.

Warrants were issued for the arrest and Borglum was arrested in Greensboro, N. C., last Saturday night. Released on a writ of habeas corpus, the sculptor went to New York and enlisted powerful friends in his behalf.

Meanwhile the association had offered the job of completing the memorial to a few selected sculptors, but each in turn politely refused, declaring Borglum was the man who conceived the gigantic memorial to heroes of the Confederacy and that he was best fitted to finish it.

Governor Intervenes.

Finally, Governor Walker himself wrote the Stone mountain association suggesting the complaints against the sculptor be dropped.

The committee wired its attorneys in Greensboro to this effect.

Borglum, who arrived in Greensboro today with an array of legal talent, was elated at the news, reiterating the right of an artist to destroy his own work if he saw fit to do so. He said he would be willing to resume work on the memorial if "the south demanded it."

But the Stone Mountain Memorial association, after announcing it had dropped its case against the sculptor, issued a bitterly worded statement, saying it was "happily rid of Borglum," and under no circumstances would it employ him again.

Want Borglum Back.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy who were the first to see th epossibilities of turning the sheer side of Stone mountain into a perpetual monument—a carving of seven huge figures, including Gen. Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis and Stonewall Jackson and four lieutenant colonels, want Borglum to come back and finish the job he started about eight years ago.

It has become a question in the south whether the United Daughters of the Confederacy and Borg-

Rockefeller Gives A Large Sum to Negro Institutes

NEW YORK, March 7.—John D. Rockefeller, jr., has given $1,000,000 to the Hampton and the Tuskegee institutes for negroes.

Announcement of the Rockefeller gift, his third of $1,000,000 to Tuskegee in the last fifteen years, was sent to newspapers and press associations several days ago for release Monday.

The New York Evening Post, however, published the information this afternoon.

35 Hurt When Building Falls

WINSTON, Conn., March 7.—Thirty-five persons were injured, one probably fatally, in the collapse of a frame tabernacle in Mason street, Torrington, this afternoon.

Sixteen of the injured, who sustained fractures, are in Charlotte Hungerford hospital, Torrington.

Recovery of Leon Moore, whose back is badly injured and his legs broken, is regarded as doubtful.

The tabernacle was being erected by a corps of volunteer workers and was to be used for an evangelistic campaign to be conducted by Rev. Woods Anderson,, who is now in Painesville, O.

Ninety men were at work when the collapse occurred, and many of them were hurtled from the roof forty feet to the ground.

UNKNOWN MAN SHOOTS PEARSON

Roomer at 1246 Q Street Suffers Gunshot Wound In Hand.

Assailant Makes Escape But Victim Gets Number of Car.

L. L. Pearson, 1246 Q street, was shot through the hand at 1:30 Sunday morning by an unknown man who is said to have rapped on the window of Mrs. Joseph Hale, who lives in the same house. Pearson, after having been shot, secured the number on his assailant's car and police are attempting to find the man.

Mrs. Hale, hearing the tapping on the window, became frightened and called to Mrs. Pearson, who lives in the next room. Mr. Pearson was undressed, so Mrs. Pearson went out to the porch, finding the man standing at the west side of the house.

"What are you doing here?" she asked.

"What do you want to know for?" the man replied.

"This isn't any place for you at this time of night," said Mrs. Pearson.

"I'm going to get her," the man declared.

Mrs. Pearson declared that the man looked as if he were demented and she ran into the house.

Car Parked at Curb.

Mr. Pearson ran out and found the man getting into a Ford coupe which he had parked at the curb. He ran to the car and asked the intruder what he was doing. "What do you want to know for?" the man again asked.

Pearson replied by swinging at the man, striking him on the jaw.

"Get out of the way or I'll plug you," the man shouted.

He then reached in his coat pocket and pulled out a gun, shooting instantly. Only Pearson's act in throwing his hand across his body prevented probable fatal injury.

While the assailant was attempting to start his car Pearson bent down and secured the license number, calling it out to Mrs. Pearson, who was on the porch. The man finally got the car started and drove away to the west.

No Clue To Intruder.

Mrs. Hale could not give any clue as to who the intruder was.

"I haven't any enemies that I know of," she declared; "at least any that would want to shoot me."

The man was described as follows: 5 feet, 10 inches tall; weight, 135 or 140; age, 21 or 22; wearing a dark overcoat and a cap. Mrs. Pearson believes that she could identify him.

Ralph Andrews, 1500 Q street, who was passing by, heard the shot and called the police. Dr. W. H. Slattery attended Pearson. The wound is not serious.

Police were checking up to find the car number. No records were available of the 1925 numbers, but it was thought possible that some clue might be gained from the 1924 numbers, which are available.

Keith Evans, living at 1228 Q street heard the shot and rushing outside saw the man as he drove away from the place. He said he watched the car as it went west until it disappeared a block or so down the street.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Keyser, who live in an apartment on the second floor of the Pearson home were also awakened by the shot and the loud screams of Mrs. Pearson. They did not see the shooting.

Wild West Films Scored By Court

CHICAGO, March 7.—Wild west movies or other pictures where a character kills for personal revenge or some similar motive are immoral and subject to the censors' shears, a court decided today in a decision.

The decision was in the fight of movie producers against the municipal censorship act, and reverses an earlier decision by the lower courts restraining the censors from interfering with the showing of "bad man" thrillers.

Speaker Burke Believes House Can Speed Up Remaining Work By Putting In Longer Hours Each Day.

Canvass Shows That Only About Fifty Bills Are Left In Hands Of Standing Committees.

In pursuance of Speaker Burke's program for speeding up the work which remains to be done at this legislative session, the house of representatives will this week begin working longer hours each day and its standing committees will meet only as occasion requires, instead of on the schedule heretofore followed.

For the first time since the legislature convened in January, the house put in a full day Saturday, both morning and afternoon. Hitherto, it has been content to put in a half day each alternate Saturday and then adjourn over at noon until the following Monday at 2 p. m., giving members who live near Lincoln a chance to go home over Sunday. This time, the grind was kept up until 3:30 in the afternoon, and a motion was adopted to meet Monday morning at 9.

There is a long list of bills now on the house calendar, waiting to be taken up and disposed of in committee of the whole. A few important measures, including several dealing with motor vehicle license fees and highway legislation, will be added thereto early in the week. The gasoline tax bill is already on the general file. It will take a full week of solid work to wade through all the bills that are now posted.

Committees Have Few Bills.

Speaker Burke announced to the house Saturday afternoon that he did not think it would be necessary to appoint a sifting committee this year. He has made a canvass among the chairmen of standing committees and finds that only about fifty house bills still remain in their hands. Most of this number have been held at the request of the introducers, or because there are exact duplicates pending in the senate or already passed or killed by that chamber.

"Probably not more than five or six of all these bills will come before the house," said Speaker Burke. "If we buckle down and work every morning from 9 to 12 and every afternoon until 4 or 5 o'clock we can make good progress with the bills we now have on the calendar,

Fort Worth, Tex., led in increased postal receipts, which totalled $125,550, an increase of 14.70 per cent.

SECURITY PACT IS ENCOURAGED

PARIS, March 7—The open mindedness of both France and England, emphasized tonight in what slender information was officially published after the conversations of Premier Herriot and Austen Chamberlain, British secretary of state for foreign affairs, was interpreted in some quarters as encouraging for the security pact proposed by Germany.

Neither country, it was stated, has any definite plan for the security pact, a question that Great Britain feels should not be settled until the Geneva protocol has been disposed of.

The report that Herriot had said France was willing to evacuate the entire Rhineland as soon as an effective security pact was completed, coupled with London advices that the foreign office there had expressed a sharp modification of its attitude toward occupation in the same direction, bolstered the view that an Anglo-French-German pact was more than a possibility.

TO FRAME DEPOT PROGRAM MONDAY

Committee Of Civic Club Delegates Picked to Outline Plans.

May Formulate Policy Which Will Be Laid Before Burlington.

Representatives of six civic clubs and the chamber of commerce were delegated Saturday to formulate a definite program for the solution of the depot situation in Lincoln. They will meet at 11 a. m. Monday.

The joint committee is the result of a series of conferences held at the chamber the past week, following the return to Lincoln of representatives of the chamber of commerce from Chicago where they had a conference with Hale Holden, the president of the Burlington lines.

While in Chicago the committee was told to frame a definite policy, one on which all of the business interests of the city could agree, and it would be presented to the Burlington board of directors.

The members of the committee follow:

Chamber of commerce, John D. Bushnell, W. A. Selleck, and C. J. Guenzel.

Rotary club, F. E. Coatsworth, Adrian Newens, and Fred Q. Foster.

Kiwanis club, Dr. J. Stanley Welsh, Emory C. Hardy and E. A. Burnett.

Luther Burbank Celebrates His 76th Birthday

SANTA ROSA, Cal., March 7.—While school children throughout the country today observed the seventy-sixth birthday of Luther Burbank, the plant wizard talked about them and their dogs, two subjects close to his heart.

"You know, the longer I live, the more I'm impressed with dogs," Burbank said, pausing for a time in the midst of answering several hundred telegrams of congratulations from all over the world.

"A child is like a tender plant. It is very easily influenced for good or bad by chance savings or actions of elders, things which we might think were unnoticed.

"In this way, you see, in some respects dogs and children are very much alike, both lovable and both improved by mutual association."

WOMEN NEED NOT PAY POLL TAX

Nebraska House Defeats Proposal By Vote Of 44 to 24.

Two Feminine Members Advocate Measure During Discussion.

Though two women solons showed their belief in absolute equality of the sexes by speaking and voting Saturday afternoon to make women subject to poll tax, their masculine colleagues defeated that proposition when it came to a showdown. The adverse vote was 44 to 24.

The question was suddenly presented during consideration of S. F. 25, a bill to exempt disabled veterans of the world war and the Spanish-American war from paying poll tax. Mr. Dick ventured the suggestion that perhaps women ought to be included in the poll tax provisions, inasmuch as they now vote on the same basis as men.

A motion to strike out the word "male" in the bill, making it apply generally in both sexes, was offered by Mr. O'Gara. Immediately everybody turned to that part of the chamber where the three lady legislators situ in a group, wondering what they might have to say about it.

Miss Sarah Muir of Lancaster county seconded O'Gara's amendment and rose to voice her opinion concerning it.

"I see no reason why women should not pay poll tax," said Miss Muir. "The only objection I have

Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Association Yields To Public Opinion, But Asserts Will Not Re-Employ Borglum.

(United Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., March 7.—Following weeks of bitter wrangling, involving grand jury indictments charging larceny, the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial association yielded to public opinion today and dropped its suit against Gutzon Borglum, sculptor.

Last week the association set out to prosecute Borglum after he smashed supposedly valuable models of the Stone Mountain confederate memorial, on which he had been working eight years.

Warrants were issued for the arrest and Borglum was arrested in Greensboro, N. C., last Saturday night. Released on a writ of habeas corpus, the sculptor went to New York and enlisted powerful friends in his behalf.

Meanwhile the association had offered the job of completing the memorial to a few selected sculptors, but each in turn politely refused, declaring Borglum was the man who conceived the gigantic memorial to heroes of the Confederacy and that he was best fitted to finish it.

Governor Intervenes.

Finally, Governor Walker himself wrote the Stone mountain association suggesting the complaints against the sculptor be dropped.

The committee wired its attorneys in Greensboro to this effect.

Borglum, who arrived in Greensboro today with an array of legal talent, was elated at the news, reiterating the right of an artist to destroy his own work if he saw fit to do so. He said he would be willing to resume work on the memorial if "the south demanded it."

But the Stone Mountain Memorial association, after announcing it had dropped its case against the sculptor, issued a bitterly worded statement, saying it was "happily rid of Borglum," and under no circumstances would it employ him again.

Want Borglum Back.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy who were the first to see th epossibilities of turning the sheer side of Stone mountain into a perpetual monument—a carving of seven huge figures, including Gen. Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis and Stonewall Jackson and four lieutenant colonels, want Borglum to come back and finish the job he started about eight years ago.

It has become a question in the south whether the United Daughters of the Confederacy and Borg-

TEAPOT FIGHT OPENS MONDAY

Attorneys For Both Sides Prepare For "Battle to Finish" In Effort Of Government To Recover 3,000 Acres Of Oil Land.

(International News Service.)

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 7.—After months of preliminary skirmishing, attorneys for both sides in the famous Teapot Dome naval oil lease suit, wherein the government seeks to recover some 3,000 acres of oil land in Wyoming, were prepared tonight to "battle to a finish."

Hearing of the equity suit of the United States government against the Mammoth Oil Co., a Sinclair organization, will open here before Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy Monday morning "on its merits."

The suit was instituted a year ago in an effort to secure annulment of the lease granted Harry F. Sinclair by Former Secretary of the Interior A. B. Fall.

The government charged the lease was secured through bribery and collusion, and lawyers for the plaintiff hope to prove these charges through more than fifty witnesses who have been subpoenaed for the hearing.

MAYOR ENDORSES SHELTER DRIVE

Urges Citizens To Contribute To Humane Society's Building Fund.

Mayor Zehrung Saturday endorsed the campaign being made by the Lincoln Humane society for funds with which to build an animal shelter and hospital on the Sawyer-Snell tract southwest of the city.

The mayor's proclamation follows:

"There is at this time a campaign on to raise money to build a shelter and hospital for animals and with this movement I am in hearty accord. During the past two years I have been in rather close touch with the Humane society, through Mr. McClain, superintendent, and I know that this activity is being taken care of better than ever before; since I have been in the city hall.

"The ground for this proposed shelter was donated by Messrs. Sawyer and Snell, and if the money is raised, there will be erected a suitable building that will be a credit to the city. The present shelter is badly located and not adequate in any way for the work they are doing.

"The Lancaster County Humane Society is trying to raise $14,000 which is not a large sum for such an excellent purpose. It is their desire that a large number of people subscribe small amounts, rather than a few people, large amounts, for the reason that they wish all of the people in Lincoln to have a personal interest in this work.

"While many people in Lincoln are giving generously, there is no one who cannot afford to give 50 cents or $1 or even a smaller sum, and I urge it on the people of Lincoln to send to the treasurer of the Humane society, in the city hall, a contribution, no matter how small, to show that all of the people are in sympathy with this movement."

His talk was illustrated by one hundred slides. The check-up on the work done by the tribes during the month was then made

lum will prevail or whether the present Stone Mountain association will continue to dominate the work

Becomes "Free Man."

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 7.—Gutzon Borglum, Stone mountain confederate memorial sculptor, tonight was a free man after having been under $5,000 bonds since his arrest here last Saturday night on a Georgia warrant, charging a felony in connection with the alleged destruction of working models and designs of the memorial near Atlanta.

Borglum was relieved of the charges and of the bond in an order signed by Superior Court Judge M. Schenck, following a request from Governor Walker of Georgia, that the case be dropped and requisition papers, filed yesterday with Governor McLean of North Carolina, be withdrawn.

Plans In Doubt.

"My former friends in Georgia have kept me so constantly engaged in preparation for the defense of the recently pending warrants and extradition papers that I have had no time for consideration of future plans." Borglum declared in a statement here tonight.

"I had assumed that an extradition hearing would be held before Governor McLean and pending this hearing had made arrangements to occupy my time until the hearing, for which I was prepared I can readjust these arrangements, but I can make no prediction for the future."

The sculptor refused to indicate whether he considers a trip to Georgia at an early date, declaring that the above statement was all that he could say.

Protest against mixing women criminals with girls in the reformatory was voiced by Representative Sarah Muir.

Legal Question Raised.

Messrs Rodman and Byrum thought there would be no question of legality in transferring prisoners who had been sentenced to the penitentiary by the courts. It was suggested that they might be able to get writs of habeas corpus and secure their freedom if this were attempted.

Messrs. Gilmore, Johnston, Barbour, O'Gara and others spoke for the bill, contending that all the women could be accomodated and properly housed at York, while the penitentiary would thereby be enabled to receive a good many more male prisoners.

and those which will be coming over from the senate.

"I see no necessity for the appointment of a sifting committee. By staying on the job full time we can handle all the business in the regular house sessions. Then when we go home to our constituents no alibis will be needed to explain why certain measures got by and others did not."

It has always been customary for the house in the past to name a sifting commitee to take charge of the general file during the latter part of the session. The senate got along once or twice, however, without such a committee and may be able to do so again this time.

BUTLER TO KEEP CHIEF INFORMED

years now the World court project endorsed by both presidents, Harding and Coolidge.

The White house has never had a real spokesman on the committee, which has been dominated more or less, since the league fight by "irreconcilables" and those senators, who, while not "bitter enders" have nevertheless been in favor of American isolation from European affairs.

As a member of the committee, Butler will now be in a position to keep President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg accurately informed concerning what goes on behind the closed doors of the committee chamber.

Butler has gained the foreign relations committee in a shorter time than any other senator on record. It is the most sought after committee of the senate, and in order to make a place for him, Senator Wadsworth, republican of New York, resigned from it at the behest of the administration.

The only other republican addition to the committee today was Capper of Kansas, now in his second term.

The irreconcilables, however, added one member in the person of James A. Reed, democrat, of Missouri, who perhaps is the most irreconcilable of them all. Reed was a leader in the fight against the league and the Versailles treaty, and has long sought a place on the committee. The other addition to the committee was Harrison of Mississippi.

heard to their doing so comes from men, and not from women."

Mrs Clara Humphrey, representative from Hooker county, endorsed this sentiment. The third woman member, Mrs. Mabel Gillespie of Sarpy, remained silent. She did not vote either way, but her women colleagues were both counted with the "ayes" on a standing division.

Resents "Slur" on ex-Soldiers.

After this point has been settled, Miss Muir entered an objection to the "disgraceful language" of the bill, which added disabled ex-service men of the world war and the Spanish-American war to a list including "paupers, idiots and lunatics" that are already exempt by law from paying poll tax.

She first moved indefinite postponement of the bill on account of its wording, but later accepted a suggestion to have it laid over until an amendment could be drawn changing the phraseology. This was done by a vote of 44 to 15. When the bill is put into proper shape, it will be advanced to third reading.

The house put its O. K. stamp on the following bills and ordered them engrossed for final passage:

H. R. 417, to increase county judge's probate fees in estates valued at more than $100,000, from the present maximum of $100 to a scale ranging from $110 to $300.

H. R. 159, requiring common carriers and utility corporations obtaining stock or bond permits from the state railway commission to pay fees to the state treasurer, according to a specified schedule, and also the expenses incurred by the commission in making its investigations.

S. F. 2, making slight changes in fees to be charged and collected by district court clerks. (A motion to postpone the bill indefinitely was defeated by one vote.)

H. R. 283, changing the trapping season on fur-bearing animals so that it will begin January 1 and end April 1. It is now from November 15 to March 1

H. R. 330, authorizing county treasurer to turn over irrigation district tax receipts to the district treasurer, for payment of bonds and interest thereon.

STATE BANK AT AMES IS CLOSED

Business Dwindles and Stockholders Give Up Job In Dodge County Town.

The state department of trade and commerce has filed a petition in the district court of Dodge county asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Farmers State Bank of Ames, Nebraska.

The bank closed its doors several days ago, but according to Kirk Griggs, secretary of the trade and commerce department it is only a case of insufficient business in the bank's territory to justify its continued existence.

It is said that the bank's business gradually dwindled until the stockholders petitioned the state department for permission to close. An investigation proved that the petition was justifiable and the state department started proceedings toward the winding up of the bank's affairs.

The closing of the bank will result in no loss to the state guaranty fund as the capital stock and surplus are practically enough to cover all losses and the stockholders are assuming the remainder, Mr. Griggs said.

High-Priced Radio Outfit Junked By An Irate Owner

CHICAGO, March 7.—The high priced radio set which adorned the Evanston home of Walter Stringfellow today is in the junk heap.

A woman singing what purported to be an opera classic from a broadcasting station last night so exasperated Stringfellow's musical sensibilities that he got the family revolver and riddled the radio set.

Neighbors, who heard the singer's high notes, followed by shots, turned in a "murder call" and three carloads of police were rushed to the Stringfellow home.

They were radio fans, however, and after receiving explanations, wrung his hand and departed.

MAYOR ENDORSES SHELTER DRIVE

Urges Citizens To Contribute To Humane Society's Building Fund.

Mayor Zehrung Saturday endorsed the campaign being made by the Lincoln Humane society for funds with which to build an animal shelter and hospital on the Sawyer-Snell tract southwest of the city.

The mayor's proclamation follows:

"There is at this time a campaign on to raise money to build a shelter and hospital for animals and with this movement I am in hearty accord. During the past two years I have been in rather close touch with the Humane society, through Mr. McClain, superintendent, and I know that this activity is being taken care of better than ever before; since I have been in the city hall.

"The ground for this proposed shelter was donated by Messrs. Sawyer and Snell, and if the money is raised, there will be erected a suitable building that will be a credit to the city. The present shelter is badly located and not adequate in any way for the work they are doing.

"The Lancaster County Humane Society is trying to raise $14,000 which is not a large sum for such an excellent purpose. It is their desire that a large number of people subscribe small amounts, rather than a few people, large amounts, for the reason that they wish all of the people in Lincoln to have a personal interest in this work.

"While many people in Lincoln are giving generously, there is no one who cannot afford to give 50 cents or $1 or even a smaller sum, and I urge it on the people of Lincoln to send to the treasurer of the Humane society, in the city hall, a contribution, no matter how small, to show that all of the people are in sympathy with this movement."

Friendly Indians Pow-wow Is Held Saturday at Y. M.

The Friendly Indian tribes held their monthly pow-wow at Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock. These tribes are made up of boys between the ages of nine and twelve and each tribe represent a Sunday school class. The Saturday program was as follows:

At two o'clock an assembly was called in the red room where E. B. Robinson entertained the boys with Indian stories. J. E. Warrington gave a talk on missionary work among Indians of Arizona. His talk was illustrated by one hundred slides. The check-up on the work done by the tribes during the month was then made.

For the month of January the large Friendly banner was won by the Pawnee tribe of the First Methodist church. The banner for the month of February was awarded Saturday afternoon to Pawnee tribe and Kickapoos both being tied for points.

Following the pow-wow, the boys went to the gymnasium where competitive games were enjoyed, followed by a swim. There are at the present 100 friendly indians in the following tribes. Kickapoos, Temple Baptist church, leader Walter Kryger. Lightning, Grace Methodist, Paul Woodworth leader. Chipawas, First Christian, Shelden Hallet, leader. Wabanakis, of Westminister Presbyterian, Grant A. McEachen, leader. Pawnees of First Methodist. H. C. Barrett, leader. Dakotas of First Plymouth, Stephen Hieb, leader, First Christian Indians, B. C. Hendricks, leader. Blackfeet, First Plymouth, Stephen Taylor, leader.

lum will prevail or whether the present Stone Mountain association will continue to dominate the work.

Becomes "Free Man."

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 7.—Gutzon Borglum, Stone mountain confederate memorial sculptor, tonight was a free man after having been under $5,000 bonds since his arrest here last Saturday night on a Georgia warrant, charging a felony in connection with the alleged destructiton of working models and designs of the memorial near Atlanta.

Borglum was relieved of the charges and of the bond in an order signed by Superior Court Judge M. Schenck, following a request from Governor Walker of Georgia, that the case be dropped and requisition papers, filed yesterday with Governor McLean of North Carolina, be withdrawn.

Plans In Doubt.

"My former friends in Georgia have kept me so constantly engaged in preparation for the defense of the recently pending warrants and extradition papers that I have had no time for consideration of future plans." Borglum declared in a statement here tonight.

"I had assumed that an extradition hearing would be held before Governor McLean and pending this hearing had made arrangements to occupy my time until the hearing, for which I was prepared. I can readjust these arrangements, but I can make no prediction for the future."

The sculptor refused to indicate whether he considers a trip to Georgia at an early date, declaring that the above statement was all that he could say.

WOMEN MUST STAY AT PEN

she had a change of heart. She and the others are now willing to go to York, Munn asserted, if they are given separate quarters.

Protest against mixing women criminals with girls in the reformatory was voiced by Representative Sarah Muir.

Legal Question Raised.

Messrs. Rodman and Byrum thought there would be no question of legality in transferring prisoners who had been sentenced to the penitentiary by the courts. It was suggested that they might be able to get writs of habeas corpus and secure their freedom if this were attempted.

Messrs. Gilmore, Johnston, Barbour, O'Gara and others spoke for the bill, contending that all the women could be accomodated and properly housed at York, while the penitentiary would thereby be enabled to receive a good many more male prisoners.

Lincoln Auto Club Drive For Members Will Be April 7-9

The Lincoln Automobile club annual drive for membership will be held April 7, 8 and 9, under the leadership of Charles H. Roper, assisted by J. H. Markel and F. W. Putney.

Mr. Roper states that the club's work during the past year has been successful enough to warrant an increase in membership, and announces that campaigns to promote safety, such as brake testing, educational signs, road marking, and advertising movements will be continued, under the direction of President Athur Dobson.

and those which will be coming over from the senate.

"I see no necessity for the appointment of a sifting committee. By staying on the job full time we can handle all the business in the regular house sessions. Then when we go home to our constituents no alibis will be needed to explain why certain measures got by and others did not."

It has always been customary for the house in the past to name a sifting commitee to take charge of the general file during the latter part of the session. The senate got along once or twice, however, without such a committee and may be able to do so again this time.

BUTLER TO KEEP CHIEF INFORMED

years now the World court project endorsed by both presidents, Harding and Coolidge.

The white house has never had a real spokesman on the committee, which has been dominated more or less, since the league fight by "irreconcilables" and those senators, who, while not "bitter enders" have nevertheless been in favor of American isolation from European affairs.

As a member of the committee, Butler will now be in a position to keep President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg accurately informed concerning what goes on behind the closed doors of the committee chamber.

Butler has gained the foreign relations committee in a shorter time than any other senator on record. It is the most sought after committee of the senate, and in order to make a place for him, Senator Wadsworth, republican of New York, resigned from it at the behest of the administration.

The only other republican addition to the committee today was Capper of Kansas, now in his second term.

The irreconcilables, however, added one member in the person of James A. Reed, democrat, of Missouri, who perhaps is the most irreconcilable of them all. Reed was a leader in the fight against the league and the Versailles treaty, and has long sought a place on the committee. The other addition to the committee was Harrison of Mississippi.

WOMEN NEED NOT PAY POLL TAX

heard to their doing so comes from men, and not from women."

Mrs. Clara Humphrey, representative from Hooker county, endorsed this sentiment. The third woman member, Mrs. Mabel Gillespie of Sarpy, remained silent. She did not vote either way, but her women colleagues were both counted with the "ayes" on a standing division.

Resents "Slur" on ex-Soldiers.

After this point has been settled, Miss Muir entered an objection to the "disgraceful language" of the bill, which added disabled ex-service men of the world war and the Spanish-American war to a list including "paupers, idiots and lunatics" that are already exempt by law from paying poll tax.

She first moved indefinite postponement of the bill on account of its wording, but later accepted a suggestion to have it laid over until an amendment could be drawn changing the phraseologoy. This was done by a vote of 44 to 15. When the bill is put into proper shape, it will be advanced to third reading.

The house put its O. K. stamp on the following bills and ordered them engrossed for final passage:

H. R. 417, to increase county judge's probate fees in estates valued at more than $100,000, from the present maximum of $100 to a scale ranging from $110 to $300.

H. R. 159, requiring common carriers and utility corporations obtaining stock or bond permits from the state railway commission to pay fees to the state treasurer, according to a specified schedule, and also the expenses incurred by the commission in making its investigations.

S. F. 2, making slight changes in fees to be charged and collected by district court clerks. (A motion to postpone the bill indefinitely was defeated by one vote.)

H. R. 283, changing the trapping season on fur-bearing animals so that it will begin January 1 and end April 1. It is now from November 15 to March 1.

H. R. 330, authorizing county treasurer to turn over irrigation district tax receipts to the district treasurer, for payment of bonds and interest thereon.

Medal Awarded To Dr. E. C. Franklin

NEW YORK, March 7.—Dr. Edward Curtis Franklin, professor of organic chemistry in Leland Stanford university, California, has been awarded the Nichols medal by the New York section of the American Chemical society.

The medal, one of the distinguished honors conferred for achievement in chemical science, was bestowed "for the research published during the current year which in the opinion of the jury is most original and stimulative to further research."

Houghton Popular With Many U. S. Girls In London

LONDON, March 7.—Nearly 500 American girls, who are spending the social season in London, are casting beguiling looks in the direction of A. B. Houghton, ambassador to the court of St. James.

By a sweep of his pen, Ambassador Houghton will raise or crush the social ambitions of the lot of them.

The girls or their parents have applied for the privilege of being presented at court. About forty will be selected.

Presentation at court is getting to be a business. It brings thousands of dollars yearly to London modistes and London hotels. One hotel corporation has even undertaken to act as social sponsor for the American debutantes who hope to be presented at court.

Nebraska Club at Hot Springs Meets

The Nebraska state tourist club of Hot Springs, composed of former residents of the "Cornhusker State," held its final meeting of the 1925 season at the Hot Springs chamber of commerce Wednesday.

Among those participating in the program were: Mr. and Mrs. N. I. Owens, Norfolk; Mrs. Harriet B. Page, York; Lucinde D. Kyle, Omaha; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Greenslit, Surprise; Minnie Gilbert, Omaha; M. V. Powers, Grand Island; Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Lehr, Surprise, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Jenkins, Gothenburg.

STATE BANK AT AMES IS CLOSED

Business Dwindles and Stockholders Give Up Job In Dodge County Town.

The state department of trade and commerce has filed a petition in the district court of Dodge county asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Farmers State Bank of Ames, Nebraska.

The bank closed its doors several days ago, but according to Kirk Griggs, secretary of the trade and commerce department it is only a case of insufficient business in the bank's territory to justify its continued existence.

It is said that the bank's business gradually dwindled until the stockholders petitioned the state department for permission to close. An investigation proved that the petition was justifiable and the state department started proceedings toward the winding up of the bank's affairs.

The closing of the bank will result in no loss to the state guaranty fund as the capital stock and surplus are practically enough to cover all losses and the stockholders are assuming the remainder, Mr. Griggs said.

Folda For Receiver.

FREMONT, Neb. March 7.—The Farmers State bank of Ames closed its doors today and petition was filed by the attorney general in the district court to have the bank's affairs settled by a receiver. Emil Folda of Clarkson is asked for receiver. The bank has been in the hands of the board of trade and commerce. It has suffered a declining business for the past few years as Ames dwindled in size. A. D. Sink is president and Jerome Wostrel is cashier.

High-Priced Radio Outfit Junked By An Irate Owner

CHICAGO, March 7.—The high priced radio set which adorned the Evanston home of Walter Stringfellow today is in the junk heap.

A woman singing what purported to be an opera classic from a broadcasting station last night so exasperated Stringfellow's musical sensibilities that he got the family revolver and riddled the radio set.

Neighbors, who heard the singer's high notes, followed by shots, turned in a "murder call" and three carloads of police were rushed to the Stringfellow home.

They were radio fans, however, and after receiving explanations, wrung his hand and departed.

EARTH SHOCK FELT.

LONDON, March 7.—An earthquake shock was felt in the vicinity of Constantine in Algiers, but no damage was caused, said a dispatch received here today.

Ford Runs 57 Miles on Gallon of Gasoline.

A new automatic and self-regulating device has been invented by John A. Stransky, 329 Fourth St., Pukwana, South Dakota, with which automobiles have made from 35 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. It removes carbon and reduces spark plug trouble and overheating. It can be installed by any one in five minutes. Mr. Stransky wants distributors and is willing to send a sample at his own risk. Write him today.—Advertisement.

TRUE PROSPERITY

More than twenty billion dollars of the wealth of the United States belongs to thirty-eight million savings bank depositors, reports the American Banking Association in its figures for 1924. A suggestive headline for a discussion of the causes of this huge accumulation, recently printed, is "Real Prosperity of U. S. Shown in Saving Deposits."

Prosperity is a word that covers a multitude of conditions. There is much seeming prosperity which is not genuine. For instance a man living in a beautiful suburb has a salary of $15,000 a year or earnings which reach that total. He lives well. His wife is in society and entertains friends handsomely in their leased residence. STOCK MARKET HAS QUIET WEEK

Spectacular Price Movements Confined To Few High Priced Issues.

Wheat Market Breaks Friday Due To Reports From Other Countries.

NEW YORK, March 7.—For the most part, the stock market was in control of professional traders this week and spectacular price movements were confined to a small number of high priced stocks which are recognized as leaders in any important movements in the market In the short session today the usual end-of-the week adjustments accounted for the buying of some stocks and the selling of others at narrow price changes.

A flurry in the Wilson & Co. stocks and bonds was coused by reports that the company might emerge from receivership in the near future. Next week an important conference is to be held between representatives of the creditors of the company and the preferred stockholders at which it is expected that important adjustment will be made.

The preferred stock jumped 23 points to 60, but reacted to 43½ at the close, while the common was up 4 points and the bonds from 3 to 7 points.

This week was memorable for a number of important events, including the inauguration of President Coolidge, but from a stock market standpoint there was nothing of greater importance than the announcement of higher dividends and special dividend declarations by a number of important industrial companies, including the American Locomotive Co., and the American Steel Foundries.

The principal adverse comment on current trade conditions is the disappointing volume of forward orders received by some of the manufacturing concerns. Steel trade authorities claim a smaller influx of new orders and this will be either confirmed or shown to be false on Tuesday at noon when the United States steel corporation will publish its monthly statement of forward orders.

CURB MARKET.

A heavy break in radio company stocks was the feature of the week in the curb market. Some of the selling of radio stocks was said to be due to necessity of liquidation for prominent traders, but lack of demand was due a large measure to the coming of the warm weather, when sales of radio goods are in declineing volume. Dubiler Radio, which sold near 40 earlier in the year, declined to around 16 but recovered to 19 today. Oil stocks and public utility shares were steady during the week.

WHEAT AND COTTON.

Wheat regained about 3 cents a bushel after the heavy decline suffered on Friday, when May wheat tumbled 12 cents a bushel on the Chicago board of trade. The break was due to reports of heavy exportable surplus in Argentina and Canada and today's recovery indicated better export business of American grain, aided of course, by speculative short covering. Wheat broke heavily in the Liverpool market, but recovered near the close.

Despite the unsettled weather conditions, the cotton market displayed a strong tone today and prices advanced in the maximum of 15 points. Strength in Liverpool and better trade news contributed to the firmness in the local market.

Bank clearings for the week aggregated $9,598,557,000, an increase of 15 per cent over the same week last year.

Business failures this week aggregated 390 against 401 in the same week last year.

LAVOYE PLANS BITTER FIGHT

Little Wyoming Town Will Contest Decision Wiping It "Off Map."

LAVOYE, Wyo., March 7.—The 1,200 souls of this little oil town, that was figuratively wiped off the face of the earth by a Federal court decision, handed down in Cheyenne by Judge T. Blake Kennedy, were undisturbed tonight and prepared to continue their fight to save their homes and business enterprises from the encroachment of the great petroleum industry.

The land, on which the town site is located, was declared, in effect, to be the property of the Ohio Oil Co., through lease from the United States government. Judge Kennedy ordered that the town be vacated within sixty days or all the residents would be put in jail.

Lavoye is not an incorporated town, but is managed by a "committee of five" and the peace of the community is preserved by deputy sheriffs of Natrona county.

The residents received Judge Kennedy's decision with complete calm. A mass meeting was held today at which a large amount of money, was subscribed for continuing the fight against eviction.

Alfred H. Beach, counsel for the townsfolk, declared that an appeal would be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and if necessary to the Supreme court of the United States, where constitutional questions would be raised that, he believed would permit the Lavoye citizens to hold their possessions in the little mushroom town that has had spasmodic "boom" growth over a period of two years.

The property value of the town to the 1,200 residents is estimated at $500,000.

HARRIMAN WINS OVER EUROPEANS

New York Financier To Control Caucasus Manganese Deposits.

BERLIN, March 7.—Unless the soviet government renigs at the eleventh hour, William A. Harriman, New York financier, was won his battle with German and British interests for the output of the rich manganese deposits in the Caucasus, according to exclusive information obtained today.

The soviet government at Moscow has placed its informal "o. k." on a concession to Harriman of the entire output of the manganese fields. The contract calls for annual production over a period of twenty years, for 500,000 tons at $3 a ton for the first three years, and an annual minimum output of 800,000 tons in succeeding years.

The victory of the American magnate ends a long and dramatic competition with important interests, both in this country and in England, who have coveted the rich field.

Harriman guarantees the soviet a minimum return of $62,500,000 in royalties over a period of twenty years, of 500,000 tons at $3 a ton concession by the soviet is expected shortly.

TRUE PROSPERITY.

More than twenty billion dollars of the wealth of the United States belongs to thirty-eight million savings bank depositors, reports the American Banking Association in its figures for 1924. A suggestive headline for a discussion of the causes of this huge accumulation, recently printed, is "Real Prosperity of U. S. Shown in Saving Deposits."

Prosperity is a word that covers a multitude of conditions. There is much seeming prosperity which is not genuine. For instance, a man living in a beautiful suburb has a salary of $15,000 a year, or earnings which reach that total. He lives well. His wife is in society and entertains friends handsomely in their leased residence. There are two big automobiles, frequent theater parties, semi-annual vacations north and south, and all the social evidences of prosperity. But the man is not a saver. He spends all he makes on his living. Each January finds him just as independent on his monthly earnings as he was the January before.

That is not prosperity. It is waste of fine opportunity to become prosperous. A man living in the outskirts of the same town, who wears an overcoat four years and cannot afford to belong to a golf club or any club, whose wife gets along with one servant, but who owns his little home and saves $1,000 a year, and uses a cheap little car, is prosperous indeed compared with the gentleman who earns three times the amount he does, but who does not own a home or a business, and saves nothing.

As savings are a true index of the prosperity of a country, so they are of the prosperity of the individual. There is much seeming prosperity that is a hollow mockery when it is analyzed, but the prosperity founded on actual savings that bring to a man an income over and above his personal earnings is true success. Spending a large salary, living on a scale that uses up a man's entire income, is sham welfare, a false pretense, a fool's paradise that darkens into distress when ill-health or loss of employment comes along. Savings are to prosperity what reserve vitality is to health—the power which enables a man to overcome a bit of bad luck in business or an accidental physical infection.

BORAH ISSUES A WARNING TO THE G. O. P. REGULARS

Says They Will Regret Action Of Ousting Four Insurgent Members.

Forces Senate, With Aid Of Norris, To Delay Committees Approval.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senate republicans will live to greatly regret their action in ousting four of their members for desertion to the La Follette ranks during the presidential campaign last fall, Senator Borah, Idaho, republican, told the senate today.

Borah blocked the move of the majority leaders to get the senate's approval of the new republican committee roster, which sheared Senators La Follette and Ladd of their committee chairmanships and Brookhart and Frazier of their seniority rights. Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, forced consideration over until Monday.

The uprising of Borah and Norris was precipitated by the submission of the report by Senator Watson, Indiana, republican, assistant party leader, for senate ratification.

"At least three of the errants — Ladd, Brookhart and Frazier—are being 'robbed of their just privileges'" Borah and Norris said

"I would not feel badly if you had dropped me along with the others," Norris told Senator Watson.

The uprising within the ranks gave party leaders cause for alarm as it appeared that their ouster program may be defeated it democrats combine with rebellious republicans against the decision of the leaders.

Several Votes Loom.

At least a half dozen votes are expected from the republican side against the ouster proceedings.

In the face of this storm, the republican conference earlier in the day approved the committee lists which took away the chairmanships of La Follette on the manufacturers committee, and Ladd on the public lands committee.

"You will regret this course," Borah said. "It would be much better for the country, the party and the senate if these men are accepted as republicans. I think this action is not only unjust to the men themselves but also to the republican constituents of the states which elected them.

"I do not know where the line of party regularity can be drawn. Ninety per cent of the republicans now voting are sons and daughters of republican leaders of the past."

Watson defended the action of the conference, contending that the quartet was not entitled to the privilege of republicans inasmuch as they have combined in opposition to President Coolidge in the last campaign.

YOUTH INSISTS HE KILLED MAN

Son Of Woman Convicted In California Says He Fired the Fatal Shot.

Story Ignored By Prosecuting Attorney Who Will Insist On Penalty.

(International News Service.)

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—Fifteen year old "Sonny" Willis, who made a dramatic last minute confession of the "trunk' slaying of Dr. Benjamin B. Baldwin, former Nebraskan, as his mother, Mrs. Margaret B Willis, was about to be transported to San Quentin to serve a life sentence for the crime, is "lying like a gentleman," declared Chief Deputy District Attorney Burton F. Fitts tonight.

This pitying characterization of the lad's desperate attempt to save his mother from spending the rest walls in the state prison was coupled with the declaration that the district attorney's office places no credence whatsoever in "Sonny's" version of the Baldwin slaying.

The "confession" will be completely ignored by the authorities, Fitts said

While the boy anxiously awaited at his hotel the coming of police who apparently ignored his existence, the mother, in the county jail, ceased preparations for removal to San Quentin and her attorney Samuel Hahn, announced suing out of resoundingly named writs to bring "Sonny's" story before the court.

"I would have preferred the hangman's noose to this," Mrs. Willis sobbed in her jail cell tonight. "My boy—oh, my darling—is such a wonderful child.

"He hgad everything ahead of him, for he was to study law in my attorney's office. He began studying there several months ago. Now he has spoiled everything by his telling. I love him more than my life, but what can be done now?

Says Boy Told Truth.

"Sonny has told the truth. He did kill Dr Baldwin. Of course, he didn't know at the time he had killed him, as I told him the octor was only hurt an sent him away, while later I and my friend, Bert Webster, put the boy in a trunk and secreted it away.

"They say I killed the doctor for his $750 automobile. That's terrible. I always made more than $7,500 yearly in the real estate business .

"Oh! To think of all this. My life was wrecked and now my darling boy's, too.

"They have ruined us both.

"The governor of California certainly will hear Sonny and if he hears the story he will know it to be the whole truth."

Attorney Hahn was so impressed b ythe boy's story he offered to cause him to submit to the "lie tector," made famous during the regime of Chief of Police August Vollmer of Los Angeles of Los Angeles, to prove he is telling the truth. Lacking other means to stop Mrs. Willis' impending departure for prison in the custody of officers, Hahn said he would ask for a writ of corum nobis.

But District Attorney Keyes declared this writ, originating in old English common law practice and infrequently used now, is applicable only when the new evidence sought to be introduced was not available at the time of the trial. If Mrs. Willis knew that her son killed Dr. Baldwin at the time of her trial, as she now says she did, it should have been introduced at that time, Keyes maintained.

Push Excavation Work At "Lost City" of Giant Pueblos In West

ST. THOMAS, Nev., March 7.—What God did the prehistoric giant Pueblos of Nevada's lost city worship?

This question tonight was baffling scientists excavating the ruins of the ancient city of Pueblo Grande in the Muddy and Virgin river valleys near here.

Exploration of what are now believed will prove to be the greatest archaelogist ruins in the western hemisphere has been going on for months under the auspices of the Heye foundation, which is financing the efforts of a party of scientists, headed by M R. Harrington, director of the Museum of the American Indian, and widely known anthropologist, to solve the riddle of Pueblo Grande.

Huge adobe houses, some with as many as twenty rooms, have been unearthed by Harrington's workers, and in the circular court yards of these prehistoric structures have been found burial mounds filled with skeletons measuring over seven feet in height. Carved shell jewelry, feather robes and clay pottery of exquisite design have also been unearthed from the mounds.

Theories as to the worship of this giant race of an age gone by are hard to formulate, according to Harrington and his assistants.

Ceremonial fireplaces placed in the center of altar-like stages may indicate fire worship; keen edged sacrificial knives, however, may indicate that the old Pueblos sacrificed bodies to their deities. Whether this sacrifice involved human beings or animals has not been ascertained yet, according to Harrington.

High up in the sheet faced cliffs edging the buried city a salt cave recently discovered, is now being explored. Human and animal bones were found strewn on the floor in front of intricately carved altars of salt and sandstone Scattered about the bones were found huge, crudely-hewn hunting knives and an assortment of pottery.

The planning of the city itself, with its large buildings encircling a common center with a fire altar in this center would show that the prehistoric Pueblos were sun-worshippers—at least that they had a knowledge of astronomy.

PAT CROWE NOW IN NEWARK JAIL

Kidnaper of Edward Cudahy In Omaha In Hands of the Law.

Pat Crowe, the man who kidnaped Edward Cudahy in Omaha in 1900, is again in the hands of the law, according to a news story in the New York Times.

He has been arrested on complaint of the Roseville Citizen Publishing Co. of Newark, N. J. for failure to pay a $62 bill for having printed 3,000 copies of his life's career of crime written as a warning to the youth of the nation.

"All my troubles, I blame on drink," he said after his arrest. "I'll pay up everything."

Among Crowe's exploits over years of time that kept him in the public eye were the robbery of Carrie Weston in a notorious Chicago resort, for which he served a penitentiary term; train robberies in Missouri for which he served time and the kidnaping of the packer's son. He was acquitted for the kidnaping charge after he had given himself up seven years following the crime. After his arrest he became a widely known reformer and lecturer.

CONGRESS HELPS RURAL ECONOMICS

Passes Act Giving Ag College $60,000 Yearly For Extension Work.

Work in rural economics and home economics in the Nebraska agricultural college will benefit greatly by the recent passage of the Purnell bill by both houses of congress, according to Dean E. A. Burnett of the college. Ultimately $60,000 a year will be made available for such work in Nebraska, one of the most generous gifts made by the federal government to agricultural colleges in recent years. It will be equivalent to an endowment of a million dollars for this work. Twenty thousand dollars will become available for the year ending June 30, 1926, with increased of $10,000 each year until a total of $60,000 a year is reached. The bill does not provide for any dollar-matching on the part of the state, being an outright grant to each state.

Dean Burnett declares that the passage of the act will make possible a great extension of the studies now being made looking to the improvement of farming conditions. The Nebraska college has long had in mind extension of this work, but has been hampered in recent years by lack of funds.

The law provides that "the funds appropriated pursuant to this act shall be applied only to paying the necessary expenses of conducting investigations or making experiments bearing directly on the production, manufacture, preparation, use, distribution, and marketing of agricultural products, and including such scientific researches as have for their purpose the establishment and maintenance of a permanent and efficient agricultural industry, and such economic and sociological investigations as have for their purpose the development and improvement of the rural home and rural life and for printing and disseminating the results of said researches."

BORAH ISSUES A WARNING TO THE G. O. P. REGULARS

Says They Will Regret Action Of Ousting Four Insurgent Members.

Forces Senate, With Aid Of Norris, To Delay Committees Approval.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Senate republicans will live to greatly regret their action in ousting four of their members for desertion to the La Follette ranks during the presidential campaign last fall, Senator Borah, Idaho, republican, told the senate today.

Borah blocked the move of the majority leaders to get the senate's approval of the new republican committee roster, which sheared Senators La Follette and Ladd of their committee chairmanships and Brookhart and Frazier of their seniority rights. Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, forced consideration over until Monday.

The uprising of Borah and Norris was precipitated by the submission of the report by Senator Watson, Indiana, republican, assistant party leader, for senate ratification.

"At least three of the errants — Ladd, Brookhart and Frazier—are being 'robbed of their just privileges'" Borah and Norris said.

"I would not feel badly if you had dropped me along with the others," Norris told Senator Watson.

The uprising within the ranks gave party leaders cause for alarm as it appeared that their ouster program may be defeated it democrats combine with rebellious republicans against the decision of the leaders.

Several Votes Loom.

At least a half dozen votes are expected from the republican side against the ouster proceedings.

In the face of this storm, the republican conference earlier in the day approved the committee lists which took away the chairmanships of La Follette on the manufacturers committee, and Ladd on the public lands committee.

"You will regret this course," Borah said. "It would be much better for the country, the party and the senate if these men are accepted as republicans. I think this action is not only unjust to the men themselves but also to the republican constituents of the states which elected them.

"I do not know where the line of party regularity can be drawn. Ninety per cent of the republicans now voting are sons and daughters of republican leaders of the past."

Watson defended the action of the conference, contending that the quartet was not entitled to the privilege of republicans inasmuch as they have combined in opposition to President Coolidge in the last campaign.

YOUTH INSISTS HE KILLED MAN

Son Of Woman Convicted In California Says He Fired the Fatal Shot.

(International News Service.)

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—Fifteen year old "Sonny" Willis, who made a dramatic last minute confession of the "trunk' slaying of Dr. Benjamin B. Baldwin, former Nebraskan, as his mother, Mrs. Margaret B. Willis, was about to be transported to San Quentin to serve a life sentence for the crime, is "lying like a gentleman," declared Chief Deputy District Attorney Burton F. Fitts tonight.

This pitying characterization of the lad's desperate attempt to save his mother from spending the rest walls in the state prison was coupled with the declaration that the district attorney's office places no credence whatsoever in "Sonny's" version of the Baldwin slaying.

The "confession" will be completely ignored by the authorities, Fitts said.

While the boy anxiously awaited at his hotel the coming of police who apparently ignored his existence, the mother, in the county jail, ceased preparations for removal to San Quentin and her attorney Samuel Hahn, announced suing out of resoundingly named writs to bring "Sonny's" story before the court.

"I would have preferred the hangman's noose to this," Mrs. Willis sobbed in her jail cell tonight. "My boy—oh, my darling—is such a wonderful child.

"He hgad everything ahead of him, for he was to study law in my attorney's office. He began studying there several months ago. Now he has spoiled everything by his telling. I love him more than my life, but what can be done now?

Says Boy Told Truth.

"Sonny has told the truth. He did kill Dr. Baldwin. Of course, he didn't know at the time he had killed him, as I told him the octor was only hurt an sent him away, while later I and my friend, Bert Webster, put the boy in a trunk and secreted it away.

"They say I killed the doctor for his $750 automobile. That's terrible. I always made more than $7,500 yearly in the real estate business .

"Oh! To think of all this. My life was wrecked and now my darling boy's, too.

"They have ruined us both.

"The governor of California certainly will hear Sonny and if he hears the story he will know it to be the whole truth."

Attorney Hahn was so impressed b ythe boy's story he offered to cause him to submit to the "lie tector," made famous during the regime of Chief of Police August Vollmer of Los Angeles of Los Angeles, to prove he is telling the truth. Lacking other means to stop Mrs. Willis' impending departure for prison in the custody of officers, Hahn said he would ask for a writ of corum nobis.

But District Attorney Keyes declared this writ, originating in old English common law practice and infrequently used now, is applicable only when the new evidence sought to be introduced was not available at the time of the trial. If Mrs. Willis knew that her son killed Dr. Baldwin at the time of her trial, as she now says she did, it should have been introduced at that time, Keyes maintained.

Push Excavation Work At "Lost City" of Giant Pueblos In West

ST. THOMAS, Nev., March 7.—What God did the prehistoric giant Pueblos of Nevada's lost city worship?

This question tonight was baffling scientists excavating the ruins of the ancient city of Pueblo Grande in the Muddy and Virgin river valleys near here.

Exploration of what are now believed will prove to be the greatest archaelogist ruins in the western hemisphere has been going on for months under the auspices of the Heye foundation, which is financing the efforts of a party of scientists, headed by M. R. Harrington, director of the Museum of the American Indian, and widely known anthropologist, to solve the riddle of Pueblo Grande.

Huge adobe houses, some with as many as twenty rooms, have been unearthed by Harrington's workers, and in the circular court yards of these prehistoric structures have been found burial mounds filled with skeletons measuring over seven feet in height. Carved shell jewelry, feather robes and clay pottery of exquisite design have also been unearthed from the mounds.

Theories as to the worship of this giant race of an age gone by are hard to formulate, according to Harrington and his assistants.

Ceremonial fireplaces placed in the center of altar-like stages may indicate fire worship; keen edged sacrificial knives, however, may indicate that the old Pueblos sacrificed bodies to their deities. Whether this sacrifice involved human beings or animals has not been ascertained yet, according to Harrington.

High up in the sheet faced cliffs edging the buried city a salt cave recently discovered, is now being explored. Human and animal bones were found strewn on the floor in front of intricately carved altars of salt and sandstone. Scattered about the bones were found huge, crudely-hewn hunting knives and an assortment of pottery.

The planning of the city itself, with its large buildings encircling a common center with a fire altar in this center would show that the prehistoric Pueblos were sun-worshippers—at least that they had a knowledge of astronomy.

PAT CROWE NOW IN NEWARK JAIL

Kidnaper of Edward Cudahy In Omaha In Hands of the Law.

Pat Crowe, the man who kidnaped Edward Cudahy in Omaha in 1900, is again in the hands of the law, according to a news story in the New York Times.

He has been arrested on complaint of the Roseville Citizen Publishing Co. of Newark, N. J. for failure to pay a $62 bill for having printed 3,000 copies of his life's career of crime written as a warning to the youth of the nation.

"All my troubles, I blame on drink," he said after his arrest. "I'll pay up everything."

Among Crowe's exploits over years of time that kept him in the public eye were the robbery of Carrie Weston in a notorious Chicago resort, for which he served a penitentiary term; train robberies in Missouri for which he served time and the kidnaping of the packer's son. He was acquitted for the kidnaping charge after he had given himself up seven years following the crime. After his arrest he became a widely known reformer and lecturer.

COLLEGE VIEW NOTES

Prof. B. B. Davis has returned from Cincinnati, Ohio, where he attended a normal school convention.

Prof. G. F. Wolfkill and Prof. O. M. John have returned from Berrien Springs, Mich., where they were in attendance at a board meeting of the college at that place. Professor Wolfkill has been elected president and Professor John dean of the Michigan college.

Mrs. C. C. Rentfro, of Fargo, Ill. and Mrs. Harry Fapp, of Kansas City, Mo., are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Schee.

The supply of water north of College View having been found insufficient to supply the needs of the town, the officials have sunk wells south of town near Twenty-first and L streets, and report a good flow of water. These wells are now being connected up with the town mains.

Mr. Harris has moved the house at the corner of L and Tenth streets to the back of the lot and is planning to build a business block, 50 by 50 feet, facing L street. The new structure will be two stories high, with business rooms below and office rooms above.

Miss Leeta Wight, who has been ill for several weeks, is reported to be gradually improving.

The largest crowd that has attended a funeral in many years at College View was present at the funeral of Bernice Lyons in the Adventist church Thursday afternoon. Elder C. H. Miller officiated. He was assisted at the church and at the grave by Elder S. E. Wight. Interment was at the College View cemetery. Bernice Lyons had finished the local high school course at the first semester this winter and was preparing to enter upon the nurses' course at a hospital in Lincoln. Preparatory to her work in the hospital she submitted to vaccination and subsequently fell it. Her condition soon became alarming; she entered a coma from which she never awoke. The high school was dismissed for the funeral service and the pupils attended in a body. Six high school boys acted as pallbearers.

W. A. Forsythe expects to begin at once the construction of a business block at the corner of Eleventh and L streets, on the site of the old drug store building which was recently destroyed by fire. The building will be a brick structure one story high.

Mrs. D. D. Rees has returned from a trip to Redfield, S. D., where she visited her daughter, Virginia, who is teaching in the Plainview academy at that place.

E. A. Hankins and wife have returned from a trip to California. Mr. Hankins purchased property near Loma Linda and expects to move there next summer.

Prof. Max Hill, of Clinton, Mo., has been spending several days in College View visiting friends and attending to business affairs.

KEARNEY NORMAL

Excavations are being made in preparation for the erection of a new junior high school building in Kearney.

Prof. George H. Aller, director of the college glee clubs, took a trio and some soloists to Riverdale Thursday evening, March 5, to sing for the Sunday school convention which was being held there.

Gay McClaren, "the girl with the camera mind," presented "Father and Dad" in the auditorium Friday evening, March 6. The Little Symphony orchestra of Kansas City is to give a matinee and an evening performance Monday, March 9.

Miss Beatrice McVaney, Kearney college graduate who is teaching normal training at Wheatland, Wyo., has been chosen to give a series of lectures on social psychology in connection with a social improvement put on by the churches of Wheatland.

Class elections were held at class meetings Tuesday, March 3, at which the seniors elected Miss Hulda Jensen of Cushing, president; the juniors elected Harry R. Knott of Platte Center; the sophomores, Miss Alice Grantham of Kearney, and the freshmen, Mr. Glenn Johnstone of Loomis.

"Too Much Money," by Israel Zangwill has been chosen by the senior class as their class play.

CONGRESS HELPS RURAL ECONOMICS

Passes Act Giving Ag College $60,000 Yearly For Extension Work.

Work in rural economics and home economics in the Nebraska agricultural college will benefit greatly by the recent passage of the Purnell bill by both houses of congress, according to Dean E. A. Burnett of the college. Ultimately $60,000 a year will be made available for such work in Nebraska, one of the most generous gifts made by the federal government to agricultural colleges in recent years. It will be equivalent to an endowment of a million dollars for this work. Twenty thousand dollars will become available for the year ending June 30, 1926, with increased of $10,000 each year until a total of $60,000 a year is reached. The bill does not provide for any dollar-matching on the part of the state, being an outright grant to each state.

Dean Burnett declares that the passage of the act will make possible a great extension of the studies now being made looking to the improvement of farming conditions. The Nebraska college has long had in mind extension of this work, but has been hampered in recent years by lack of funds.

The law provides that "the funds appropriated pursuant to this act shall be applied only to paying the necessary expenses of conducting investigations or making experiments bearing directly on the production, manufacture, preparation, use, distribution, and marketing of agricultural products, and including such scientific researches as have for their purpose the establishment and maintenance of a permanent and efficient agricultural industry, and such economic and sociological investigations as have for their purpose the development and improvement of the rural home and rural life and for printing and disseminating the results of said researches."

DITCH TO DRAIN LARGE DISTRICT

Big Engineering Project Launched In Northeast Nebraska.

To Salvage Thousands Of Acres Now Subject to Overflow.

(Special to The Star.)

WAKEFIELD, Neb., March 7.—With the survey for the [illegible] drainage ditches in the Logan district near here completed and meetings of both boards of directors of the north and south Logan drainage districts being held here to hear and consider any objections by interested parties in the apportionment of benefits resulting from these drainage projects, work on [illegible] the greatest engineering feats and most beneficial improvements ever planned in northeast Nebraska will begin [illegible].

The extent and value of the project may be realized somewhat when it is learned that approximately [illegible] acres of land located in three counties will be benefited for productive purposes and enhanced in valuation. Portions of Wayne, Cedar and Dixon counties, now often flooded through the inability of Logan creek to drain this district properly, will be drained adequately and made one of the richest and most productive valleys in Nebraska, whereas previously farmers in these localities lost crops yearly, valued at thousands of dollars.

The North Logan ditch will begin in southeastern Cedar county and extend about thirteen miles across Dixon county in a southeasterly direction, draining over 7,000 acres of land.

The South Logan ditch will drain the district south of here, extending over five miles and affecting about 4,000 acres of land. The two ditches, which will follow the general direction of Logan creek, will require the construction of nine bridges. The estimated cost of the project is about $105,000.

OLD NEWSPAPER RARE CURIOSITY

Near Century Old and Tells Of Sac and Fox Indian Treaty.

(Special to The Star.)

CHADRON, Neb., March 7.—Hidden among papers of his mother, Jack Campbell of Chadron found a copy of a newspaper printed ninety-two years ago. Yellowed by age and brittle to the touch of modern hands, it remained untouched and undisturbed for more than four score of years.

The chief feature of the issue concerns the treaty consummated with the Sacs and Foxes, Indian tribes living east of the Missouri river. The treaty according to the paper ceded 500 miles of land north of the state of Missouri to the government.

In return the Indians were to receive $20,000 per year for thirty years. As additional payments for the land the Indians received 6,000 [illegible] of corn, fifty barrels of pork, fifty barrels of flour, thirty barrels of salt and thirty beeves. Bond was fixed at $4,000, which was furnished.

But two witnesses were examined. Jack Setzer, who was able to appear, although very weak, and the attending surgeon, Dr. C. H. Lutgen.

Setzer's memory at times was very weak and hazy and he seemed to be unable to remember much of the details happening at the time of the shooting aside from the fact that Mrs. Waters displayed the gun and upon his telling her to put it up she shot him.

Dr. Lutgen testified that from the appearance of the wound the shot was fired when the gun was within close proximity to Setzer's body. [illegible] nesses and no arguments were made.

The Straw and the Camel's Back

Gosh! folks are hard headed.

There's still an element of auto owners who claim it doesn't make much difference what gasoline or motor oil you use. One of them steps forth to prove his claim by saying on this order:

"I've driven this car six months; it's gone five thousand miles; it's still running like a sewing machine; I've never paid any attention to the kind of gas or oil I bought."

Quite so. Indeed most cars are built these days to take care of just such maltreatment as this. We'll hand it to the manufacturers; they've developed almost a super-machine in the present day automobile engine.

And yet—there's the story of the last straw that broke the camel's back. No manufacturer can build a machine that will continue to stand up under the wrong fuel and lubricant. Old Man Depreciation gets in his work eventually, and with vengeance.

But Coryell Oils and Gasoline, used constantly, stop depreciation before it sets in. So fine a piece of mechanism as the engine in your car—regardless of its make—deserves the best fuel and lubricant you can buy. And that's Coryell.

DITCH TO DRAIN LARGE DISTRICT

Big Engineering Project Launched In Northeast Nebraska.

(Special to The Star.)

WAKEFIELD, Neb., March 7.—With the survey for the big drainage ditches inthe Logan district near here completed and meetings of both boards of directors of the north and south Logan drainage districts being held here to hear and consider any objections by interested parties in the apportionment of benefits resulting from these drainage projects, work on one of the greatest engineering feats and most beneficial improvements ever planned in northeast Nebraska will begin about April 1.

The extent and value of the project may be realized somewhat when it is learned that approximately 12,000 acres of land, located in three counties, will be benefiteed for productive purposes and enhanced in valuation. Portions of Wayne, Cedar and Dixon counties, now often flooded through the inability of Logan creek to drain this district properly, will be drained adequately and made one of the richest and most productive valleys in Nebraska, whereas previously farmers in these localities lost crops yearly, valued at thousands of dollars.

The North Logan ditch will begin in southeastern Cedar county and extend about thirteen miles across Dixon county in a southeasterly direction, draining over 7,000 acres of land.

The South Logan ditch will drain the district south of here, extending over five miles and affecting about 4,000 acres of land. The two ditches, which will follow the general direction of Logan creek, will require the construction of nine bridges. The estimates cost of the project is about $205,000.

OLD NEWSPAPER RARE CURIOSITY

Near Century Old and Tells Of Sac and Fox Indian Treaty.

(Special to The Star.)

CHADRON, Neb., March 7.—Hidden among papers of his mother, Jack Campbell of Chadron found a copy of a newspaper printed ninety-two years ago. Yellowed by age and brittle to the touch of modern hands, it remained untouched and undisturbed for more than four score of years.

The chief feature of the issue concerns the treaty consummated with the Sacs and Foxes, Indian tribes living east of the Missouri river. The treaty ,according to the paper, ceded 500 miles of land north of the state of Missouri to the government.

In return the Indians were to receive $20,000 per year for thirty years. As additional payments for the land the Indians received 6,000 bushels of corn, fifty barrels of pork fifty barrels of flour, thirty barrels of salt and thirty beeves. According to the paper, this treaty was the end of the great "Black Hawk" wars, which caused no limit of hardship and suffering to the frontiersman of Illinois.

The issue found was entitled the "Galenian," published in Galena, Illinois territory. It bore the dateline Wednesday, September 26, 1832, and is printed in a firm deep black type which is still easily read.

The advertisements are most interesting and serve to remind one that ninety-two years ago is a long time in the past. For instance a grocer, located at St. Louis advertised that he "kept constantly on hand a liberal and well selected assortment of groceries, wines, liquors, iron, steel, nails, flour, salt, etc."

Other ads were chiefly of deserters from the army for whom rewards ranging from $15 to $45 were offered to "secure them in jail or anywhere they can be had." The largest reward of the time printed in the Galenian was offered by Daniel Bissell for the return of Lige, a runaway slave. The owner offered $125 for the delivery of Lige to his master at St. Louis. A merchant tailor advertised for two boys of "good morals," to be taken as apprentices.

Six girls of the class of '25 were elected this week to teach in the Chadron public schools next year. They are: Hollace Harris, Margaret Meer, Mary Reische, Grace Kelly, Reva Denslow, and Winifred Wilson.

SYLVIA WATERS IS BOUND OVER

Woman Charged With Shooting Former Husband Must Stand Trial.

(Special to The Star.)

AUBURN, Neb., March 7. — The preliminary hearing of Mrs. Sylvia Waters, charged with the shooting of her former husband, Jack Setzer, on the streets of Peru on the night of February 3, was held in the County court here today and as a result she was bound over to the Nemaha county District court on a charge of assault with intent to kill and also assault to do great bodily injury.

Bond was fixed at $4,000, which was furnished.

But two witnesses were examined, Jack Setzer, who was able to appear, although very weak, and the attending surgeon, Dr. C. H. Lutgen.

Setzer's memory at times was very weak and hazy and he seemed to be unable to remember much of the details happening at the time of the shooting aside from the fact that Mrs. Waters displayed the gun and upon his telling her to put it up she shot him.

Dr. Lutgen testified that from the appearance of the wound the shot was fired when the gun was within close proximity to Setzer's body.

The defense did not call any witnesses and no arguments were made.

CRETE NOTES

(Special to The Star.)

CRETE, Neb., March 7.—The local W. C. T. U. held an all day institute Friday at the home of Mrs. L. M. Andress. Leonard Chaloupka has bought the Lottie Hokuf bowling alley in Crete and will operate it from now on.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Mickle left this week for a visit to their son, Wallace Andrews, at Mill Valley, Calif. They will be gone a couple of months.

A. V. Mathews of Los Angeles, formerly a Crete man, disposed of his two Crete properties during the past week. One house was sold to Frank Eltze and the other to A. D. Marcott.

Westall, Belle Hayden, Ethan Dellett, Jacob Ellison, Ed Namen, Frances Sedlacek, Isma Cleveland, Edith Johnson, Ruth Knight, Ann Jelinek, Mary Kritges, Marie Plonzek, Dorothy Mair, Margaret Anderson, Leone Marek, Marjorie Farley, Avis Collett. Before moving to their present home near Lewiston, Mr. and Mrs. Story lived near Pawnee City for twenty years. They came to Pawnee county in 1880 and have lived continuously here since then.

The anniversary was the occasion of a large gathering at the Story home, with many neighbors and friends attending the reception held by the bride and groom of fifty years ago.

Tires in Plum Thicket — Four balloon tires and rims thought to be the property of Emery Ozenbaugh, 2119 R street, were recovered Saturday by W. E. No Recovery for Mental Anguish —Judge Mason Wheeler holds, in sustaining a demurrer brought by the Western Union Telegraph Co., in connection with a damage suit in which Martha Keeler is plaintiff, that the woman is not entitled to recover for mental anguish. She charged negligence and delay in delivering a death message. Judge Wheeler Saturday granted her twenty days in which to amend her petition, the case to be dismissed unless this is done. The message was sent from Lincoln to Delta, Colo., Nov. 5, 1924.

Rules for Tierney—The fact that the Lincoln Baseball association did not have actual rights in disposing of Stokes and Purdy, two players, is given as one reason by Judge Mason Wheeler for setting aside a $2,000 verdict against Albert R. Tearney, president of the Western league. A new trial should be given, the judge rules, in a written opinion, inasmuch as Tierney is not personally liable as charged under the alleged contract by which the two players were to have been transferred to another Western league team at the time the Lincoln ball park was sold. The contract was made verbally for a club, the judge holds, and was not in writing or entered into by Tierney as an individual. The verdict for the association was returned by a jury in Judge Wheeler's district court several weeks ago.

First Shipment Of Linoleum For Capitol Arrives

Nebraska's new capitol is to be equipped during the next few weeks with high grade Certain-teed linoleum covering the floors of the various offices. The first carload shipment of this material reached Lincoln on Saturday morning. State officers and representatives of the capitol commission who inspected it were pleased with the quality.

Additional shipments will arrive as they are needed, and as the work of laying the lineoleum proceeds. All offices having cement floors will be provided with the covering. Some of these are already occupied by departments and bureaus moved from the old capitol in December. They will be taken care of one room at a time, so as not to interfere too much with the office work.

Departments which still remain in the old building will not move until the Certain-teed lineoleum is laid in their new office quarters. It is expected that most of them will be able to make the transfer by April 1, or soon thereafter.

The governor's office, the supreme court room, and a few other rooms having hardwood floors will not be supplied with lineoleum.

RICKENBACKER FIRM GROWING

Three Year Old Company's Report Shows Healthy Condition.

Total Dividends of 13 Per Cent Paid, and Expansion Made.

[illegible] two and [illegible] times greater than [illegible] liabilities," the annual financial statement of Rickenbacker Motor company [illegible] sent to the [illegible] stockholders, indicates that this three-year old concern is in a most flourishing condition.

From its inception, Rickenbacker Motor company has been a phenomenon among automobile concerns.

Rickenbacker [illegible] went on a [illegible] earning basis within the first three months of its operation and [illegible] has paid its shareholders dividends aggregating 13 per cent.

When, on January 1, the board of directors decided to pass the regular 2 per cent dividend and retain the surplus in the treasury for expansion, competitors seized on the opportunity to spread propaganda to the effect that things were not so good with the dynamic young concern.

"I consider it the soundest and [illegible] thing we could do for our shareholders," says B. F. Everitt, president and general manager. "[illegible] pass, not only one but perhaps two or three dividend periods, and retain the money in the treasury for expansion. This would insure still larger dividends to our stockholders in the future.

"It is an unsound policy to 'rob the till' every little while in order to make a momentary showing in the way of dividends.

"The best interests of the stockholders are served when you run the business as you would run your own. Certainly no man who had financed a concern like this entirely with his own capital would think of robbing the till instead of keeping a safe surplus all the time and a still larger fund for expansion of the business.

"It takes a little courage, of course, to pass a dividend—and none at all to declare one.

"However, we feel we are custodians of this fund and we are acting accordingly."

"Rickenbacker financial statement shows a total assets of the company to be $9,160,336.52 as of January first 1925.

"Of this huge total the item of good will and 'patents' covers only $1,296,301.62; plants, $2,914,425.49; current assets, $2,512,377.89.

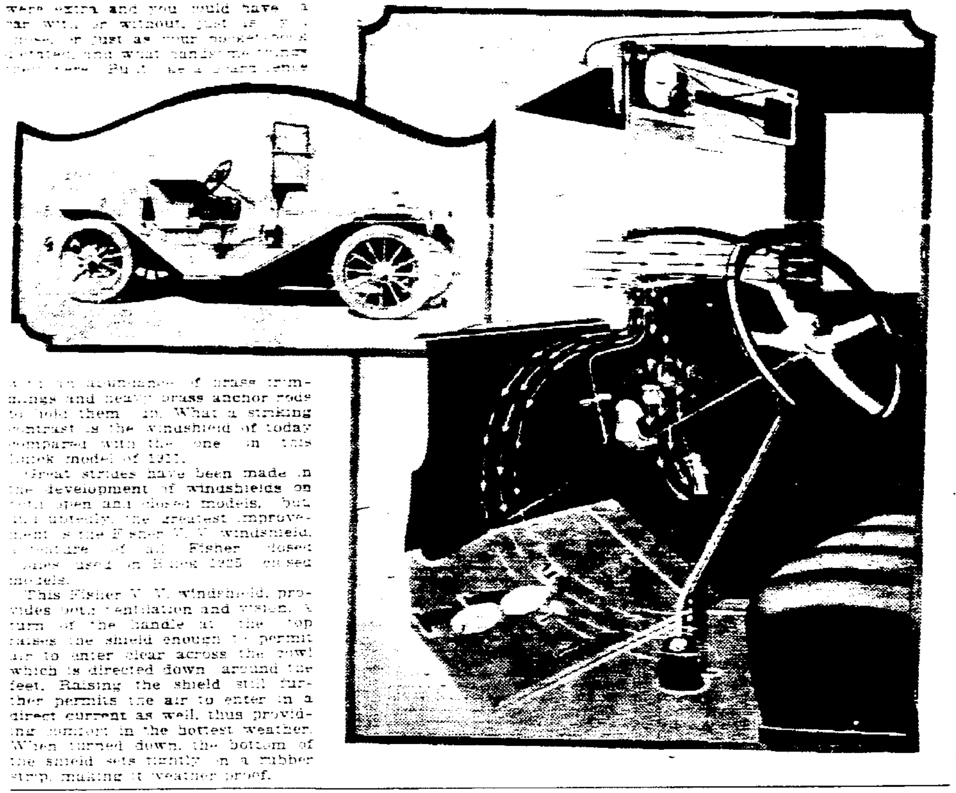
"Investment in other plants, an item which covers the recent acquisition of the Trippensee Closed Body Corporation, $1,529,592.52.

"A banker is looking over a financial statement, is interested only in the relation of quick assets to quick liabilities.

"What have you got, and how much do you owe," he asks.

"So the Rickenbacker statement which shows a ratio of about two and one half to one in these items indicates a wonderfully healthy condition."

Buick Windshield Highly Developed



In the early days windshields were extra and you could have a car with or without, just as you chose, or just as your pocketbook dictated, and what [illegible] Buick [illegible] with an abundance of brass trimmings and heavy brass anchor rods to hold them in. What a striking contrast is the windshield of today compared with the one on this Buick model of 1911.

Great strides have been made in the development of windshields on both open and closed models, but [illegible] undoubtedly the greatest improvement is the Fisher V. V. windshield, a feature of all Fisher closed bodies used on Buick 1925 closed models.

This Fisher V. V. windshield provides both ventilation and vision. A turn of the handle at the top raises the shield enough to permit air to enter clear across the cowl which is directed down around the feet. Raising the shield still further permits the air to enter in a direct current as well, thus providing comfort in the hottest weather. When turned down, the bottom of the shield sets tightly on a rubber strip, making it weather proof.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

A Wise Precaution.

[illegible] A white cloth on a hot [illegible] burn the fingers. Use of a cloth will also protect the glass from finger prints and in case it [illegible] the glass will not cut the fingers.

Preventing Rattles.

Sometimes a spare wheel is carried [illegible] attached to the body and if it is not kept tightened up will cause a most annoying rattle. Mudguards, hood fixtures, windshields, floorboards, etc., should all be kept tightened down to prevent rattling.

If the carburetor mixture is too rich, black smoke, smelling of raw gasoline, will usually be in evidence, issuing from the exhaust pipe. Be careful to distinguish this smoke from the excess of heavy blue smoke which is indicative of too much motor lubrication.

The All-Important Brakes.

Correct brake adjustment is the most important factor of a car. Both sets of brakes—the foot and the emergency—should be in such condition that they act smoothly and evenly at all times. Brakes that act harshly or unevenly are unpleasant to the passengers and bring undue strains on the mechanism of the car. Go over the rods, levers, and clevis pin connections with a few drops of cylinder oil on the equalizer bars, under the top support springs of the brake bands, and on the rear support pins. If the brakes do not hold, remove the rear wheel and examine the lining. It may be either saturated with oil or worn so badly that the rivets make contact with the brake drum. In the former case, wash the lining thoroughly with gasoline; in the [illegible] bands re-[illegible]

Keep the ignition on when using the engine and there will be no danger of explosions in the muffler when the throttle is reopened. After a car has been washed the brake bands may be wet and full of soap. Try them out before depending upon them for a quick stop.

Care of Balloon Tires.

A balloon tire may be entirely too soft or too hard if only eight pounds below or above the recommended pressure. Do not allow such a wide variation in pressure for balloon tires as in regular cords. To get the best results from balloons, it is important to keep this essential difference in mind.

When Selecting Second-Hand Car.

When buying a used car be sure it is not stolen property. It is always a good policy to make a note of the engine number, usually found stamped on the right side of the crank case, and the car number on a plate placed on the dash under the hood or the board, and take them to an auto insurance company for a verification of the name of owner of the car.

A battery which has been frozen is practically beyond repair.

Ignition breaker points must be set correctly. A clean flat surface is very important.

In the adjustment of a carburetor there are three major influencing factors—the mechanical adjustments, the properties of the fuel and the intake air heating devices. Any one will influence the others.

When using dusters to clean a car avoid those made of feathers, as they scratch the surface.

Never stop on the road to carry on a conversation with a friend. Invite him into the car and keep moving.

A clutch must be [illegible] three ways—slipping [illegible] [illegible]tion.

When the [illegible] floor boards it is an indication that the brake [illegible] bands.

Always [illegible] switch when leaving the car. This not only makes theft of the car more difficult but it prevents meddlers from turning on the switch and running down the battery.

RICKENBACKER FIRM GROWING

Three Year Old Company's Report Shows Healthy Condition.

Total Dividends of 19 Per Cent Paid, and Expansion Made.

Showing "quick assets" just about two and one-half times greater than "quick liabilities," the annual financial statement of Rickenback Motor Company recently sent to its 10,000 stockholders, indicates that this three-year old concern is in a fost flourishing condition.

From its inception, Rickenbacker Motor Company has been a phenomenon among automobile concerns.

Rarely can a group of men embark in any industry and hope to pay dividends in the first three years.

Rickenbacker Motor Company went on a profit earning basis within the first three months of production and so far has paid its shareholders dividends aggregating 19 per cent.

When, on January 1, the board of directors decided to pass the regular 2 per cent dividend and retain the surplus in the treasury for expansion, competitors seized on the opportunity to spread propaganda to the effect that things were not so good with the dynamic young concern.

"I consider it the soundest and fairest thing we could do by our shareholders," says B. F. "Of this huge total the item of good will' and 'patents' covers only $1,296,901.62; plants, $2,914,425.49; current assets, $2,513,377.89.

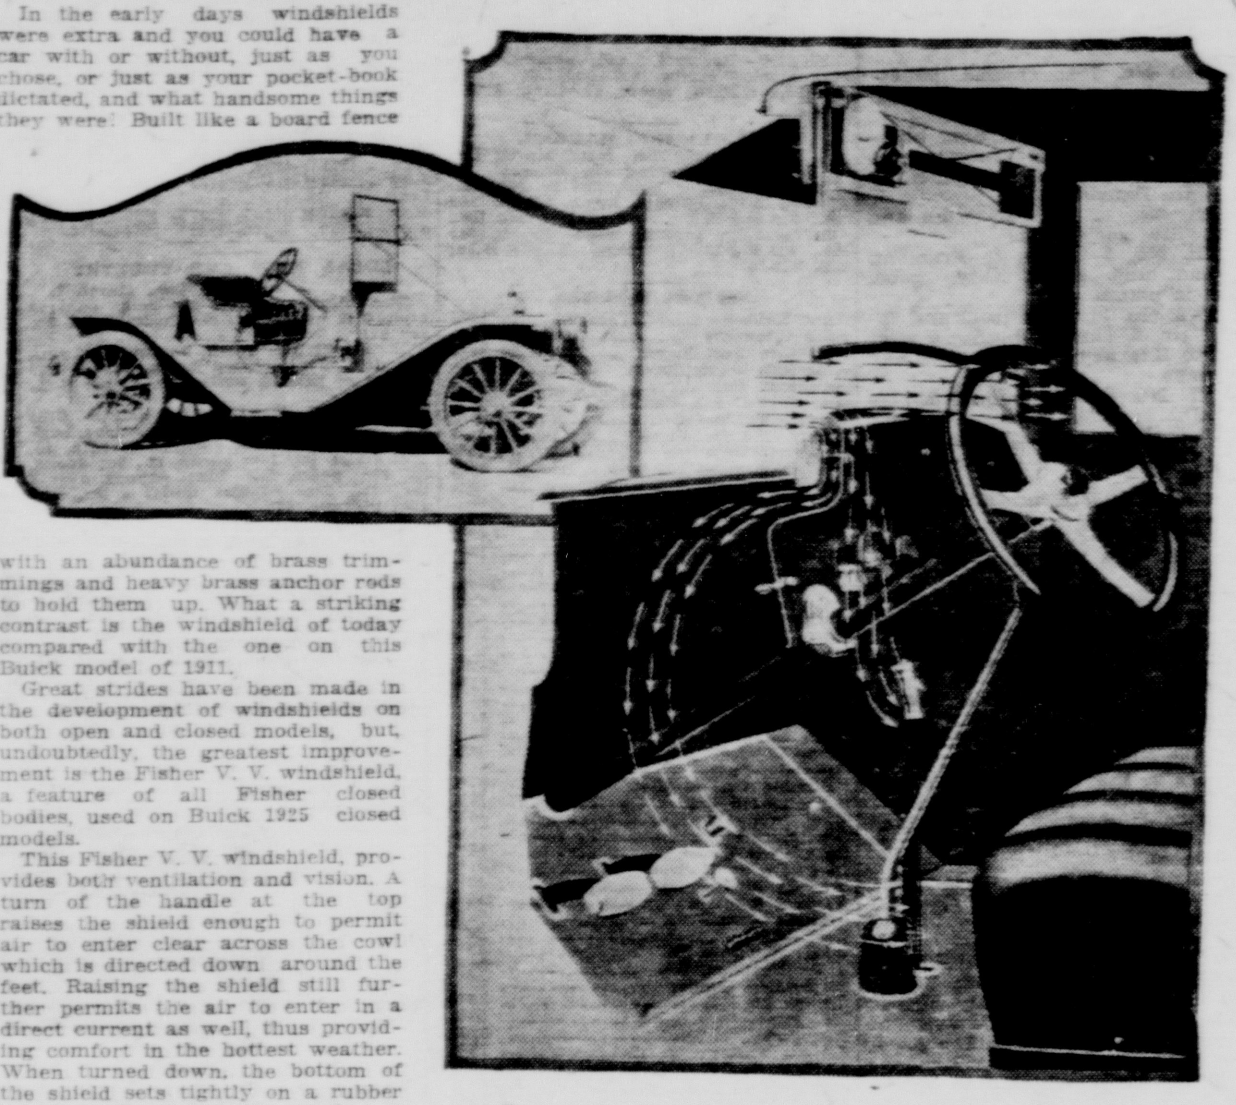
"So the Rickenbacker statement which shows a ratio of about two and one half to one in these items indicates a wonderfully healthy condition."

Buick Windshield Highly Developed

In the early days windshields were extra and you could have a car with or without, just as you chose, or just as your pocket-book dictated, and what handsome things they were! Built like a board fence with an abundance of brass trimmings and heavy brass anchor rods to hold them up. What a striking contrast is the windshield of today compared with the one on this Buick model of 1911.



Great strides have been made in the development of windshields on both open and closed models, but, undoubtedly, the greatest improvement is the Fisher V. V. windshield, a feature of all Fisher closed bodies, used on Buick 1925 closed models.

MOTORS AND THEIR CARE

New Windshield Wiper.

When the rubber on an old windshield wiper wears out it can be readily replaced by taking an old inner tube and cutting two strips exactly the same size as those removed from the wiper to fit clamps.

Importance of Tight Clamps.

Check up occasionally on the gasoline line from the tank to the carburetor and see that it is properly clamped down to the frame. Loose clamps will allow vibration to break the pipe and chafe holes in the line.

A Wise Precaution.

In removing a light globe use a black cloth. A white cloth on a hot globe will burn the fingers. Use of a cloth will also protect the globe from finger prints and in case it breaks the glass will not cut the fingers.

Preventing Rattles.

Sometimes a spare wheel is carried on a bracket attached to the body and if it is not kept tightened up will cause a most annoying rattle. Mudguards, hood fittings, windshields, floorboards, etc., should all be kept tightened down to prevent rattling.

If the carburetor mixture is too rich, black smoke, smelling of raw gasoline, will usually be in evidence, issuing from the exhaust pipe. Be careful to distinguish this smoke from the excess of heavy blue smoke which is indicative of too much motor lubrication.

If the brakes do not hold, remove the rear wheel and examine the lining. It may be either saturated with oil or worn so badly that the rivets make contact with the brake drum. In the former case, wash the lining thoroughly with gasoline; in the latter, have the brake bands relined. Except in emergencies, apply brakes gradually. Reduce speed by closing the throttle or taking the foot from the accelerator, allowing the engine to operate as a drag, then disengage the clutch and apply the brake. When descending steep hills, the brakes can be assisted by shifting into low, or if it is a moderate decline, into second, and allow the compression to act as a brake. Keep the ignition on when using the engine and there will be no danger of explosions in the muffler when the throttle is reopened. After a car has been washed the brake bands may be wet and full of soap. Try them out before depending upon them for a quick stop.

When buying a used car be sure it is not stolen property. It is always a good policy to make a note of the engine number, usually found stamped on the right side of the crank case, and the car number on a plate placed in the dash under the hood or toe board, and take them to an auto insurance company for a verification of the name of owner of the car.

A battery which has been frozen is practically beyond repair.

Ignition breaker points must be set correctly. A clean flat surface is very important.

In the adustment of a carburetor there are three major influencing factors—the mechanical adjustments, the properties of the fuel and the intake airheating devices. any one will influence the others.

When using dusters to clean a car avoid those made of feathers, as they scratch the surface.

Never stop on the road to carry on a conversation with a friend. Invite him into the car and keep moving.

A clutch may be easily ruined in three ways—slipping it, holding it disengaged when the engine is running, and neglect of its lubrication.

When the brake pedal strikes the floor boards it is an indication that the brake band linings are worn, necessitating readjustment of bands.

To make a good trouble lamp for use in the shop take an old headlight reflector and cut out the center large enough to accommodate a standard socket.

Always lock the ignition switch when leaving the car. This not only makes theft of the car more difficult, but it prevents meddlers from turning on the switch and running down the battery.

Coast to Coast, New York to Los Angeles—3106.5 miles in 71 hours 33 minutes—actual driving time—in a stock model Rickenbacker Six.

That's performance!

One car did it—not a relay of cars.

That's performance!

One man—Cannon Ball Baker—drove all the way.

That's performance!

Hours faster than the three fastest trans-continental railway trains.

That's performance!

Breaking, one after another, all inter-city road records as he sped across—

That's performance!

Did it, not in balmy summer weather, but in mid-winter when roads are worst;—

That's performance!

At one stage—through Kansas and Missouri—deep, half-frozen ruts in gumbo, (made mostly by smaller cars with smaller tires, while the Pickenbacker was equipped with big 32 x 5.77 balloons) made low and second gear work necessary for 75 miles!

Mile after mile, at 45 miles per hour in "second" with motor turning 4,000 revolutions per minute.

That's performance!

These things indicate a car of marvelous stamina; a motor of wonderful endurance and power; riding qualities superb—else no human being could have endured the ordeal—and finally lubricating and cooling systems that are perfection.

That's performance—all around sustained performance!

Drive this Rickenbacker Six yourself—it will be a revelation to you.

Rickenbacker
A · CAR · WORTHY · OF · ITS · NAME

Performance

Coast to Coast, New York to Los Angeles—3106.5 miles in 71 hours 33 minutes—actual driving time—in a stock model Rickenbacker Six.

That's performance!

One car did it—not a relay of cars.

That's performance!

One man—Cannon Ball Baker—drove all the way.

That's performance!

Hours faster than the three fastest trans-continental railway trains.

That's performance!

Breaking, one after another, all inter-city road records as he sped across—

That's performance!

Did it, not in balmy summer weather, but in mid-winter when roads are worst;—

That's performance!

At one stage—through Kansas and Missouri—deep, half-frozen ruts in gumbo, (made mostly by smaller cars with smaller tires, while the Rickenbacker was equipped with big 32 x 5.77 balloons) made low and second gear work necessary for 75 miles!

Mile after mile, at 45 miles per hour in "second" with motor turning 4,000 revolutions per minute.

That's performance!

These things indicate a car of marvelous stamina; a motor of wonderful endurance and power; riding qualities superb—else no human being could have endured the ordeal—and finally lubricating and cooling systems that are perfection.

That's performance—all around sustained performance!

Drive this Rickenbacker Six yourself—it will be a revelation to you.

Links of 1925 Promise to Be Flag Race Factor

CLARKE LINES UP REAL TEAM

Lincoln Manager Making Good On Pledge to Give Local Fans Improved Club For This Year's Flag Race.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

Signs are multiplying that the baseball aggregation which Manager Josh Clarke, field marshal for the Links, will enter in the 1925 Western league pennant chase will be a vastly different outfit from the misfit club which the late Howard Wakefield perpetrated on Lincoln fans, as well as the Tearney loop, at the start of last year's race. Manager Josh pledged himself to give Lincoln followers an improved ball club this season, perhaps a pennant contender, and the Lincoln pilot apparently is edging up to a delivery of the goods.

Acquisition of Shortstop Flaskamper, Pacific coast flash, last week, an announcement published exclusively in The Star, is a sure indication that the local pilot is getting somewhere in the direction of assembling a winning team. As matters stand at the present writing, the Links' infield is all set for the opening gong, dated for April 16 in St. Joseph.

Infield Ready for Gong.

Manager Clarke has shown no inclination to knock off on his hunt for talent, but the infield, even if no new pastimers come within the reach of his grabhook, apparently is ready for the bell. The present layout of infielders will plant either Sitts or Cartwright at the first sack, Flaskamper at short and Maderas at third. Frank Haley, shortstop purchased from Wichita a few weeks ago, presumably will be stationed at second, rounding out an aggregation for the inner works of the Lincoln machine which, at least on paper, will be immeasurably more potent than the local infield of last summer.

While the ability of Flaskamper is not open to argument, the class of Al Maderas, whom Manager Josh will nominate for the hot corner, seemingly has not been appreciated in the local camp. According to the dope, Maderas is a ball player of high quality—a hitter, fielder and base-runner who will add strength to the Links.

Gives O. K. to Maderas.

Buck Beltzer, former manager of Lincoln's Nebraska league team, toured the coast country late in the season of 1923 and inspected Maderas in action while the latter was playing third for the Oakland Coast leaguers.

"Maderas is a cracking good ball player," Beltzer said Saturday night. "I saw him in several games with the Oakland club and he impressed me as being the equal of any third-sacker on the double-A circuit of the Pacific country. Maderas should go great in the Western and be a running mate for Flaskamper.

"While on the coast, I also heard fine reports concerning Vargas, the new catcher acquired by Clarke from the San Francisco club. I didn't get to see him in action, but every baseball man who discussed Vargas in my presence said he was a rattling backstopper."

Garden Outlook Glowing.

Admitting that Manager Josh is sitting pretty with his infield, the garden prospects also are encouraging. Pid Purdy and Jim Sweeney, outfielders of proved class in the Western loop, are assured of Lincoln berths. Two additional outfielders hooked for service with the Links are Dwight Dorman, coast semi-pro, and Firpo Bernard, a Coast leaguer last summer. Dorman accepted Lincoln's terms late last season and subsequently tied up with the Vernon Coast leaguers, but was awarded to the Links by the national association. Manager Clarke is confident Dorman is a youngster of exceptional promise.

Worthy outfielders, however, will be easy to acquire when the major leagues start to cut the strings on their tryouts and in case neither Dorman nor Bernard shows the required class at the Joplin camp, Manager Josh figures it will be an easy matter to land a fly-chaser of ability to go the pace set by Purdy and Sweeney.

Dozen Pitchers In Sight.

A dozen or more pitchers are listed to show their goods at the Joplin camp beginning Sunday, March 15. Ray Gilder, one of the twirlers purchased from Shreveport of the Texas league, has sent in his signed contract and Craig, team pal of Gilder at Shreveport, also is expected to wheel into line. Signed contracts have been received at the local office by "See" Moon from Gilder and Art Rasmussen, pitchers; Purdy, outfielder; Joe Cartwright and Norman Sitts, first-sackers, and Dave Lamb, catcher.

Youngsters on the coast signed by Manager Clarke include Martiorneo and Cecil, pitchers; Gottlieber and Rathjean, infielders; Francis, Grace and Grippe, catchers, and Selig, outfielder.

Bescher Busted Rucker's Dream

Bob Bescher retired from baseball the other day, after several years in the minors. With his going there comes remembrance of how he nulled the lifetime ambition of Nap Rucker, which was to sling a no-hit game.

Cincinnati was playing Brooklyn at the time, with Bescher outfielding for the Reds and Rucker throwing his left-handed puzzlers in behalf of Brooklyn. Nap hadn't yielded a hit for eight innings. The ninth came, two Reds were retired in order—and still no hit. That brought Bescher to the plate.

Bob bounded a slow one toward second and then, running with all his famous speed, beat out the keystone guardian's throw by an eyelash—amid the hoots and jeers of the crowd that wanted Rucker to be credited with a no-hit performance.

Bill to Kill Sunday Ball In Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 7—That the bill to abolish Sunday baseball in Missouri has finally been taken in a serious vein was indicated today following action of the House committee in reporting favorably on the measure. A similar bill six years ago perished, but the Sunday ban is said to have a strong following over the state, with a supporting organization representing five years of effort.

Major league games in St. Louis would be affected if the bill passes

CONFERENCE MAT MEET IN LINCOLN

Valley Schools Enter Seven Complete Teams In The Annual Compet.

Ames and Aggies of Oklahoma Scheduled to Bid For First Honors.

The University of Nebraska will be host to Missouri Valley conference wrestlers this weekend, the Valley grapplers gathering at the university armory Friday and Saturday for the second annual conference wrestling meet.

Preliminary and semi-final matches will be held at the university armory Friday afternoon and evening. Championship matches will be staged at the armory Saturday afternoon, thus avoiding conflict with the Nebraska high school interscholastic basketball tournament.

Seven Complete Teams.

Seven Missouri Valley institutions have assured Nebraska authorities they will enter complete teams in the meet. Conference schools scheduled to compete for honors are Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa State college, Kansas Aggies and the Oklahoma Aggies.

Nebraska won the 1924 title, but is not favored to repeat this winter as the Cornhuskers' winning squad has been shot full of holes by ineligibility and injury. Ames and the Oklahoma Aggies are picked to fight it out for conference honors this year. The entry lists follow:

Indians Present Array of Hitters

The Cleveland Indians will gallop into the fray of 1925 possessed of eight sterling athletes who swatted beyond .300 in 1924. Hope that they'll repeat this year and that the pitching staff which faltered so badly in 1924 will redeem itself, creates the belief in Cleveland that the tribe has at least a fair chance to win the flag.

The swatsmiths of '24 were: Stephenson, .371; Jamieson, .358; Speaker, .344; Myatt, .342, Shaute .318; Joe Sewell, .316; Burns, .310; Uhle, .308

The Cotner Bulldogs have just closed one of the most successful basketball seasons in Cotner athletic history. The Bulldogs closed the season with five consecutive victories and landed in fourth place in the conference standings.

The Bethany five lost two close games to Peru, a pair to Nebraska Wesleyan and broke even with Wayne. Cotner was the only team in the conference to defeat the Wayne tossers. "Pid" Parminter, former Cotner college athlete, has coached the Bulldogs this season. The Cotner record:

Baseball Fans In Brooklyn Line Up Against Ebbets In Salary Dispute.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Charles H. Ebbets is 'in' again! The owner of the Dodgers simply cannot keep from involvement in an annual salary brawl, through the newspaper columns, with one or another of his stars. It has happened every mid-winter for years and yet more years, and, because it seemingly has become a habit with him, he'll perhaps keep right on doing it so long as he is part of executive balldom.

Most club owners strive to keep wage disputes secret. They reckon that it doesn't help the game. But it would seem that Ebbets figures it's a good publicity stunt to give the debate plenty of airing in the sport pages.

Public Favors Player.

This year, the jamboree is with Dazzy Vance, the most spectacular moundsman of a year agone. And, as was the case in other seasons, when Ebbets battled one or another of his athletes on the salary thing, public sentiment is overwhelmingly with the player.

Vance, the same Dazzy who started in the Nebraska State league, kept the Dodgers in the pennant fight all the way in 1924. His brilliant work made them potent factors almost until the last game was played. If it hadn't been

FIFTEENTH YEAR IN CAGE COMPET

State High Tourney Had Its Birth at State Uni. Back In 1911.

Only 21 Teams at Beginning; Number Jumped to 270 Last Year.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

This is the fifteenth year of the state basketball tournaments in Nebraska. Each season has brought an increased interest in the cage sport and through the cooperation of the Nebraska high school athletic board and the University of Nebraska athletic department, the interscholastic cage sport has been placed on a high plane.

Number of teams competing for the state titles has jumped from 21 teams in 1911 to more than 270 teams in 1924. This year Nebraska is trying out for the first time a district tournament elimination plan. Whether this policy is to be followed in the future probably will be decided at the next meeting of the high school athletic association.

First Tourney in 1911.

In 1911 the first high school basketball tournament was held in Lincoln. Twenty-one teams were enrolled in the event, Beatrice gaining the honor of winning the first tourney.

Omaha Central won the 1912 tournament, in which 25 teams were entered. The Omaha quintet won the title from South Omaha in the final game. University Place took the consolation tourney from Beatrice.

The tournament branched out a trifle in 1913. Two playing floors were used. Geneva won the championship by defeating Beatrice in the finals.

Lincoln Won in 1914.

Sixty-four teams were entered in the 1914 tournament, which was won by Lincoln. The Red and Black defeated Omaha Central in the finals. Crete won the consolation from Sutton.

Up to 1915 the teams were all entered in one class and often teams were required to play two or three games ach day. In 1915 the system of classifying the aggregations was introduced. Lincoln won the title from Omaha Central. Hebron won class B and Nebraska City took class C honors.

Omaha and Lincoln were crowded out of the finals in 1916. Eighty-five teams were entered and Beatrice won over Crete. Minden took class B and Humboldt won class C.

Over Hundred Mark.

Lincoln Wins Again.

LINCOLN CAGERS TROUNCE CRETE

Capital City Gives Saline County Team Its First Defeat of Season.

(Special to The Star.)

FREMONT, Neb., March 7.—Lincoln won over Crete tonight in the finals of class A, the feature game of the sixth district tournament, by 21 to 18.

Crete's banner was trailed in the dust for the first time this season by the Lincoln lads, whose strategy seemed to be to keep the tall Kersenbrock, towering star of the Cretes, effectively covered.

Fisher and Kahler together by much high jumping kept Kersenbrock from getting any easy passes into the goal nets and so rattled him that he missed all but two of his free throws.

The game was stiffly contested and amounted to a see-saw until the last few minutes. Crete led at the half 11 to 10. Midland gym was jammed with an enthusiastic crowd. During the last intermission, a representative of the Fremont Chamber of Commerce presented the cups to the six class winners. The score.

NEW RECORDS ON HUSKER CINDERS

Schulte's Track Squad Does Some Fast Traveling On Indoor Oval.

Lewis In Half-Mile and Weir In Low Hurdles Go At Speedy Clip.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

Three Memorial stadium indoor records were shattered in Coach Henry F. Schulte's University of Nebraska "tri-color" meet, varsity workout and general all-around track exhibition, staged on the stadium indoor cinder oval Saturday afternoon. A crowd of five hundred spectators crowded the side-lines to watch the Nebraska athletes strut their stuff.

Jimmy Lewis, Havelock boy recently elected 1926 cross country captain, caused the first record to fall when he raced the half-mile in 2 minutes 3-5 seconds. In winning the 880-yard run, Lewis avenged a former defeat at the hands of Roberts, first-year man from Minnesota, who lowered Lewis' old record to 2:02 1-5. Roberts finished second to Lewis in the Saturday race, Beckord and Houderscheldt trailing the yearling at the finish.

Weir Fast In Hurdle.

Paul Zimmerman, 1924 cross country captain, smashed the second record a few minutes later when he was clocked in 10 minutes 1-5 second for the two-mile run. Zimmerman was hard pushed by Lawson throughout the race, the pair lapping all the other contenders.

Ed Weir, Nebraska's all-American football tackle, turned in the third record-breaking performance of the afternoon when he cleared the 50-yard low hurdles in 5 9-10 seconds. A short while before Weir turned in his low mark, he equalled his former record of 6 seconds. Clearing the low hurdles in less than six seconds is travelling at a speed which will place in anybody's meet.

Crites Pulls Muscle.

The afternoon meet, however, was not without its gloomy side. In the varsity quarter-mile, Everett Crites, Central City boy who captains the track team, pulled a muscle at the first turn and pulled out of the race lame. He will probably be out of competition for a fortnight.

With Crites out of the running, Scherick, former Hastings college runner, won the 440-yard event in 53 1-10 seconds. Davenport and Reese followed him across the tape.

Locke Wins Short Dash.

Roland Locke's time of 5 4-10 seconds stood as the best mark for the 50-yard dash. Schulte sent the North Platte flash through four heats of the half century against various handicaps before the Lincoln county boy came through with the fast mark.

Wyant won one heat in 5 8-10 seconds, Aiken won another in 5 7-10 seconds, and Rumsey took a third in 5 8-10 seconds.

Wilmer Beerkle, former Omaha Central athlete, joined the track squad Saturday, the cage season having wound up Friday night. Beerkle won the 50-yard high hurdles from Reese in 6 9-10 seconds. Wyant, Newman Grove freshman, was clocked in 6 8-10.

Ross Captures Mile.

Ross won the varsity mile in 38 5-10. Hays, O. Johnson and McCartney finished in the order named.

"Bill" Fleming, former Lincoln high track captain, won the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 9½ inches. Popelar cleared 5 feet 8½ inches. Rhodes and Crocker went out at 5 feet 6½ inches.

"Big Ox" Kriemelmeyer led the shot-putters with a heave of 41 feet 3 inches. Stiner got 39 feet 1½ inches and Karr shoved the iron ball 36 feet 3 inches.

Frank Wirsig cleared the bar at 12 feet 1½ inches in the pole vault. Avard Mandery made 21 feet in the broad jump.

Mesa High Invited To Chicago Tourney

CHICAGO, March 7.—Mesa high school, Mesa, Ariz., is the first high school to officially receive an invitation to the seventh interscholastic basketball tournament held under the auspices of the University of Chicago, March 31, April 1, 2, 3, 4. This high school won the right to compete in the national meet by winning the Arizona state tournament. This is the third consecutive year Mesa has been champion of Arizona.

Ninety-six high school basketball teams won the right to journey to Lincoln as a result of reaching the finals in the district tournament competition. The plan is to stage play in six classes, placing sixteen teams in the class A championship flight.

Games on Three Courts.

Three playing floors will be used—the coliseum at the state fair grounds, the armory on the university campus and Lincoln Y. M. C. A. The floor at Whittier Junior high will be held in readiness in case of emergency. Games in classes A and B and a portion of class C will be played on the coliseum court, which will be placed in use for the first time this season.

The teams eligible to compete in the Lincoln tourney are:

Sport Briefs

The Pittsburgh Pirates will cover 15,279 miles this season. This is nearly 1,400 miles more than any other team in the National league will travel around the circuit.

The New York Giants have signed Johnny Evers, former manager of the Chicago Cubs and White Sox, as coach to fill the post vacated by the blacklisting of "Cozy" Dolan.

A large athletic field, with club house and gymnasium, has been built on the outskirts of Rome, for the advancement of physical development of Italian men, women and children.

More than a dozen European countries, the United States, and Argentina have qualified for competition in a 580 mile yacht race between Cowes and Plymouth, England, in August.

Lincoln Manager Making Good On Pledge to Give Local Fans Improved Club For This Year's Flag Race.

BY "CY" SHERMAN.

Signs are multiplying that the baseball aggregation which Manager Josh Clarke, field marshal for the Links, will enter in the 1925 Western league pennant chase will be a vastly different outfit from the misfit club which the late Howard Wakefield perpetrated on Lincoln fans, as well as the Tearney loop, at the start of last year's race. Manager Josh pledged himself to give Lincoln followers an improved ball club this season, perhaps a pennant contender, and the Lincoln pilot apparently is edging up to a delivery of the goods.

Acquisition of Shortstop Flaskamper, Pacific coast flash, last week, an announcement published exclusively in The Star, is a sure indication that the local pilot is getting somewhere in the direction of assembling a winning team. As matters stand at the present writing, the Links' infield is all set for the opening gong, dated for April 16 in St. Joseph.

Infield Ready for Gong.

Manager Clarke has shown no inclination to knock off on his hunt for talent, but the infield, even if no new pastimers come within the reach of his grabhook, apparently is ready for the bell. The present layout of infielders will plant either Sitts or Cartwright at the first sack, Flaskamper at short and Maderas at third. Frank Haley, shortstop purchased from Wichita a few weeks ago, presumably will be stationed at second, rounding out an aggregation for the inner works of the Lincoln machine which, at least on paper, will be immeasurably more potent than the local infield of last summer.

While the ability of Flaskamper is ont open to argument, the class of Al Maderas, whom Manager Josh will nominate for the hot corner, seemingly has not been appreciated in the local camp. According to the dope, Maderas is a ball player of high quality—a hitter, fielder and base-runner who will add strength to the Links.

Gives O. K. to Maderas.

Buck Beltzer, former manager of Lincoln's Nebraska league team, toured the coast country late in the season of 1923 and inspected Maderas in action while the latter was playing third for the Oakland Coast leaguers.

"Maderas is a cracking good ball player," Beltzer said Saturday night. "I saw him in several games with the Oakland club and he impressed me as being the equal of any third-sacker on the double-A circuit of the Pacific country. Maderas should go great in the Western and be a running mate for Flaskamper.

"While on the coast, I also heard fine reports concerning Vargas, the new catcher acquired by Clarke from the San Francisco club. I didn't get to see him in action, but every baseball man who discussed Vargas in my presence said he was a rattling backstopper."

Garden Outlook Glowing.

Admitting that Manager Josh is sitting pretty with his infield, the garden prospects also are encouraging. Pid Purdy and Jim Sweeney, outfielders of proved class in the Western loop, are assured of Lincoln berths. Two additional outfielders hooked for service with the Links are Dwight Dorman, coast semi-pro, and Firpo Bernard, a Coast leaguer last summer. Dorman accepted Lincoln's terms late last season and subsequently tied up with the Vernon Coast leaguers, but was awarded to the Links by the national association. Manager Clarke is confident Dorman is a youngster of exceptional promise.

Worthy outfielders, however, will be easy to acquire when the major leagues start to cut the strings on their tryouts and in case neither Dorman nor Bernard shows the required class at the Joplin camp, Manager Josh figures it will be an easy matter to land a fly-chaser of ability to go the pace set by Purdy and Sweeney.

Dozen Pitchers In Sight.

A dozen or more pitchers are listed to show their goods at the Joplin camp, beginning Sunday, March 15. Ray Gilder, one of the twirlers purchased from Shreveport of the Texas league, has sent in his signed contract and Craig, team pal of Gilder at Shreveport, also is expected to wheel into line. Signed contracts have been received at the local office by "Sec" Moon from Gilder and Art Rasmussen, pitchers; Purdy, outfielder; Joe Cartwright and Norman Sitts, first-sackers, and Dave Lamb, catcher.

Youngsters on the coast signed by Manager Clarke include Marticorneo and Cecil, pitchers; Gottleber and Rathjean, infielders; Francis, Grace and Grippe, catchers, and Selig, outfielder.

Bescher Busted Rucker's Dream

Bob Bescher retired from baseball the other day, after several years in the minors. With his going there comes remembrance of how he nulled the lifetime ambition of Nap Rucker, which was to sling a no-hit game.

Cincinnati was playing Brooklyn at the time, with Bescher outfielding for the Reds and Rucker throwing his left-handed puzzlers in behalf of Brooklyn. Nap hadn't yielded a hit for eight innings. The ninth came, two Reds were retired in order—and still no hit That brought Bescher to the plate.

Bob bounded a slow one toward second and then, running with all his famous speed, beat out the keystone guardian's throw by an eyelash—amid the hoots and jeers of the crowd that wanted Rucker to be credited with a no-hit performance.

Bill to Kill Sunday Ball In Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 7—That the bill to abolish Sunday baseball in Missouri has finally been taken in a serious vein was indicated today following action of the house committee in reporting favorably on the measure. A similar bill, six years ago, perished, but the Sunday ban is said to have a strong following over the state, with a supporting organization representing five years of effort.

Major league games in St. Louis would be affected if the bill passes

Ames and Aggies of Oklahoma Scheduled to Bid For First Honors.

The University of Nebraska will be host to Missouri Valley conference wrestlers this weekend, the Valley grapplers gathering at the university armory Friday and Saturday for the second annual conference wrestling meet.

Preliminary and semi-final matches will be held at the university armory Friday afternoon and evening. Championship matches will be staged at the armory Saturday afternoon, thus avoiding conflict with the Nebraska high school interscholastic basketball tournament.

Seven Missouri Valley institutions have assured Nebraska authorities they will enter complete teams in the meet. Conference schools scheduled to compete for honors are Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa State college, Kansas Aggies and the Oklahoma Aggies.

Nebraska won the 1924 title, but is not favored to repeat this winter as the Cornhuskers' winning squad has been shot full of holes by ineligibility and injury. Ames and the Oklahoma Aggies are picked to fight it out for conference honors this year. The entry lists follow:

Indians Present Array of Hitters

The Cleveland Indians will gallop into the fray of 1925 possessed of eight sterling athletes who swatted beyond .300 in 1924. Hope that they'll repeat this year and that the pitching staff which faltered so badly in 1924 will redeem itself, creates the belief in Cleveland that the tribe has at least a fair chance to win the flag.

The swatsmiths of '24 were: Stephenson, .371; Jamieson, .358; Speaker, .344; Myatt, .342; Shaute .318; Joe Sewell, .316; Burns, .310; Uhle, .308.

FANS SIDE WITH PITCHER VANCE

Baseball Fans In Brooklyn Line Up Against Ebbets In Salary Dispute.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Charles H. Ebbets is 'in" again! The owner of the Dodgers simply cannot keep from involvement in an annual salary brawl, through the newspaper columns, with one or another of his stars. It has happened every mid-winter for years and yet more years, and, because it seemingly has become a habit with him, he'll perhaps keep right on doing it so long as he is part of executive balldom.

Most club owners strive to keep wage disputes secret. They reckon that it doesn't help the game. But it would seem that Ebbets figures it's a good publicity stunt to give the debate plenty of airing in the sport pages.

Public Favors Player.

This year, the jamboree is with Dazzy Vance, the most spectacular moundsman of a year agone. And, as was the case in other seasons, when Ebbets battled one or another of his athletes on the salary thing, public sentiment is overwhelmingly with the player.

Vance, the same Dazzy who started in the Nebraska State league, kept the Dodgers in the pennant fight all the way in 1924. His brilliant work made them potent factors almost until the last game was played. If it hadn't been

Only 21 Teams at Beginning; Number Jumped to 270 Last Year.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

This is the fifteenth year of the state basketball tournaments in Nebraska. Each season has brought an increased interest in the cage sport and through the cooperation of the Nebraska high school athletic board and the University of Nebraska athletic department, the interscholastic cage sport has been placed on a high plane.

Number of teams competing for the state titles has jumped from 21 teams in 1911 to more than 270 teams in 1924. This year Nebraska is trying out for the first time a district tournament elimination plan. Whether this policy is to be followed in the future probably will be decided at the next meeting of the high school athletic association.

First Tourney in 1911.

In 1911 the first high school basketball tournament was held in Lincoln. Twenty-one teams were enrolled in the event, Beatrice gaining the honor of winning the first tourney.

Omaha Central won the 1912 tournament, in which 25 teams were entered. The Omaha quintet won the title from South Omaha in the final game. University Place took the consolation tourney from Beatrice.

The tournament branched out a trifle in 1913. Two playing floors were used. Geneva won the championship by defeating Beatrice in the finals.

Lincoln Won in 1914.

Sixty-four teams were entered in the 1914 tournament, which was won by Lincoln. The Red and Black defeated Omaha Central in the finals. Crete won the consolation from Sutton.

Up to 1915 the teams were all entered in one class and often teams were required to play two or three games ach day. In 1915 the system of classifying the aggregations was introduced. Lincoln won the title from Omaha Central. Hebron won class B and Nebraska City took class C honors.

Omaha and Lincoln were crowded out of the finals in 1916. Eighty-five teams were entered and Beatrice won over Crete. Minden took class B and Humboldt won class C.

Over Hundred Mark.

Lincoln Wins Again.

LINCOLN CAGERS TROUNCE CRETE

Capital City Gives Saline County Team Its First Defeat of Season.

(Special to The Star.)

FREMONT, Neb., March 7.—Lincoln won over Crete tonight in the finals of class A, the feature game of the sixth district tournament, by 21 to 18.

Crete's banner was trailed in the dust for the first time this season by the Lincoln lads, whose strategy seemed to be to keep the tall Kersenbrock, towering star of the Cretes, effectively covered.

Fisher and Kahler together by much high jumping kept Kersenbrock from getting any easy passes into the goal nets and so rattled him that he missed all but two of his free throws.

The game was stiffly contested and amounted to a see-saw until the last few minutes. Crete led at the half, 11 to 10. Midland gym was jammed with an enthusastic crowd. During the last intermission, a representative of the Fremont Chamber of Commerce presented the cups to the six class winners. The score.

NEW RECORDS ON HUSKER CINDERS

Schulte's Track Squad Does Some Fast Traveling On Indoor Oval.

Lewis In Half-Mile and Weir In Low Hurdles Go At Speedy Clip.

BY GREGG McBRIDE.

Three Memorial stadium indoor records were shattered in Coach Henry F. Schulte's University of Nebraska "tri-color" meet, varsity workout and general all-around track exhibition, staged on the stadium indoor cinder oval Saturday afternoon. A crowd of five hundred spectators crowded the side-lines to watch the Nebraska athletes strut their stuff.

Jimmy Lewis, Havelock boy recently elected 1926 cross country captain, caused the first record to fall when he raced the half-mile in 2 minutes 3-5 seconds. In winning the 880-yard run, Lewis avenged a former defeat at the hands of Roberts, first-year man from Minnesota, who lowered Lewis' old record to 2:02 1-5. Roberts finished second to Lewis in the Saturday race, Beckord and Houderscheldt trailing the yearling at the finish.

Weir Fast In Hurdle.

Paul Zimmerman, 1924 cross country captain, smashed the second record a few minutes later when he was clocked in 10 minutes 1-5 second for the two-mile run. Zimmerman was hard pushed by Lawson throughout the race, the pair lapping all the other contenders.

Ed Weir, Nebraska's all-American football tackle, turned in the third record-breaking performance of the afternoon when he cleared the 50-yard low hurdles in 5 9-10 seconds. A short while before Weir turned in his low mark, he equalled his former record of 6 seconds. Clearing the low hurdles in less than six seconds is travelling at a speed which will place in anybody's meet.

Crites Pulls Muscle.

The afternoon meet, however, was not without its gloomy side. In the varsity quarter-mile, Everett Crites, Central City boy who captains the track team, pulled a muscle at the first turn and pulled out of the race lame. He will probably be out of competition for a fortnight.

With Crites out of the running, Scherick, former Hastings college runner, won the 440-yard event in 52 4-10 seconds. Davenport and Reese followed him across the tape.

Locke Wins Short Dash.

Roland Locke's time of 5 4-10 seconds stood as the best mark for the 50-yard dash. Schulte sent the North Platte flash through four heats of the half century against various handicaps before the Lincoln county boy came through with the fast mark.

Wyant won one heat in 5 8-10 seconds, Aiken won another in 5 7-10 seconds, and Rumsey took a third in 5 8-10 seconds.

Wilmer Beerkle, former Omaha Central athlete, joined the track squad Saturday, the cage season having wound up Friday night. Beerkle won the 50-yard high hurdles from Reese in 6 9-10 seconds. Wyant, Newman Grove freshman, was clocked in 6 8-10.

Ross Captures Mile.

Ross won the varsity mile in 38 5-10. Hays, O. Johnson and McCartney finished in the order named.

"Bill" Fleming, former Lincoln high track captain, won the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 9½ inches. Popelar cleared 5 feet 8½ inches. Rhodes and Crocker went out at 5 feet 6½ inches.

"Big Ox" Kriemelmeyer led the shot-putters with a heav of 41 feet 3 inches. Stiner got 39 feet 1½ inches and Karr shoved the iron ball 36 feet 3 inches.

Frank Wirsig cleared the bar at 12 feet 1½ inches in the pole vault. Avard Mandery made 21 feet in the broad jump.

Mesa High Invited To Chicago Tourney

CHICAGO, March 7.—Mesa high school, Mesa, Ariz., is the first high school to officially receive an invitation to the seventh interscholastic basketball tournament held under the auspices of the University of Chicago, March 31, April 1, 2, 3, 4. This high school won the right to compete in the national meet by winning the Arizona state tournament. This is the third consecutive year Mesa has been champion of Arizona.

Sport Briefs

The Pittsburgh Pirates will cover 15,279 miles this season. This is nearly 1,400 miles more than any other team in the National league will travel around the circuit.

The New York Giants have signed Johnny Evers, former manager of the Chicago Cubs and White Sox, as coach to fill the post vacated by the blacklisting of "Cozy" Dolan.

A large athletic field, with club house and gymnasium, has been built on the outskirts of Rome, for the advancement of physical development of Italian men, women and children.

More than a dozen European countries, the United Staes, and Argentina have qualified for competition in a 580 mile yacht race between Cowes and Plymouth, England, in August.

LOS ANGELES, March 7 — Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, tonight accepted the challenge of Harry Wills filed by the negro pugilist with the New York boxing commission. Through his manager, Jack Kearns, Dempsey said

"I am ready to meet Wills at any time and any place"

Dempsey also said he was ready to meet Tommy Gibbons St Paul [illegible] Gibbons [illegible] challenge which was filed with the New York commission a week before that of Wills

Demands Cash Deposit

The only thing that Dempsey asks of the New York commission is that they guarantee him the financial cash deposit customary in such cases and with it the absolute assurance of the commission's ability to carry out the match

Kearns also declared tonight that he had received many attractive offers for Dempsey to box in California next summer. However he said nothing definite has yet been done and up to now Jack has not signed any articles

No Word From Champion

NEW YORK March 7—The New York state athletic commission tonight was without any direct word from Jack Dempsey heavyweight champion or his manager Jack Kearns in answer to the commission's invitation accepting the challenge of Harry Wills for a title bout

Dispatches from Los Angeles however quoted Kearns as declaring the commission could not pick Dempsey's opponents unless it also was prepared to promote the bout

Members of the commission took no official notice of these dispatches and indicated they would reserve comment and action until the meeting of the body Tuesday

Under the rules and precedents boxers who refuse to accept challenges filed with the commission as in the Wills case are suspended and denied the privilege of boxing in New York state

Sends Wire to Commission

LOS ANGELES March 7—Declaring that Jack Dempsey is ready to meet either Gibbons or Wills at any time Jack Kearns the heavyweight champion's manager replied tonight to the New York boxing commission which gave Dempsey 24 hours to answer Wills challenge accepting Wills defi

Kearns declared in his telegram to the commission that three years ago Dempsey accepted a challenge filed with the commission by Wills and articles were signed and that Chairman William Muldoon at the time forbid holding the bout. Kearns said Muldoon was still a member of the commission and that there was nothing to indicate the same steps would not be taken at this time to prevent a Wills Dempsey match

Dempsey had no intention of appearing discourteous Kearns said and would formally accept Wills challenge

Waives None of His Rights

Dempsey stands ready to meet Gibbons or Wills or both of these men or any other man in the world any place in the world under conditions in which he has the recognized rights and prerogatives of a champion

He declines however to concede to the New York state athletic commission any authority in dictating his matches or any authority beyond any other boxing government

For instance Dempsey is a citizen of the state of California a heavy property holder and a tax payer here. This state has legalized boxing and has a most competent boxing commission of its own and he respectfully asks in what manner has the New York commission any more authority than the California commission or the commission of any other state in which boxing is legalized

NEBASKA LOSES WRESTLING MEET

Victory to Evanston Team By Point Margin Of 10 to 4.

Northwestern university won a rather tiresome wrestling meet from the University of Nebraska on the armory mats Saturday night 10 to 4. The wrestlers seemingly reluctant to risk their fate on any thing in the way of aggressive holds confined their efforts to battling for decisions with the result that every bout was awarded on time advantage

Captain Skinner and Mincer of Nebraska witnessed the meet from the side lines both the victim of injuries received in the dual meet with the University of Minnesota last week

Two Nebraskans Win

R E Blore in the 115 pound division and G R Highley light heavyweight turned in the only decisions won by Nebraska wrestlers

The heavyweight match between Molzen of Nebraska and Lowry of Northwestern furnished the excitement of the evening. The pair made up in strength what they lacked in science and started off with a rush. Molzen forced the pace the first nine minutes but finally was worn down by the Evanston grappler who dropped behind Molzen and stayed behind until the last few seconds when Molzen wriggled free too late to bid for an extra period contest

'ACE' PULLS FOR BENJAMIN FIGHT

Nebraska Youngster Anxious To Get In Ring With Coast Champion.

Willing to Donate Services If Unable to Whip Title-Holder.

LOS ANGELES March —Ace Hudkins Nebraska lightweight champion before entering the ring here tonight to box four rounds with Frankie Fink of Denver in an [illegible] Jack Dempsey Mickey Walker and other champions took part declared he was so anxious to meet Joe Benjamin California star he would box for nothing if he did not defeat Benjamin

Doyle said there was great demand among fans for the Hudkins Benjamin fight

Put Dodgers In Race

It has been estimated that the difference between a second division Dodger team and a pennant contender in 1924 was at least 300 000 cash customers. Vance made the Dodgers flag battlers. Therefore it cannot positively be denied that he was the medium that lured those 300 000 added patrons through the turnstiles

Averaging the admissions at $1 it means $300 000. Give half to the other clubs and that leaves $150 000 for Ebbets—something he never would have received if it hadn't been for Vance

But Ebbets Is Different

If a man made $150 000 for you unexpectedly in one year you'd be grateful wouldn't you to a point where you'd be willing to give him a nice bonus—or a REAL salary increase? But Ebbets — well Charles H is different than most mortals

Just how vast is the difference between what Vance wants and what Ebbets offers is not definitely established. Some reports fix the sum at $7 000 others place it at $2 500 and another makes it $5 000. Vance has an idea that inasmuch as he was the National league's most valuable player in 1924 he ought to be paid in keeping with that established worth

And Ebbets offers him a salary that is topped by probably a dozen or more players in the big leagues of today

Probable Reason Is Makers Took the "Hop" Out Of Jackrabbit Ball.

NEW YORK March 7—Have they deducted the hop from the horse hide? Have the swatsmiths skidded from ethereal heights or has pitching prowess performed a big league comeback?

Anyway the clubbing records of 1924 showed a remarkable downward march from those of 1923 and the earlier seasons when homers and 400 averages broke out with reckless abandon

In the matter of four base blows the slump has been most precipitate. In 1922 the tidal year for smacks of this variety the two leagues gathered in a grand total of 1 054 of which the Nationals contributed 530 and the Americans 524. The next year 1923 the figures reached 979 while in 1924 the mark was only 891

For some reason the American league has suffered in more tragic fashion than the Nationals. The Johnsonian circuit of 1924 bludgeoned forth only 395 circuit drives against 524 in 1922—a net loss of 139. The Nationals hit out 530 in 1922 reached their record of 538 in 1923 and dropped to 498 last season— a net loss of 40 from the high of that league

Balls Kept In Play

Perhaps the outburst of homers in the American league was so startling lessened in 1923 and 1924 because of Ban Johnson's rule put into effect in the middle of 1924

Keep the old ball in play longer

Prior to that time there was the tendency to throw out the old ball the moment it became slightly soiled or scuffed. That compelled pitchers to throw new balls almost constantly. And a new ball is harder to curve or use for deceiving purposes than an old one

In 1921 the Yankees made a record for home runs by cracking out 134. The National league mark is 116 made by the Phillies in 1922. In 1924 the Yanks led their league with 97 and the Giants topped theirs with 95—a big fall from 134 and 116

Club Batting Slumped

League hitting fell with a boisterous thud in 1924. The Giants of all the 16 clubs were the only ones who turned in a mark beyond 300. And they just skimmed beyond it

Contrast that with other recent years

In 1920 the Browns hit 308 and the Indians 303. In 1921 the Cardinals acquired 308 the Tigers 316 the Indians 308 the Browns 304 and the Yankees 300. In 1922 the Pirates batted 308 the Giants 30 and the Cardinals 301 while the Browns hit 313 and the Tigers 30. In 1923 two clubs the Indians and Tigers reached the 300 mark

Big Tumble by Heilmann

Perusal of the individual batting records of 1924 as compared with 1923 show a great change. Heilmann who led the Americans in 1923 with 403 fell to 346 last year. Archdeacon the other 400 man of 1923 fell from 402 to 319—a change of 83 points. Tris Speaker lost 36 points. Eddie Collins slipped 11 and the mighty Babe Ruth even though he held the lead with 378 was 15 points short of his mark of 1923

The decreases in the National were even more startling. Jack Bentley of the Giants who gathered in 437 in 1923 was able to achieve only 265 in 1924. Bottomley of the Cards lost [illegible] points. Grimm of the Pirates lost 58 markers. Frank Frisch dropped from 348 to 328. Cooney of the Braves went from 379 down to 254 and Pie Traynor of the Pirates slowed from 337 to 294. And these were only few

Hornsby Had Big Year

Of all the men who registered gains in 1924 over what had happened in 1923 Rogers Hornsby was the most spectacular. He arose from 384 to 423—a net increase of 39 points. Hank Gowdy of the Giants who hit only 2[illegible]0 in 1923 finished with 325 in 1924. Snyder of the Giants gained 48 points. Pinelli of the Reds acquired 30 and High of the Dodgers leaped from [illegible]69 in 1923 to 328 in 1924

The increasers in the American league were led by Riggs Stephenson of the Indians who hit 318 in 1923 and jumped to 3[illegible]8 in 1924. Bib Falk of the White Sox gained 4[illegible] marks and Cooper Cosslin leaped from 300 to 344. The very ancient Harry Hooper spanked the ball for 328 last season which was 40 points better than he accomplished in 1923

But the men who hoisted their marks in 1924 were in a hopeless minority and the batting tendency of that season was downward ever downward. All of which causes wonderment as to its real cause with a different and less lively ball offered as the most logical reason

GLOVE KING IN MOOD TO FIGHT

Champion Dempsey Serves Notice of Willingness to Meet Either Wills Or Gibbons In the Ring.

LOS ANGELES, March 7. — Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, tonight accepted the challenge of Harry Wills filed by the negro pugilist with the New York boxing commission. Through his manager, Jack Kearns, Dempsey said:

"I am ready to meet Wills at any time and any place."

Dempsey also said he was ready to meet Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul heavyweight, and accepted Gibbons' challenge which was filed with the New York commission a week before that of Wills.

Demands Cash Deposit.

The only thing that Dempsey asks of the New York commission is that they guarantee him the financial cash deposit customary in such cases, and with it the absolute assurance of the commission's ability to carry out the match.

Kearns also declared tonight that he had received many attractive offers for Dempsey to box in California next summer. "However," he said, "nothing definite has yet been done and up to now Jack has not signed any articles."

No Word From Champion.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The New York state athletic commission tonight was without any direct word from Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, or his manager, Jack Kearns, in answer to the commission's invitation accepting the challenge of Harry Wills for a title bout.

Dispatches from Los Angeles, however, quoted Kearns as declaring the commission "could not pick Dempsey's opponents unless it also was prepared to promote the bout."

Members of the commission took no official notice of these dispatches and indicated they would reserve comment and action until the meeting of the body Tuesday.

Under the rules and precedents, boxers who refuse to accept challenges filed with the commission, as in the Wills case, are suspended and denied the privilege of boxing in New York state.

Sends Wire to Commission.

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—Declaring that Jack Dempsey is ready to meet either Gibbons or Wills at any time, Jack Kearns, the heavyweight champion's manager, replied tonight to the New York boxing commission, which gave Dempsey 24 hours to answer Wills' challenge, accepting Wills' defi.

Kearns declared in his telegram to the commission that three years ago Dempsey accepted a challenge filed with the commission by Wills and articles were signed and that Chairman William Muldoon at the time forbid holding the bout. Kearns said Muldoon was still a member of the commission and that there was nothing to indicate the same steps would not be taken at this time to prevent a Wills-Dempsey match.

Dempsey had no intention of appearing discourteous, Kearns said, and would formally accept Wills' challenge.

Kearns' telegram in part follows:

Waives None of His Rights.

"Dempsey stands ready to meet Gibbons or Wills or both of these men, or any other man in the world, any place in the world, under conditions in which he has the recognized rights and prerogatives of a champion.

"He declines, however, to concede to the New York state athletic commission any authority in dictating his matches, or any authority beyond any other boxing government.

"For instance, Dempsey is a citizen of the state of California, a heavy property holder and a taxpayer here. This state has legalized boxing, and has a most competent boxing commission of its own, and he respectfully asks in what manner has the New York commission any more authority than the California commission or the commission of any other state in which boxing is legalized."

NEBASKA LOSES WRESTLING MEET

Victory to Evanston Team By Point Margin Of 10 to 4.

Northwestern unlersity won a rather tiresome wrestling meet from the University of Nebraska on the armory mats Saturday night, 10 to 4. The wrestlers, seemingly reluctant to risk their fate on anything in the way of aggressive holds, confined their efforts to battling for decisions, with the result that every bout was awarded on time advantage.

Captain Skinner and Mincer of Nebraska witnessed the meet from the side-lines, both the victim of injuries received in the dual meet with the University of Minnesota last week.

Two Nebraskans Win.

R. E. Blore in the 115-pound division and G. R. Highley, light-heavyweight, turned in the only decisions won by Nebraska wrestlers.

The heavyweight match between Molzen of Nebraska and Lowry of Northwestern furnished the excitement of the evening. The pair made up in strength what they lacked in science and started off with a rush. Molzen forced the pace the first nine minutes, but finally was worn down by the Evanston grappler, who dropped behind Molzen and stayed behind until the last few seconds when Molzen wriggled free too late to bid for an extra period contest.

Summary of Meet.

115-pound class—Blore, Nebraska, won over Burdsall, Northwestern, by decision. Time advantage, 6 minutes 45 seconds.

125-pound class — Anderson, Northwestern, won over Hudson, Nebraska, by decision. Time advantage, 10 minutes 46 seconds.

135-pound class — McPherson, Northwestern, won over Luff, Nebraska, by decision. Time advantage, 2 minutes 57 seconds.

158-pound class — Hathaway, Northwestern, won over Lundy, Nebraska, by decision. Time advantage, 7 minutes 34 seconds.

175-pound class—Highley, Nebraska, won over Lewis, Northwestern, by decision. Time advantage, 9 minutes 19 seconds.

'ACE' PULLS FOR BENJAMIN FIGHT

Nebraska Youngster Anxious To Get In Ring With Coast Champion.

Willing to Donate Services If Unable to Whip Title-Holder.

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—Ace Hudkins, Nebraska lightweight champion, before entering the ring here tonight to box four rounds with Frankie Fink of Denver in an exhibition at a benefit in which Jack Dempsey, Mickey Walker and other champions took part, declared he was so anxious to meet Joe Benjamin, California star, he would box for nothing if he did not defeat Benjamin.

At the same time Promoter Jack Doyle said negotiations for the Hudkins-Benjamin bout were progressing rapidly. He said he expected to stage the fight as an open air affair here within sixty to ninety days.

Doyle said there was great demand among fans for the Hudkins-Benjamin fight.

Duffy Signs for Walker.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 7.—Tommy Simpson Oakland boxing promoter, who came to Los Angeles to confer with Jack Doyle, southern California promoter, regarding a title match between Jimmy Duffy of Oakland and Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, returned north tonight with articles calling for a Walker-Duffy bout to be staged in the Vernon ball park, outside of this city, or the Los Angeles coliseum April 18. Neither Walker nor Duffy have signed the articles, however. It is understood Duffy will receive $10,000 for the proposed match. Walker's financial arrangement was not announced.

Put Dodgers In Race.

It has been estimated that the difference between a second division Dodger team and a pennant contender in 1924 was at least 300,000 cash customers. Vance made the Dodgers flag battlers. Therefore, it cannot positively be denied that he was the medium that lured those 300,000 added patrons through the turnstiles.

Averaging the admissions at $1, it means $300,000. Give half to the other clubs and that leaves $150,000 for Ebbets—something he never would have received if it hadn't been for Vance.

But Ebbets Is Different.

If a man made $150,000 for you unexpectedly in one year, you'd be grateful, wouldn't you, to a point where you'd be willing to give him a nice bonus—or a REAL salary increase? But Ebbets — well, Charles H. is different than most mortals.

Just how vast is the difference between what Vance wants and what Ebbets offers is not definitely established. Some reports fix the sum at $7,000; others place it at $2,500 and another makes it $5,000. Vance has an idea that inasmuch as he was the National league's most valuable player in 1924 he ought to be paid in keeping with that established worth.

And Ebbets offers him a salary that is topped by probably a dozen or more players in the big leagues of today.

CLARKE LINES UP REAL TEAM

The Iowa Aggies closed their season without defeat. Woodhull of Ames and Pederson of Minnesota furnished the closest match of the meet, both men being on their feet until time was called. Extra periods gave Woodhull the decision. Ames won every event except the 125-pound class.

Hawkeyes Defeat Badgers.

MADISON, Wis. March 7.—Iowa's wrestling team won from the Badger grapplers, 16 to 7 this afternoon, taking two falls and three decisions.

Hahn Toes Mark Against Nurmi March 17 Meet

NEW YORK, March 7—More evidence of the strined relations between Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, the two star Finnish runners, was made public today when it was announced that Nurmi had refused to run 55,000 meters against Ritola at the Knights of Columbus games here March 17 until Ritola ran also in the mile race.

Nurmi had notified the committee that he would run against any comers in a mile and a 5,000 meter race, but when he learned that Ritola planned to stay out of the mile race and save himself for the 5,000 meters run, Nurmi balked.

When the committee put it up to Ritola, he agreed to run against Nurmi in both races so that he will not have any handicap on his rival.

The mile race, which is expected to be the greatest ever run on an indoor track in this country, will bring together Nurmi, Ritola, Joie Ray, Lloyd Hahn, Jimmy Connelly and Leo Larrivee.

SUDDEN SLUMP BY SWATTING STARS

Probable Reason Is Makers Took the "Hop" Out Of Jackrabbit Ball.

NEW YORK, March 7—Have they deducted the "hop" from the horsehide? Have the swatsmiths skidded from ethereal heights, or has pitching prowess performed a big league comeback?

Anyway, the clubbing records of 1924 showed a remarkable downward march from those of 1923 and the earlier seasons when homers and 400 averages broke out with reckless abondon.

In the matter of four-base blows the slump has been most precipitate. In 1922, the tidal year for smacks of this variety, the two leagues gathered in a grand total of 1,054, of which the Nationals contributed 530 and the Americans 524. The next year, 1923, the figures reached 979, while in 1924 the mark was only 891.

For some reason, the American league has suffered in more tragic fashion than the Nationals. The Johnsonian circuit of 1924 bludgeoned forth only 395 circuit drives, against 524 in 1922—a net loss of 139. The Nationals hit out 530 in 1922, reached their record of 538 in 1923 and dropped to 498 last season— a net loss of 40 from the high of that league.

Balls Kept In Play.

Perhaps the outburst of homers in the American league was so startling lessened in 1923 and 1924 because of Ban Johnson's rule, put into effect in the middle of 1924: "Keep the old ball in play longer."

Prior to that time there was the tendency to throw out the old ball the moment it became slightly soiled or scuffed. That compelled pitchers to throw new balls almost constantly. And a new ball is harder to curve or use for deceiving purposes than an old one.

In 1921 the Yankees made a record for home runs by cracking out 134. The National league mark is 116, made by the Phillies in 1922. In 1924 the Yanks led their league with 97 and the Giants topped theirs with 95—a big fall from 134 and 116.

Club Batting Slumped.

League hitting fell with a boisterous thud in 1924. The Giants, of all the 16 clubs, were the only ones who turned in a mark beyond .300. And they just skimmed beyond it.

Contrast that with other recent years:

In 1920 the Browns hit .308 and the Indians .303; in 1921 the Cardinals acquired .308, the Tigers. 316, he Indians .308, the Browns .304 and the Yankees .300. In 1922 the Pirates batted .308, the Giants, .305 and the Cardinals .301, while the Browns hit .313 and the Tigers .305. In 1923 two clubs, the Indians and Tigers, reached the .300 mark.

Big Tumble by Heilmann.

Perusal of the individual batting records of 1924, as compared with 1923, show a great change. Heilmann, who led the Americans in 1923 with .403, fell to .346 last year. Archdeacon, the other .400 man of 1923, fell from .402 to .319—a change of 81 points. Tris Speaker lost 36 points, Eddie Collins slipped 11, and the mighty Babe Ruth, even though he held the lead with .378, was 15 points short of his mark of 1923.

The decreases in the National were even more startling. Jack Bentley of the Giants, who gathered in .437 in 1923, was able to achieve only .265 in 1924. Bottomley of the Cards lost 55 points. Grimm of the Pirates lost 58 markers, Frank Frisch dropped from .348 to .328, Cooney of the Braves went from .379 down to .254 and "Pie" Traynor of the Pirates slowed from .337 to .294. And these were only a few.

Hornsby Had Big Year.

Of all the men who registered gains in 1924 over what had happened in 1923, Rogers Hornsby was the most spectacular. He arose from .384 to .423—a net increase of 29 points. Hank Kowdy of the Giants, who hit only .270 in 1923, finished with .325 in 1924. Snyder of the Giants gained 48 points, Pinelli of the Reds acquired 30 and High of the Dodgers leaped from .269 in 1923 to .328 in 1924.

The "increasers" in the American league were led by Riggs Stephenson of the Indians, who hit .318 in 1923 and jumped to .378 in 1924. Bib Falk of the White Sox gained 47 marks and "Goose" Goslin leaped from .300 to .344. The very ancient Harry Hooper spanked the ball for .328 last season, which was 40 points better than he accomplished in 1923.

But the men who hoisted thier marks in 1924 were in a hopeless minority and the batting tendency of that season was downward, ever downward. All of which causes wonderment as to its real cause, with "a different and less lively ball" offered as the most logical reason.

Diogenes Didn't Know His Stuff, But Fulton Did

Fred Fulton, th eoft plastered plasterer, received $6,000 for faking a fight with Tony Fuente. A California judge assessed Freddie $500 for doing his stuff. Net gain for Fulton—$5,500. Will some espouser of the adage that "honesty is the best policy" please leap forward now and do a little explaining?

Service—As You Like It!

Service doesn't consist in serving a limited number of people well. It's a matter of serving everybody who wants to be served — equally well!

The A-B-C Classified Advertising Section of the Star is used by hundreds of people in this city every day.

But its greatest claim as a service medium is based on the fact that it can help hundreds more—everyone who turns to it—and be more efficient than ever!

There's no limit to the help these classified columns—through their many headings — can give to you and everybody in Lincoln.

No matter what you want—you'll be most likely to get it most economically through these little ads. Turn to the offers under the heading that interests you most—and find out for yourself.

And when you want to use an ad of your own

Service—As You Like It!

Service doesn't consist in serving a limited number of people well. It's a matter of serving everybody who wants to be served — equally well!

The A-B-C Classified Advertising Section of the Star is used by hundreds of people in this city every day.

But its greatest claim as a service medium is based on the fact that it can help hundreds more—everyone who turns to it—and be more efficient than ever!

There's no limit to the help these classified columns—through their many headings — can give to you and everybody in Lincoln.

No matter what you want—you'll be most likely to get it most economically through these little ads. Turn to the offers under the heading that interests you most—and find out for yourself.

And when you want to use an ad of your own

They Can't Stay Lost—

It used to be that a purse or a watch could drop out of some one's pocket and completely disappear—just "somewhere in Lincoln."

But not any more!

The Star's Lost ads have put a stop to all that. Hundreds of Lincoln people will tell you that lost valuables can't stay lost after these hard-working little ads have been put on their trail.

There isn't any guess-work about the Star way of recovering lost articles. It's all worked out on facts.

To begin with, almost every one is honest. When some one finds the diamond ring that you've lost, the only thing that's keeping you from getting it back is that the finder doesn't know you've lost it.

It's simply a question of letting the Star tell the honest finder that YOU are the loser.

Next time you lose something of value—call B1234 and ask for an ad-taker!

They Can't Stay Lost—

It used to be that a purse or a watch could drop out of some one's pocket and completely disappear—just "somewhere in Lincoln."

But not any more!

The Star's Lost ads have put a stop to all that. Hundreds of Lincoln people will tell you that lost valuables can't stay lost after these hard-working little ads have been put on their trail.

There isn't any guess-work about the Star way of recovering lost articles. It's all worked out on facts.

To begin with, almost every one is honest. When some one finds the diamond ring that you've lost, the only thing that's keeping you from getting it back is that the finder doesn't know you've lost it.

It's simply a question of letting the Star tell the honest finder that YOU are the loser.

Next time you lose something of value—call B1234 and ask for an ad-taker!

Just a Dwelling?

---or A Home Investment!

A man usually builds a home in keeping with his finances. That is the part of wisdom, to set a reasonable limit of cost, and keep within it.

Often, however, a home-builder seeks to make his expenditures buy maximum floor space at the expense of permanence. Construction is cheapened so that a larger house may be built. Cheaper materials are used as a "saving" to apply on other purchases.

What a home-builder really wants is maximum home value. He actually wants to pay for a home that is economically built, yet of such a construction standard that is will maintain its value as a home through many years—a satisfactory combination of economy and permanance!

Any good architect or contractor will build a home economically without sacrificing permanence. He will use good materials. He will follow sound construction methods. He will put maximum home value into a dwelling.

If you build a small home or a large one, a modest home or a pretentious one, it will pay you to consult us.

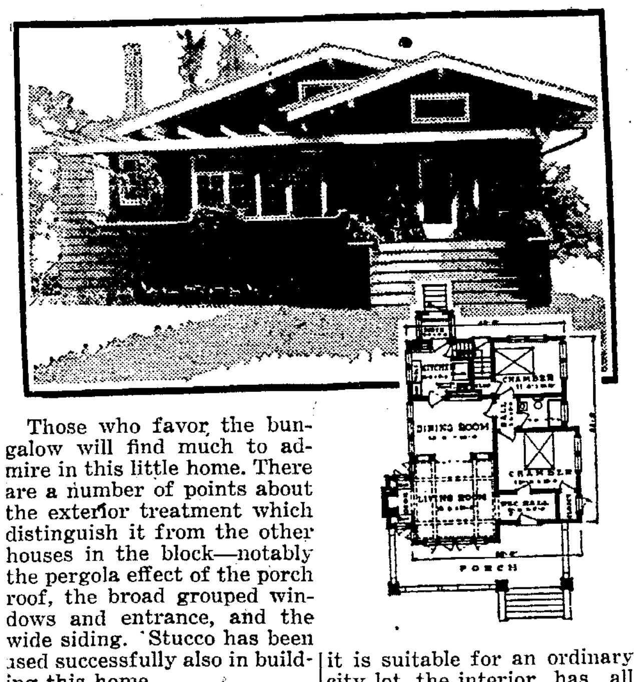
Lincoln's Lumber Leaders

A Modern Bungalow



Those who favor the bungalow will find much to admire in this little home. There are a number of points about the exterior treatment which distinguish it from the other houses in the block—notably the pergola effect of the porch roof, the broad grouped windows and entrance, and the wide siding. Stucco has been used successfully also in building this home.

While the house is quite small (only 26x32), so that it is suitable for an ordinary city lot, the interior has all the conveniences of most small houses, and some of the luxuries.

One enters a tiny vestibule which shelters the living room in inclement weather. The living room is almost square, with beamed ceiling and an inglenook with fireplace, bookcases and seats. The low row of casements and small sash around the inglenook makes it an inviting room even on the dreariest winter day. An inter-room opening with bookcases separates the living room from the dining room, adding to the spacious effect of each.

There is a built-in sideboard in the dining room, of straight, simple lines, and just enough ornament to make it distinctive. This bit of permanent furniture, like the rest of the woodwork in the house, is a standard design and size, so that the big bugbear of "special millwork" is conspicuously absent from the cost of building.

The kitchen is a tiny box of a place that will delight the modern housewife by its completeness. There is a double window over the sink and worktable, and an upper panel of glass in the back door gives light from a second side. The basement steps form an alcove just right for the range. A handy clothes chute is near.

Two bedrooms—one of them with a daylight closet—complete the layout of this little home.

----or A Home Investment!

A man usually builds a home in keeping with his finances. That is the part of wisdom, to set a reasonable limit of cost, and keep within it.

Often, however, a home-builder seeks to make his expenditures buy maximum floor space at the expense of permanence. Construction is cheapened so that a larger house may be built. Cheaper materials are used as a "saving" to apply on other purchases.

What a home-builder really wants is maximum home value. He actually wants to pay for a home that is economically built, yet of such a construction standard that is will maintain its value as a home through many years—a satisfactory combination of economy and permanance!

Any good architect or contractor will build a home economically without sacrificing permanence. He will use good materials. He will follow sound construction methods. He will put maximum home value into a dwelling.

If you build a small home or a large one, a modest home or a pretentious one, it will pay you to consult us.

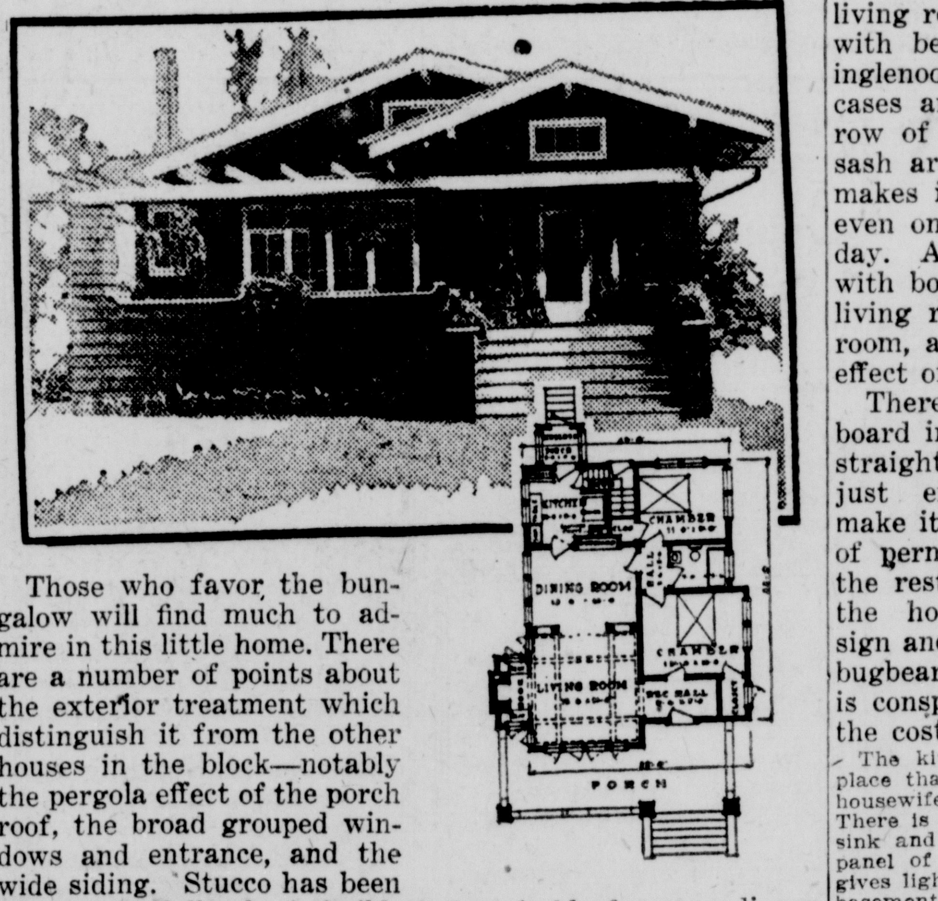
A Modern Bungalow



Those who favor the bungalow will find much to admire in this little home. There are a number of points about the exterior treatment which distinguish it from the other houses in the block—notably the pergola effect of the porch roof, the broad grouped windows and entrance, and the wide siding. Stucco has been used successfully also in building this home.

While the house is quite small (only 26x32), so that it is suitable for an ordinary city lot, the interior has all the conveniences of most small houses, and some of the luxuries.

One enters a tiny vestibule which shelters the living room in inclement weather. The living room is almost square, with beamed ceiling and an inglenook with fireplace, bookcases and seats. The low row of casements and small sash around the inglenook makes it an inviting room even on the dreariest winter day. An inter-room opening with bookcases separates the living room from the dining room, adding to the spacious effect of each.

There is a built-in sideboard in the dining room, of straight, simple lines, and just enough ornament to make it distinctive. This bit of permanent furniture, like the rest of the woodwork in the house, is a standard design and size, so that the big bugbear of "special millwork" is conspicuously absent from the cost of building.

The kitchen is a tiny box of a place that will delight the modern housewife by its completeness. There is a double window over the sink and worktable, and an upper panel of glass in the back door gives light from a second side. The basement steps form an alcove just right for the range. A handy clothes chute is near.

Two bedrooms—one of them with a daylight closet—complete the layout of this little home.

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

After all, it seems to have taken a bachelor to find the key to marital happiness.

The judges, the ministers, the reformers, even suffrage had a hand in exterminating the omnipresent eternal triangle, but to no avail. The sancity of the American home still continues to be ravaged by divorce.

And so John W. Cooper, approximately thirty-five years old and unmarried, steps forward with a new angle on the triangle proposition, which is to do away with the professional sheiks and vamps, and which will at least have a tendency to secure peace and quiet for wives and husbands.

The bill says that, "Any person who shall knowingly, purposely, wilfully, maliciously and designedly with intention so to do, entice away anud alienate or cause to be alienated the affections of a husband or wife from either, knowing said parties to be married, while the husband and wife are living together and maintaining the relations of husband and wife, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be confined in the penitentiarry for a period of one to five years or be fined in any sum not less than $500, or more than $2,500 or both such and fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. This act shall not apply to parents or relatives of the married parties."

A provision is added to the bill stating that in such action, the spouse whose affections are alleged to have been alienated may testify for the defendant.

What will the result be if the bill is passed?

Local Lawyers Divided.

Lincoln attorneys have different ideas as to what the actual result of the bill, if passed, will be. Out of the twenty some who were interviewed on the subject, some had strenuous objections, others were staunch supporters of the bill, and there were still others who were neutral.

"I am certainly for it," said Claude S. Wilson. "I have been a lawyer for too many years not to appreciate what the bill will do if it is passed, and I sincerely hope that it will pass. In more than 50 per cent of the divorce cases, there is either another man or another woman lurking in the background. Sometimes they do not even pretend there is no affinity, but say so right from the start. These cases are in the minority, however, and the majority get divorces for every other reason but the right one.

"There was one case I had where a woman came to me asking me to take her divorce case. She had a man with her whom she introduced as her brother. She began telling me why she wanted a divorce, but before she went very far I told her that if she wanted me to take her case should would have to tell the truth, that she couldn't start out lying. She asked me what I meant and I told her that I knew as well as she did that the man with her was not her brother. She finally told me that he was not, but that she was going to marry him as soon as she could get her divorce and her six months was up.

"There are any number of cases the same way, only the average woman does not bring her affinity with her to apply for a divorce. He generally stays in the background until everything blows over and there is no suspicion of the real facts in the case."

Another attorney, who asked that his name be not mentioned, stated that he believed that in every divorce suit there was another man or woman in the case.

Bill Might Not Help.

"However," said this attorney, "I do not say that I think the bill will be a good one. I believe that it might give rise to a great deal of trouble. Some husband or wife might become jealous for no particular reason, but decide that someone was trying to wreck their home, and then the fight would be on. As much as I would like to abolish divorce as we have it today, I do not believe that Senator Cooper's bill will help it much."

"I am inclined to believe that the bill will be a very good one to pass," said Judge W. B. Comstock." I know in the experience I have had that a great many divorces are brought about through either the husband or wife becoming interested in someone else. They may not be sure of the other person, but they have become infatuated to the extent that they are dissatisfied with the present companion, and believe that the other would mean supreme happiness.

"I believe that this bill of Senator Cooper's would do much to moderate the number of cases at least.

"One can bring a civil suit now for the alienation of affections, but unless the defendant is financially well off it does no good to sue. A man of means is always a little careful not to get him self involved in a case of that sort, for he knows that the injured party can get financial satisfaction from him at least. The man who has nothing to lose, the worthless fellow who has no means says to himself, 'well, what if they do sue me, they can't get anything,' and he goes on just the same as before with some other man's wife.

"If men and women knew that the penitentiary could be the result of such conduct there would be less of it. If such a bill were passed it would also prevent homicide. There is small satisfaction for anyone in the knowledge that there is nothing that can be done in such a case, unless civil action is brought. They may feel like killing the party responsible, but in very few cases they yield to this impulse, although I believe that most juries would justify such an action.

"I remember a case in Lincoln several years ago, where one man walked into a hotel dining room, straight over to another man who had taken his wife from him, and sent a bullet through his heart. The man was tried, of course, but the jury pronounced him 'not guilty.'

"Killing, in such cases is probably impulse, a way to gain satisfaction, and I believe this bill would prevent some of it."

It has come to a pretty pass, according to another Lincoln attorney who has practiced law for nearly 50 years, when there has to be a law making a man love his wife, or a woman her husband.

"I believe that they should," said E. J. Hainer, "but I thing they should do it because they know it is the right way to live rather than because they are forced into it.

"I never have advised a divorce case in all the years I have practiced. I do not believe in divorce. I think there is just one marriage and only one. One should be careful before marrying, but after they have taken the step, live right, and stay married to the same man or woman.

"I feel about divorce the way my mother did about drunkeness. She used to say that there was not a more despisable sight than an intoxicated man, unless it was a glutton.

"I rather believe that a bill such as this one would cheapen marriage. I think any legislation concerning marriage cheapens it, and it is the one thing that should not be cheapened."

The passage of the alienation bill will be just one more law that doesn't mean anything, according to some of the other attorneys, who claim that there are so many unenforced laws now that the addition of others would be somewhat ridiculous.

"I am not in favor of the bill," said E. P. Holmes. "I think we have too many useless bills now. I don't think the bill would help the divorce question anyhow, because alienation has to be proved before the guilty party can be punished, and that is going to be rather difficult to do.

"Kick Back" Possible.

"Another thing, supposing one man didn't like another just on general principles, and supposing, because he disliked him anyway, he fancied that his wife was getting too much attention from that particular person. The first thing he would do if he wanted to get even, would be to file a charge of alienation of affections against him. Even though he could not prove the charge, he would make it disagreeable for his wife and the other man through all of the publicity.

"There are too many divorces," Mr. Holmes said. "There are a good many people who should not be divorced and are, and there are a great many people who deserve to be divorced and are not just to keep up appearance for the sake of themselves and the children, if there are any. But I don't believe the bill will help it. I think the trouble is with the living.

"Young people of today do not know how to live right. It has come to the point where it is not possible for them to have a party unless there is liquor and lots of it. When I was young we never thought liquor necessary to have a good time. But the boys and girls today think that it is. They do and believe in a lot of other things that would have been considered a disgrace when I was a boy, and still some people have the nerve to tell us that the world is getting better. It is getting worse from a moral standpoint. It progresses in mechanical ways, but humanity, the real cog in the wheel, is degenerating.

Those are the things that bring divorce, together with the emancipation of women. Not that I can see any real reason why women should not be 'free' as they call it, but I was afraid it would do just what it has done. Men do not have the respect for women that they once did, the same kind of respect. They do not cherish them and protect them with the same spirit as they did some years ago. Woman is 'free,' and she has taken her place on the level with man. She is his equal instead of his superior. There is dissatisfaction, restlessness, a reaching out for something, they don't know what, that causes divorce. They don't have enough to do to keep them from becoming dissatisfied.

"But, I think about the first thing that would happen if this bill were passed would be that the county attorney would be snowed under with complaints. At some of these parties sometimes, when perhaps all of them have a little bit too much to drink, men and women will imagine all sorts of things, and they will not stop until they have told their troubles to the county attorney."

Huge Divorce List.

In Lancaster county in 1924 there were 191 divorces, and in the entire state in 1923, there were 2,077 divorce cases granted, 1,162 cases pending, 564 dismissed, and 44 marriages annulled, making a total of 3,847 divorces brought to the courts during the year. In the year of 1922 there were 2,282 divorces granted in the state.

In Lancaster alone during the month of June there were 128 divorce hearings. Some of these, however were of long standing and the court held a general house cleaning that particular month to do away with all cases of that sort. The records of 1920 for the county show 262 divorces granted, in 1921 there were 283; in 1922, 215; in 1923, 190; and the past year, 191.

It is small wonder with figures such as these that Mr. Cooper believes that something should be done. He said that he had no other reason for submitting the bill other than his actual experience with such cases in his practice of law. He believes that the bill will not only prevent homewrecking directly, but also indirectly, and thus put an end to a great many divorces.

"I don't agree with Senator Cooper," said George Adams, another Lincoln attorney," I think there is entirely too much jealousy afoot at all times to make such a bill safe."

"I think the bill is all right,"

Boyish Bob Seems Conventional Enough As Compared With Styles of Days Past

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

Bob!

In years gone by that used to be Robert's nickname.

But no more. Prefixes have entirely ruined its use in that capacity.

Now it's shingle bob, boyish bob, straight bob, henna bob, stringy bob and unkempt bob.

Not content with fifteen cents for a shave and thirty-five for a hair cut, the barbers whooped'er up to twenty-five and fifty.

And still they wanted more. They roped in the women.

Pulchritude in the barber shop of yore was found only in the inevitable Police Gazette. Now it is always in the chair just ahead of you.

But we stray.

Perhaps 'tis bettah! Now put your hand over one eye so that the shock won't be too great and gave upon the tonsorial effects in the tintypes.

Can you tie that? Not with a hair ribbon!

She used to boast that she could sit on her hair. Now she cried to the world that "It's so sanitary!"

"And handy to comb? Why, my dear, I can get up at 7:45 and have my hair combed and have the coffee on in the time it used to take me to get the curling rags off of my hair."

Does hubby like it? What can he do if he doesn't?

It is estimated by eminent statisticians, efficiency experts and others who have nothing else to do that all of the hair that is nipped, shorn, cut, clipped, shaved and in any other way detached from the heads of America's women, if placed in one pile would be sufficient to fill the Shenandoah, and still have enough left to fill two bed mattresses and one sanitary couch pad. Or, if the hairs were put end to end they would reach three and one quarter miles past the sun, providing any one wanted to risk it.

Strange Styles of Yore.

But seriously, the hair styles of long ago were not a bit more sensible nor good looking, and not nearly so sanitary and convenient as those of today.

Imagine doing your house work and preparing the three square meals with long flowing hair!

Well, they did it back in the sixties, and if you did not have enough hair to flow almost to your knees, you bought some and fastened it on one way or another. How they did it will always remain one of the unsolved mysteries of the world.

Blessed was the girl who had long curls. She could twine them around her neck in a most artistic manner. The effect was much more charming, and perhaps the result was more sanitary around meal time.

The flappers of the olden day wore their hair in a girlish fashion. It was lifted off the ears in graceful lines, pinned to the back of the head and then let fall as far down the back as it could, the farther the better.

In the picture of the three little maids from school this is demonstrated. These three girls dropped into the photographers on their way home from school to have their pictures taken, and the likeness was supposed to be very good. Hair parted in the middle, it was looped back, and held down to one head with a black velvet band, the other two seem to have had combs.

One must show one's ears in the years gone by. What were ears for, if not to show? And now it is nothing less than a social error if an ear is seen peeping through.

After the era of flowing hair came the French twist. Here, the hair was rolled under and under until every tiny little hair was concealed in a roll that was arranged the lengthwise of the head. The ears showed again, but the front of the hair could be fluffed out and made to look attractive. This style came in again just a few years ago and was quite good looking.

About the time that the French twist came in, there was another fashion of braiding the hair, and braiding in a switch if your own hair was not heavy enough. The braids were pulled out so they were wide and flat and then pinned up tightly to the back of the head. A row of puffs, or some curls then graced the head from the braid in the back to the forehead.

After that came the pan cake hair dress. Little frame affairs made of hair or wire were essential to Milady's coiffure then. These were round and had a space for the hair to be pulled through and draped around to resemble a pan cake or a doughnut. The front of the hair was arranged in a manner that was becoming to the wearer's particular style of beauty.

"Spit" Curls Next.

After this came the era of "spit curls." From the pictures it would appear that bangs were cut long clear across the front of the head and then curled so that they lay flat on the forehead. This was quite a popular coiffure among women of all ages. The men seemed to like it, according to some of the matrons who once wore their hair in that fashion, and the curls were commonly called "beau catchers."

There was a style following this one where the hair was cut short on top of the head and curled, but the back hair remained long. There were very, very few cases of the hair being cut entirely, and these few were discussed with much fevor among men and women alike.

The pompadour came into its own about this time, especially with the younger women. How they ever wore hats with some of the huge aerial effects in front is still a mystery. But they did. The hats were small and were worn somewhere near the back of the head, on the other side of the pompadour.

Close on the style of the pompadour came "rats" of all descriptions. Some of them went clear around the head, others just covered a portion of the head. The hair was combined over these into great mountain-like effects. The idea seemed to be to make yourself look as though you had all of the hair in the world right on your own head.

After this mad splurge of hair, it seems that simplicity was the vogue for a short time. The hair was coiffed in subdued lines about the head and if Milady didn't have a great deal of hair she frankly admitted it and that was all there was to that.

These were the days before marcel waves and permanent waves came in and the only sort of curl one could have was what is known as a round curl. Just a plain old curling iron curl, and many are the women who have burned off great lengths of hair and blistered their neck besides, trying to make themselves beautiful. The round curl had a tendency to make the hair frizzley if it were not done carefully, and many coiffures of the olden days had the "frizzled" look.

Then came the fan shaped rolls at the back of the head. This was really an attractive style and many women who have not bobbed their hair cling to it yet.

The big puffs over the ears, with scarcely any hair at all visible at the back of the head was one of the most atrocious hair styles in the history of hair, but it was the fashion for several months. Huge puffs were dragged out over the ears and generally a "rat" was used on top of the head so that the hair was combed high off the forehead. From the front and sides this style gave the effect of much hair, but from the back the effect was terrible.

Bob First Frowned On.

And then came the bob!

At first every one frowned. It wasn't lady-like, and it was nothing but a fad. But the fad persisted and now those who have unshorn locks are much in the minority.

The long bob was the beginning of the bob, but it was so hard to keep the ends of the hair curled and in good condition all of the time that the fad for shorter hair soon came in. Then there half-shingles and whole shingles, and in some cases the hair was shingled all over the head.

Then, came the boyish bob, although many of the bob devotees did not indulge in this. This style cut the hair just as a man's, slicked back without a sign of a curl or a curve.

But the preference is for pretty marcelled hair, and the authorities on hair claim that the bob is to be long this winter, because it is more becoming with winter frocks. What will happen when the winter is over no one knows.

How to Solve Puzzle.

The best way to solve this cross-word puzzle is to run over the list of horizontal and vertical synonyms in search of evident or "easy" words. If horizontal, the word you are looking for must extend crosswise from the number to the first shaded stop on the right; if vertical, it must extend downward from the number to the first shaded stop below. When finished, the words should read equally well crosswise and downward.

Celebrate Their Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs Henry Sell celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Huntley Thursday, February 26. Mr. Sell is seventy-one years old and his wife is sixty-eight. They settled in Nebraska in 1888 and have lived in Harlan county for the last thirty years and in Huntley for the past ten years. Mr. Sell is a retired farmer.

To this union were born thirteen children of whom nine are living. There are sixteen grandchildren and children and grand children were all present at the Sell home for the anniversary celebration. A three course dinner was served at 2 o'clock. The decorations of the table and rooms were in gold and white and the centerpiece of the table, which was in the form of a large T, was a large white wedding cake trimmed in gold and topped with a minature bride and groom. Gold candles were used at either end of the table and vases of jonquils were also used in decoration and the gold and white motif was repeated in the nut cups and place cards.

Mr. and Mrs. Sell were presented with fifty dollars by the children and the presentation speech was made by Mrs. E. R. Peck.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sell and family, Mr and Mrs. William Sell and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Sell and daughter of Huntley, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Sell and family, Mr and Mrs Perry Wilson and daughter of Burlington, Colo., Mr and Mrs. W. O. Vilott and daughter, Mr. and Mrs E. R. Peckk and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Schneider and Mrs. F. M. Barnes and children of Lincoln.

Gay Or Simple, Inaugurations Come and Go, But Oath Coolidge Took Was Same As Washington's

Presidents come and presidents go, but inaugurations go on forever.

Simple or elaborate, grave or gay, every four years the same oaths are taken and the same precedents followed. The ceremonies have changed in some of the non-essentials, the place has changed, the outward display varies, but in 126 years of American presidencies the old fundamental order has been only moderately transformed.

Washington took the first oath of office April 30, because the learned ones could not agree upon the conditions of the ceremony, but his second inauguration occurred March 4. He took the oath standing on the balcony of Federal hall and then returned to the senate chamber to deliver a short address.

Modern presidents are spared the journey through acclaiming crowds that the first president had. His journey from Alexandria to New York City was a continuous ovation, with crowds of gayly dressed people at each village bringing him garlands and baskets of flowers and all the village bells ringing and the village cannons booming. A triumphal arch of laurel and evergreen was erected on the bridge at Trenton over the Deleware and a group of girls in white scattered flowers before his carriage.

Jefferson, exponent of simplicity, walked from his boarding house to the capitol, accompanied by a battalion of infantry. He took the oath in the north wing of the capitol and from there went to the Supreme court room, where he delivered a fifteen minute address. He then returned to the boarding house.

Madison liked display and had more pretentious ceremonies than Jefferson, opening with a sunrise salute and closing with a brilliant ball, for which Dolly Madison wore yellow velvet. Militia accompanied his carriage to the capitol and his predecessor, rode horseback on a roundabout route, so that Madison might have all the glory.

During Madison's administration, Washington was burned by the British and Monroe took his oath of office out of doors. The capitol

BY LYNNELLE GREER.

Bob!

In years gone by that used to be Robert's nickname.

But no more. Prefixes have entirely ruined its use in that capacity.

Now it's shingle bob, boyish bob, straight bob, henna bob, stringy bob and unkempt bob.

Not content with fifteen cents for a shave and thirty-five for a hair cut, the barbers whooped'er up to twenty-five and fifty.

And still they wanted more. They roped in the women.

Pulchritude in the barber shop of yore was found only in the inevitable Police Gazette. Now it is always in the chair just ahead of you.

But we stray.

Perhaps 'tis bettah! Now put your hand over one eye so that the shock won't be too great and gave upon the tonsorial effects in the tintypes.

Can you tie that? Not with a hair ribbon!

She used to boast that she could sit on her hair. Now she cried to the world that "It's so sanitary!"

"And handy to comb? Why, my dear, I can get up at 7:45 and have my hair combed and have the coffee on in the time it used to take me to get the curling rags off of my hair."

Does hubby like it? What can he do if he doesn't?

It is estimated by eminent statisticians, efficiency experts and others who have nothing else to do that all of the hair that is nipped, shorn, cut, clipped, shaved and in any other way detached from the heads of America's women, if placed in one pile would be sufficient to fill the Shenandoah, and still have enough left to fill two bed mattresses and one sanitary couch pad. Or, if the hairs were put end to end they would reach three and one quarter miles past the sun, providing any one wanted to risk it.

Strange Styles of Yore.

But seriously, the hair styles of long ago were not a bit more sensible nor good looking, and not nearly so sanitary and convenient as those of today.

Imagine doing your house work and preparing the three square meals with long flowing hair!

Well, they did it back in the sixties, and if you did not have enough hair to flow almost to your knees, you bought some and fastened it on one way or another. How they did it will always remain one of the unsolved mysteries of the world.

Blessed was the girl who had long curls. She could twine them around her neck in a most artistic manner. The effect was much more charming, and perhaps the result was more sanitary around meal time.

The flappers of the olden day wore their hair in a girlish fashion. It was lifted off the ears in graceful lines, pinned to the back of the head and then let fall as far down the back as it could, the farther the better.

In the picture of the three little maids from school this is demonstrated. These three girls dropped into the photographers on their way home from school to have their pictures taken, and the likeness was supposed to be very good. Hair parted in the middle, it was looped back, and held down to one head with a black velvet band, the other two seem to have had combs.

One must show one's ears in the years gone by. What were ears for, if not to show? And now it is nothing less than a social error if an ear is seen peeping through.

After the era of flowing hair came the French twist. Here, the hair was rolled under and under until every tiny little hair was concealed in a roll that was arranged the lengthwise of the head. The ears showed again, but the front of the hair could be fluffed out and made to look attractive. This style came in again just a few years ago and was quite good looking.

About the time that the French twist came in, there was another fashion of braiding the hair, and braiding in a switch if your own hair was not heavy enough. The braids were pulled out so they were wide and flat and then pinned up tightly to the back of the head. A row of puffs, or some curls then graced the head from the braid in the back to the forehead.

After that came the pan cake hair dress. Little frame affairs made of hair or wire were essential to Milady's coiffure then. These were round and had a space for the hair to be pulled through and draped around to resemble a pan cake or a doughnut. The front of the hair was arranged in a manner that was becoming to the wearer's particular style of beauty.

"Spit" Curls Next.

After this came the era of "spit curls." From the pictures it would appear that bangs were cut long clear across the front of the head and then curled so that they lay flat on the forehead. This was quite a popular coiffure among women of all ages. The men seemed to like it, according to some of the matrons who once wore their hair in that fashion, and the curls were commonly called "beau catchers."

There was a style following this one where the hair was cut short on top of the head and curled, but the back hair remained long. There were very, very few cases of the hair being cut entirely, and these few were discussed with much fervor among men and women alike.

The pompadour came into its own about this time, especially with the younger women. How they ever wore hats with some of the huge aerial effects in front is still a mystery. But they did. The hats were small and were worn somewhere near the back of the head, on the other side of the pompadour.

Should a Woman Who Loves Children Marry a Man Who Does Not Want a Family?—Could She Be Happy With the Love of Husband Alone Even Though That Love Be Mutually Ardent?—Two Sermons By Readers Are Given Today, One On Home Fires versus the Fires of Ambition, the Other On Religion.

A Sacrifice Demanded.

Dear Minerva—There is one question which after much worry I am submitting to you for your most careful consideration. It is a question that I have not been able to decide for myself and which I will describe to you in detail exactly as the case exists as near as I can state it. I am not a child or a young girl but a young woman well in the thirties who has been in the world alone for a long time. I have had my own living to make and enjoyed it along with both pleasant and unpleasant experiences. Now for a number of years I have had the company of a man who is above the ordinary intellectually, a man who is kind, considerate, a man whose ambition is to follow the golden rule. Not in theory alone but in practice I have found that he lives up to this principle, in everyday life. He is a wonderful satisfaction not only to myself but to many others. He is jovial yet sincere, a happy disposition but true to his convictions.

As I stated before he has been my constant friend for several years. I respect, admire and love him as I could never love another and he returns this deep and sincere love to me. We are constant companions in all our affairs and we confide everything to each other. I am sure that neither of us would be anything but true. I know by the test of time and experience that he has no desire for any other woman.

Now, Minerva, my question is this, "What shall I do?" There is just one thing between us and that is the question of a child. He has been married before and had children who were headstrong and regardless of all his good council and advice have become reckless. It has broken his heart and brought a shadow into his life. The wrongdoing of his own children has so changed his ideas of life that although he loves his children, he has vowed he would never be the father of another one. This state of affairs is a very serious one to me for all my life I have dreamed of the day when I could have a child of my own. From the time I was only a child myself I have wished for a baby to love and caress and train, some one to please and to be company when I am older. (For I have no relatives). If I married this man, the only one I ever loved, I think what a comfort a child would be if anything should ever happen to him. The child would at least be a reminder and a blessing to help compensate the loss of the dearest one on earth as well as for its own sake. I am not trying to hang crepe in looking ahead for possibilities but I believe these are the everyday facts of life. He is a very considerate of my wishes even in this matter and grants me the right to think as I do but says it is a very serious matter and does not know what to do only that he says no one ever loved a child more than he does, he is happy with them all around him. And all children like him.

That is my story, the one thing between us that seems to grow rather than diminish. I cannot give him up and I cannot bring myself to give up what I long for more than any other thing in the world. It seems a tragedy either way and I cannot decide. Yours, Doris.

A. It would indeed be a tragedy for a woman of ideals and love of children such as you are to live a childless life. I believe this man would change his viewpoints after marriage and want his home graced with the beauty of motherhood and children. But I also believe you should not take the risk of his changing his mind, but that you should first convince him that a happy home could not be based on such an unnatural foundation as his opposing the coming of children would erect.

The seeming failure of his teachings with his children may prove not to be failures after all. Young people go through tempestuous times, but early lessons are likely to show their influence sooner or later.

But, if failure is there, he should at least have confidence in your courage and desire to rear a family. We can train our children only so far, then they must work out their own destinies. But in our efforts we should know the satisfactions of duties conscientiously performed even though the apparent results are not so satisfying.

If this man cannot rise above his discouragements with his children, he certainly should not re-marry. He has no right to ask any woman to make such a sacrifice as he now thinks he would have you make.

You are not the frivolous, selfish type of woman, content to be the adored pet of the man you love. Probably he would not love you if you were. You want life in the full with its responsibilities and its pains and you would not be satisfied with less.

It would be far greater tragedy for you to marry under such a repression as he suggests than for you to give up the man you love. So persist in your attempts to convince him of your rights for a family, also of his need for greater courage in the matter of raising a second family.

The Life Contract.

Dear Minerva. Of course "Sally" did not ask my advice, she asked yours Minerva, but I just can't help but feeling that your answer was not quite as bracing as it might have been. I think I understand your position, being a married business woman yourself and a mother at that, you realize the responsibility of such an undertaking; also you feel that you must not allow your personal inclination to color your judgement. As a result, I have noticed that in your effort to be perfectly fair and unbiased, that you almost lean over backward. Now I want to say to "Sally", for goodness sake don't do it.

"Sally" tells us that she "loathes housework". I don't. I like it yet I enjoy being a business woman. Certainly I would not sign up a life contract for anything that I loathed.

That simply being in that delightful and rather irresponsible state called being "in love" will cure your dislike for housework is a fond illusion. Do not be misled, the pots and pans are exactly as greasy when you are in love as they were before.

Your idea of continuing your present work after you are married, since you are happy in it, is an excellent one. It isn't so ultra modern either, having been in operation in some homes for the past quarter of a century. I have tried it out myself for the past fifteen years. Some of the happiest couples that I know anything about are living exactly as you propose, each being engaged in some chosen line of work and employing a housekeeper at home. Also some of the nicest young people that I know, have business women for mothers.

Just why should it contribute anything toward a man's happiness because his wife washes his shirt? He can have it done better at the laundry.

I presume "Sally" that your friend is settled in some pursuit agreeable to his taste. Suppose that you demand that he give it up and take up rail-roading or preaching and see if he consents; or just suggest that he change his style of hair cut or raise a crop of whiskers. After you get his answer on these points, you might consider giving up your preferred line of work to mend his socks and bake his biscuits. "Sauce for the goose", you know "Sally".

Some years ago, an acquaintance of mine became affianced to a man who held certain strict religious views. The lady was not of his church and she was also slightly cross eyed. Now I want you to know, that she had to renounce the church of her choice, take instructions in the church of her fiancee, be re-baptised (as though it hadn't taken the first time) and after humiliating herself to that extent she still had to have her cross eyes attended to before the wedding took place.

Some years have gone by since that time and "considerable water has passed over the wheel". Her aforesaid charmer has grown fat and bald headed. She has to look at him all the time, listen to his superior (?) ideas and attend a church in which she does not believe and where she is regarded as something of an interloper who was "anxious to get a man". Some where I have read something about selling ones birth right for a mess of pottage.

Possibly I have the wrong idea, but back in 1895 when a man asked the hand of a woman in marriage, it was supposed that she exactly suited him, without any alterations being made. If not he was at liberty to look elsewhere. Because a man puts his ring on your finger "Sally" it does not follow that you should also allow him to put a ring in your nose.

I am aware that my ideas are not in accord with those of that celebrated, over-rated, jaundiced Englishman Mr. A. S. M. Hutchinson with his "High Jinks and Low Jinks" humor.

Not being a literary criterion perhaps I ought not to say this but even a cat may look at a king you know and somehow I fail to admire Mr. Hutchinson's heroes. Mark Sabre, that soft-hearted, soft-headed idol of "If Winter Comes" had a fool for a wife and he himself needed a guardian. When he got into a tight place all he could do was to shout, "Look here, look here, I say, I say". Finally a woman, a farmer sweetheart came along and rescued him from his lost and undone condition and the story ends with him clinging to her and sobbing, "My beloved, my beloved". Some hero.

Harry and Rosalie of "This Freedom" were ideally happy until their adored family began causing them trouble. Growing up through those tense days of war in England when even mature minds tottered, Hugo became a coarse young rascal unworthy of the fine mother who bore him. Doris was the modern young girl, out for a thrill, defying her mother's authority and considering her advice so much bunk.

Benji, the youngest son of the house was the only one worth saving and Hutchinson should have been ashamed of himself for killing him.

The only sin that Rosalie committed was that of being born with brains. Had any child of hers copied their mother, he or she might have developed into a person worth while. Of course Rosalie magnanimously assumes the blame for the family debacle and Harry in true masculine fashion allows her to take it. (The woman that Thou madest to be with me). According to the Hutchinson theory, had Rosalie been a dumbell instead of a smart woman, her family would have been a success.

It seems that almost any old author could have furnished a more plausible ending for the tale. Some woman with brains should take Mr. Hutchinson's story apart in the the middle and put it to rights for him.

"Bread" by C. G. Norris is a far more profitable discussion for the woman who really wants to consider both sides of the equation and it leaves one to draw ones own conclusion—Thelma.

Religion Defined.

Dear Minerva: I am sure you will grant me space to answer "Twenty-six" who seems to be as careless of accurate statement as he is apt at epithets.

Professor Allen Menzies in his "History of Religion, himself a naturalist pure and simple, does not agree with "Twenty-six" in his definition of religion. Far from being "wholly intellectual" as our friend affirms, he defines religion as: "The Worship of Unseen Powers from a Sense of Need." He denies that it is "sentiment" but affirms that is is concerned with all morals.

If "Twenty-six" has any faith whatever, he should be more frugal of such terms as "fanatics", which augurs an unsettled condition of mind concerning his own position. A calm philosophic attitude, devoid of opprobrious terms would make a better impression and lend a more respectful hearing.

He thinks that so many denominations "hedge" one "to hell and damnation", but we wonder if we could get him to emigrate to some island of the sea where there was no such place as a church or a Bible. He could find such a place, no doubt, but we wager that "Twenty-six" will take care to keep himself in a land where life and property are protected by the Book and people he reviles.

Like the shipwrecked sailor who landed on a cannibal island, and climbing a tree saw with joy the steeple of a little chapel, he too would feel safe if the flesh-eaters were all about. But Twenty-six is too smart to leave his Bible protection.

He fulminates against "so many forms of worship". Let us admit that in the beginning there was only one church and that denominationalism is a sin as St. Paul teaches in (1. Cor. 1:10-13) But in all the great cardinal doctrines of the Bible (God, Christ, sin, salvation, immortality they are a unit, with perhaps but one exception, the Unitarians, who like the Jews deny the deity of Christ.

Now does "Twenty-six" complain that from eight elemental notes in music there are infinite and varied forms ranging from "jazz" to the Ninth Symphony—the highest expression in music? Why then should he be peeved if the different churches hold in common the great doctrines, and yet have varied forms of worship? Similarly, ritualistic and democratic forms of worship are merely the marks of freedom and taste begotten of the truth in Christ.

Twenty-six doesn't know why one who believes in the oriental religions should be classed as "either an atheist, an infidel, a heathen or an uncivilized being." We shall be happy to tell him Prof. Menzies says (p. 13 Hist. Religion) that Religion and Civilization Advance Together." Where, therefore one believes in the Buddhist religion, he is an athiest, for Buddhism has no god, no sin, no immortality; where one is a disbeliever in the Bible he is an infidel or skeptic; where one's "belief is polytheistic and whose culture is rudimentary" he is a heathen, according to modern usage. We humbly exhort our "mathematical friend to forbear from becoming any one of these undesirables.

Far from wondering as to the audacity of one in claiming that Christianity is right, we wonder at the blindness of any man who actually knows conditions in lands where other conditions predominate, who does not see that of them all Christianity is the only one that blesses, and that all the rest curse mankind. Under these religions, childhood is cursed, womanhood enslaved and manhood imbruted. The religions of the East have misled some men, and more idle women, who have nothing much to do other than seeking some diversion from Indian fakirs and philosophic Swamis, but the curse of their faith in practical life is patent to the unbiased mind and the hopelessness of the millions among these pestilential and starved pestilential and starved peoples. "By their fruits ye shall know them," and the social and economic conditions are the strength of the Christian missionary's appeal.

"Twenty-six" thinks that Euclid's science of numbers is superior to the Bible. To be sure I never heard

For Any Better Beauty Aid

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have a standing offer of $1,000 for any beauty aid my experts consider better than I employ.

But every discoverer of a better help has far greater reason to bring it to me. If I adopt it, millions will use it on my advice.

So I believe that I always get the best beauty helps in existence. My formulas are constantly changing as new helps are found.

My four chief beauty helps embody 52 ingredients. They are the final result of my 40-year search for beauty and perennial youth. Please try one, for your own sake. Send coupon for the one you want.

My Youth Cream

Is a remarkable creation, combining many things. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. [illegible] to foster and protect the skin.

It comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. I use it as a night cream, also daytime as a powder base. Never is my skin without it. My velvet complexion shows what that cream can do. The cost is 60c per jar. Also in 35c tubes.

My Facial Youth

Is a liquid cleanser I owe to France. Great beauty experts the world over now advise this formula, but their price is too high for most women.

It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. The skin cannot absorb it. So it cleans to the depths, then departs. My Facial Youth will bring you new conceptions of what a clean skin means. The cost is [illegible]

White Youth Clay

A new-type clay, white, refined and dainty. Vastly different from the crude and muddy clays so many have employed.

It purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it. Removes the causes of blackheads and blemishes. Brings a rosy afterglow which amazes and delights. Combats lines and wrinkles; reduces enlarged pores.

No girl or woman can afford to omit it. It multiplies beauty. White Youth Clay costs 50c and $1.

My Hair Youth

The cause of my luxuriant hair, thick and silky, finer far than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair, dandruff, or a touch of gray.

A concentrated product combining many ingredients. I apply it with an eye dropper directly to the scalp to tone and stimulate. No man or woman will omit it when they see what Hair Youth does. The cost is [illegible] and $1 with eyedropper.

My Face Powders

They are supreme creations. No face powders you have used can compare. Mine are exquisite. They come in two types. One a heavy, clinging, cold cream powder, in square box, $1. I like that best. The other is light and fluffy, in round box, [illegible].

All toilet counters supply my beauty helps. If you send the coupon I will mail you a sample of any one you choose. Also my Beauty Book. Clip coupon now.

Should a Woman Who Loves Children Marry a Man Who Does Not Want a Family?—Could She Be Happy With the Love of Husband Alone Even Though That Love Be Mutually Ardent? — Two Sermons By Readers Are Given Today, One On Home Fires Versus the Fires of Ambition, the Other On Religion.

Of course Rosalie magnanimously assumes the blame for the family debacle and Harry in true masculine fashion allows her to take it. (The woman that Thou madest to be with me). According to the Hutchinson theory, had Rosalie been a dumbell instead of a smart woman, her family would have been a success.

It seems that almost any old author could have furnished a more plausible ending for the tale. Some woman with brains should take Mr. Hutchinson's story apart in the the middle and put it to rights for him.

"Bread" by C. G. Norris is a far more profitable discussion for the woman who really wants to consider both sides of the equation and it leaves one to draw ones own conclusion—Thelma.

Religion Defined.

Dear Minerva: I am sure you will grant me space to answer "Twenty-six" who seems to be as careless of accurate statement as he is apt at epithets.

Professor Allen Menries in his "History of Religion, himself a naturalist pure and simple, does not agree with "Twenty-six" in his definition of religion. Far from being "wholly intellectual" as our friend affirms, he defines religion as: "The Worship of Unseen Powers from a Sense of Need." He denies that it is "sentiment" but affirms that is is concerned with all morals.

If "Twenty-six" has any faith whatever, he should be more frugal of such terms as "fanatics", which augurs an unsettled condition of mind concerning his own position. A calm philosophic attitude, devoid of opprobrious terms would make a better impression and lend a more respectful hearing.

He thinks that so many denominations "hedge" one "to hell and damnation", but we wonder if we could get him to emigrate to some island of the sea where there was no such place as a church or a Bible. He could find such a place, no doubt, but we wager that "Twenty-six" will take care to keep himself in a land where life and property are protected by the Book and people he reviles.

Like the shipwrecked sailor who landed on a canibal island, and climbing a tree saw with joy the steeple of a little chapel, he too would feel safe if the flesh-eaters were all about. But Twenty-six is too smart to leave his Bible protection.

He fulminates against "so many forms of worship". Let us admit that in the beginning there was only one church and that denominationalism is a sin as St. Paul teaches in (1. Cor. 1:10-13) But in all the great cardinal doctrines of the Bible God, Christ, sin, salvation, immortality they are a unit, with perhaps but one exception, the Unitarians, who like the Jews deny the deity of Christ.

Now does "Twenty-six" complain that from eight elemental notes in music there are infinite and varied forms ranging from "jazz" to the Ninth Symphony—the highest expression in music? Why then should he be peeved if the different churches hold in common the great doctrines, and yet have varied forms of worship? Similarly, ritualistic and democratic forms of worship are merely the marks of freedom and taste begotten of the truth in Christ.

Twenty-six doesn't know why one who believes in the oriental religions should be classed as "either an atheist, an infidel, a heathen or an uncivilized being." We shall be happy to tell him Prof. Menzies says (p. 13 Hist. Religion) that Religion and Civilization Advance Together." Where, therefore one believes in the Buddhist religion, he is an athiest, for Buddhism has no god, no sin, no immortality; where one is a disbeliever in the Bible he is an infidel or skeptic; where one's "belief is polytheistic and whose culture is rudimentary" he is a heathen, according to modern usage. We humbly exhort our "mathematical friend to forbear from becoming any one of these undesirables.

Far from wondering as to the audacity of one in claiming that Christianity is right, we wonder at the blindness of any man who actually knows conditions in lands where other conditions predominate, who does not see that of them all Christianity is the only one that blesses, and that all the rest curse mankind. Under these religions, childhood is cursed, womanhood enslaved and manhood imbruted. The religions of the East have misled some men, and more idle women, who have nothing much to do other than seeking some diversion from Indian fakirs and philosophic Swamis, but the curse of their faith in practical life is patent to the unbiased mind and the hopelessness of the millions among these pestilential and starved peotilential and starved peoples, is their fruits ye shall know them," and the social and economic conditions are the strength of the Christian missionary's appeal.

"Twenty-six" thinks that Euclid's science of numbers is superior to the Bible. To be sure I never heard

For Any Better Beauty Aid

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have a standing offer of $1,000 for any beauty aid my experts consider better than I employ.

But every discoverer of a better help has far greater reason to bring it to me. If I adopt it, millions will use it on my advice.

So I believe that I always get the best beauty helps in existence. My formulas are constantly changing as new helps are found.

My four chief beauty helps embody 52 ingredients. They are the final result of my 40-year search for beauty and perennial youth. Please try one, for your own sake. Send coupon for the one you want.

My Youth Cream

Is a remarkable creation, combining many factors. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also the best helps science gave me to foster and protect the skin.

It comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. I use it as a night cream, also daytime as a powder base. Never is my skin without it. My velvet complexion shows what that cream can do. The cost is 60c per jar. Also in 35c tubes.

My Facial Youth

Is a liquid cleanser I owe to France. Great beauty experts the world over now advise this formula, but their price is too high for most women.

It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. The skin cannot absorb it. So it cleans to the depths, then departs. My Facial Youth will bring you new conceptions of what a clean skin means. The cost is 75c.

White Youth Clay

A new-type clay, white, refined and dainty. Vastly different from the crude and muddy clays so many have employed.

It purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it. Removes the causes of blackheads and blemishes. Brings a rosy afterglow which amazes and delights. Combats lines and wrinkles; reduces enlarged pores.

No girl or woman can afford to omit it. It multiplies beauty. White Youth Clay costs 50c and $1.

My Hair Youth

The cause of my luxuriant hair, thick and silky, finer far than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair, dandruff, or a touch of gray.

A concentrated product combining many ingredients. I apply it with an eye dropper directly to the scalp to tone and stimulate. No man or woman will omit it when they see what Hair Youth does. The cost is 50c and $1 with eyedropper.

My Face Powders

They are supreme creations. No face powders you have used can compare. Mine are exquisite. They come in two types. One a heavy, clinging, cold cream powder, in square box, $1. I like that best. The other is light and fluffy, in round box, 50c.

All toilet counters supply my beauty helps. If you send the coupon I will mail you a sample of any one you choose. Also my Beauty Book. Clip coupon now.

THE DISEASE OF UNHAPPINESS

In the last four centuries 37 years have been added to the average lifetime according to Dr Eugene Lyman Fiske of New York City Seven of these living years wrested from eternity were gained in the past 14 years so that at this rate there will be an addition of 12 1 2 years in the next quarter of a century

At this rate the average span of human life in 1950 if science is as successful in the next years as it has been in the last decade will be the allotted three score and ten In the sixteenth century the average lifetime was 21 years

Will this extension of human life add to the sum total of human happiness? Dr Fiske inquires I firmly believe that it will The time has come to consider unhappiness as a disease a mental disorder a faulty functioning of the brain and nervous system in meeting the demands of life

Most of us are merely nibbling at life There is a time coming when life will be one third longer and two thirds more worth living This will not come as a natural evolution but as a result of deliberate purposeful application of scientific knowledge

The data which we now have on hand indicates how far we are from having reached the golden age But the facts uncovered do give promise of its approach for we have learned that at least 60 per cent of the load of misery borne by the human race can be lifted It is due to human ignorance and neglect I do not predict a time when there will be no unhappiness or discontent but the discontent will be of a nobler order

How much is there in this for the layman?

All of us recognize those more common causes for unhappiness It does not require any unusual imagination or experience to vision the suffering of poverty There are thousands of people in this country and millions in the world who have in the bitterly cold months of the winter now drawing to a close endured the pangs of hunger for lack of food to eat the whip of cold for lack of fuel to keep them warm

A Hindu visitor to these shores at one time made the statement that millions of his countrymen had never known what it was to have over one meal a day In time these little brown men women and children became inured to the hardships of life and it is doubtful if they suffer because of the lack of sustenance considered necessary in America for happy and well-ordered life What they have sustains life if it does not satisfy their wants They go about their tasks devoutly unmoved by physical surroundings or conditions They have acquired a philosophy which permits happiness under circumstances which would mean only the most dire distress and discontent in America

Then visit the slums of some of the great cities of this country and of Europe Families are thrown together in the most crowded ill smelling quarters equipped with the most meager necessities of life It cannot be said that these people who live and die in squalor never know happiness They have their hours of supreme exaltation and joy Come those times when their souls are lifted on wings and their spirits rejoice in the goodness of God and men

Shift the scene to the rugged frontiers where men and women face the naked realities of nature Their pleasures are few and simple and yet enduring Their griefs and anxieties and worries which they face are many the hardships which they are called upon to bear so great as to challenge the stoutest heart Yet who would make bold to say that the pioneers of Nebraska and of other lands were not supremely happy in the achievement of their tasks?

Unhappiness is a disease science tells us and to conquer it is the next goal which medicine has established for itself

What a thought to warm humanity!

What an opportunity to serve mankind!

First it is to be presumed science will set about to reduce bodily ailments to the minimum Most of us will admit that the cornerstone of happiness is health Without it there can be no freedom of soul from fierce torment Having triumphed over those physical defects which record their indelible impressions upon the mind what next? Some will call it spirituality Others will be content to view it as a philosophy Certainly it has to do with the mind and the soul When that day arrives then man will be happier because his spiritual nature is more highly developed or he has acquired a richer philosophy of life He will have learned to curb angry passions to think kinder thoughts and to perform more generous deeds This may not be the radical view but even cold calculating medical science has come in more recent years to consider to a larger degree the human element as apart from the body

NEBRASKA'S FIRE WASTE

In a bulletin which has just been sent out by the National Board of Fire Underwriters the people of Nebraska are given a few figures which they would do well to ponder over And not only do these figures call for serious thought they likewise demand vigorous action for they show that while the grand total of fire losses in the United States for the year 1923 amounted to $535 3?2 78? those in the state of Nebraska for the same period mounted to $5 307 884 or approximately 10 per cent of the whole Nebraska was twenty seventh among the forty eight states of the union

The wastage in Nebraska was practically doubled in five years the record for 1918 being $2 088 078 and the increase amounting to $2 619 806 It is well known that this state doubled in neither population nor property during the five years under consideration The obvious answer is—Negligence There are twenty so called originating causes for fires and the statistics compiled show that of the loss in this state $1 [illegible] 926 comes under the heading Matches Smoking This is almost 1[illegible] per cent of all the loss and it is followed by Spontaneous Combustion which claims $[illegible] 403 of the tangible property of Nebraskans

A third classification Stoves Furnaces Boilers and Their Pipes took no less than $[illegible] 452 of wealth and all of these are properly designated strictly preventable or partly preventable and imply negligence or carelessness upon the part of some person or persons Fire engineers declare that fully 75 per cent of the country's fire destruction always is clearly avoidable

And fire loss is total loss notwithstanding the fact that the owner of the burned property may be partly indemnified by insurance companies The property is gone It has vanished from the assessment rolls and the tax on all other property is correspondingly higher Then there is the cost of extinguishing all these fires which must of course be borne by the general public resulting in a still greater enhancement of taxation

This is pure waste and it is all the more regrettable because such a large proportion of it could be avoided by the exercise of proper care

NO MORE SKELETON BILLS

Attorney General Spillman's ruling that skeleton bills' introduced in the legislature have no legal status has knocked the props from under that particular attempt to set aside the constitution of Nebraska The attorney general has thereby rendered a valuable service to the state and its people It is not likely that any such procedure will be undertaken in future sessions of the lawmaking assembly

The only purpose of a 'skeleton bill' is to evade that provision in the constitution which limits the presentation of bills by members of the house and senate to the first 20 days of the legislative term Somebody conceived the idea that a number and title with the clause Be it enacted and nothing else but blank space could be handed in during the 20 day period and filled out later with whatever the introducer wished to put into it The practice started two years ago with three or four measures of an emergency nature This year some 40 or 50 skeletons' made their appearance Probably the next session would have brought hundreds of them.

This farcical system and the abuses likely to develop from it constituted a real menace to the welfare of Nebraska The attorney general's opinion has seemingly removed that prospect. It has put misguided legislators back on the right track and compelled them to respect the constitution.

The 20-day clause was put into the organic instrument for a purpose That was to insure that the latter part of each legislative session would be devoted to constructive work and serious consideration of proposed laws instead of giving the solons unlimited time for drafting additional bills

Of course either branch of the legislature may amend any bill before it or even substitute another bill on the same subject That allows plenty of leeway for incorporating new ideas or suggestions as they arise which may be deemed meritorious A bill when introduced does not have to be a finished product It should however, contain sufficient substance to show that the introducer had something definite in mind when it was drafted

A NEW MOFFAT TUNNEL PROBLEM

The Moffat tunnel, to be the longest railroad tunnel in America has met with an obstacle that is likely to tax its engineers to their greatest skill

Though tubes have been driven under rivers in this case water from Crater lake 13 000 above the tunnel and on top of the Colorado continental divide, has begun to seep into the tunnel at an alarming rate The whole of Crater lake is now drained and no serious results have been seen but as soon as the spring thaw arrives water may rush in so madly that workmen and their projects might be destroyed

Therefore the engineers are moving swiftly to put a plug in the leak

The railroad and not the contracting company will stand losers for this contingency because it was the railroad which guaranteed against just such mishaps as this and thus was able to obtain a much lower bid for the routine work of the project The present circumstance is one that may well eat into the big guarantee fund

But if this difficulty is overcome as hundreds of men gnawing into the rock from either side of the divide claim the Moffat tunnel will have placed Denver on a direct line to the Pacific coast and consequently afford residents as far west as Nebraska a more easy access to some portions of the west

When the Missouri Pacific took over the assets of the Moffat company, which had already swallowed the fortunes of its founder and several successors it was expected that the Moffat would connect with the Denver & Rio Grande and thus make the long desired route to the coast complete

The trouble in Moffat tunnel really is more serious for Denver than would be the discontinuance of main line service from the east and Denver stands ready to give still more honor then to the engineers who vow to conquer if conquer they do

LONGWORTH AS SPEAKER

In his inaugural address Calvin Coolidge directed attention to the importance of party government Failure to support those principles which the party in power advocated he said led to confusion in government

Entertaining those views the recent election of Nicholas Longworth as speaker of the house should not occasion surprise He has been the most devoted of party regulars Since 1903 the new speaker has been elected to every congress with a single exception That was in 1913 15 Surely more striking evidence of his unfaltering fidelity to party could not be desired His lone defeat resulted from his decision to follow his illustrious father in law into the Bull Moose camp Instead Speaker Longworth elected to throw his fortunes with the Taft crowd even though he knew it would cost him the seat which he occupied in congress

Still there are many traits in the Longworth personality which especially commend his election Because he has been a faithful follower of the political philosophy that in party government regularity is the method of great good does not imply that he is blindly partisan He may be expected to preside over the deliberations of the house fairly and honestly He has personal charm, affability and good nature He has been in congress long enough to know how to accomplish the greatest results in the shortest possible time The changes which have shorn the speakership of much of the importance which it formerly possessed calls for conciliatory powers rather than the autocratic and unyielding hand of old Mr Longworth is essentially a compromiser willing to give and to take He should prove of material assistance to President Coolidge in carrying forward his program

With Longworth as speaker of the house and Senator Curtis as the president's spokesman in the senate the question of party regularity is certain to play a more important part in legislative action at the next session of congress

STILL ANOTHER WONDER

Though unestimated millions heard the president's inaugural address by radio and made up a larger audience than ever before listened to a speech of any kind the wonder of this event lay less in the instantaneous transmission of sound perhaps than in the almost as rapid sending of pictures

The millions who listened to the chief executive of the United States speak to them from out of the air had become used to such procedure Most of them had heard speeches in a similar manner night after night for the past few years Some of them have even heard voices from Europe and few would be put out of countenance by hearing sounds from any part of the world

With pictures it is different Newspaper readers are accustomed to waiting a few days for the visual evidence of some great event at some distant point about which they have read The first views have been sent by fastest trains and by airplanes but in any case a considerable time must elapse before their arrival

This time the condition was changed The inaugural took place at 11 o clock eastern standard time and less than an hour later the early editions of California afternoon newspapers were printing reproductions by the thousands of photographs snapped as Calvin Coolidge raised his hand

The feat was made possible by an invention announced only a few months passed It was so far from perfection at that time however that pictures transmitted were extremely hazy in outline and not at all adequate for practical purposes But in those few months engineers have wrought on their work so skillfully that the pictures are almost as perfect as can be reproduced in an ordinary newspaper engraving

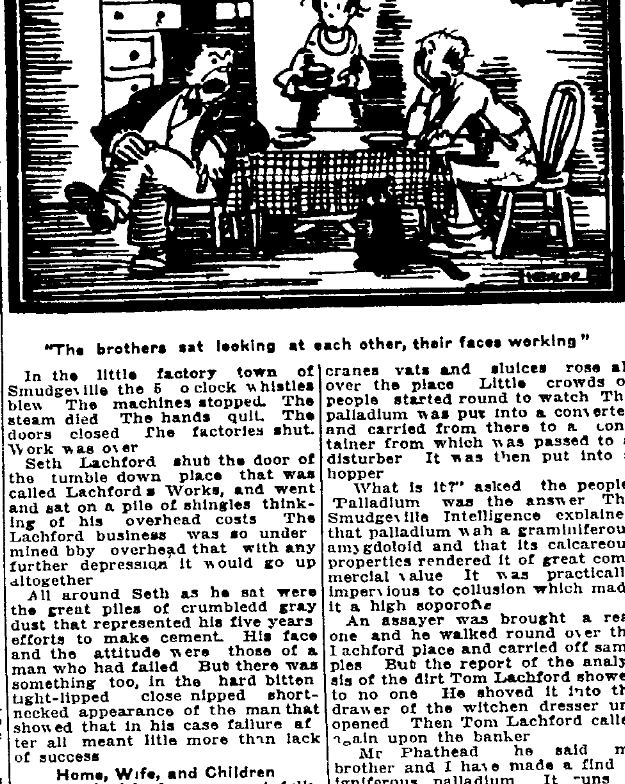
PRUNING A PROMOTER

The Modern Mode In a Business Story of Virtue Seasoned With Gumption



"The brothers sat looking at each other, their faces working"

In the little factory town of Smudgeville the 6 o clock whistles blew The machines stopped The steam died The hands quit The doors closed The factories shut. Work was over

Seth Lachford shut the door of the tumble down place that was called Lachford s Works, and went and sat on a pile of shingles thinking of his overhead costs The Lachford business was so undermined bby overhead that with any further depression it would go up altogether

All around Seth as he sat were the great piles of crumbled gray dust that represented his five years efforts to make cement. His face and the attitude were those of a man who had failed But there was something too, in the hard bitten tight-lipped close nipped short-necked appearance of the man that showed that in his case failure after all meant litle more than lack of success

Home, Wife, and Children

Seth Lachford rose painfully from the bunch of shingles locked the door of the mean place that he called his Works, and walked across the lot to the house he called his home where the woman he called his wife was cooking supper for the things he called his children

Things any better today? she queried

Seth head shook dejectedly

Are your overhead experses per unit of output still disproportionate to the selling cost of the product? asked the sad eyed woman as she helped her husband to the fried potatoes

Yes Min desponded Seth the capital cost of operation shows an curve right along

I see said Min thoughtfully as she poured out molasses for the children and each further increment of outlay merely agglomerates your differential

It does Seth glumped

Oh Seth suddenly Min's face sanguinated I forgot there's a letter from brother Tom He'll be here in the morning and he says he can straighten everything out

The Promoting Brother

Next morning Tom Lachford, promoter blew into Smudgeville and together Tom and Seth walked round the plant and looked at the crumblled piles of gray dust

The brothers were a contrast—Seth bent and hesitant Tom square built bull chested ox necked box jawed pop eyed—in short a hundred and fifty per cent American all through

See here Seth said Tom you've tried five years to make cement and you've failed?

Seth ingurigitated without speaking

Well look here ' Tom went on I've got an idea and it's a big thing—make a fortune out of these piles of dirt But first of all I want a thousand dollars cash

I haven't got it exhaled Seth and the bank won't lend it

Pshaw! said Tom show me the way to that bank!

Equating the Personal Equation

Tom Lachford walked straight to theSmudgeville First National bank straight into and straight through it to the managers room There was something compellig about the man something dynamic in the way he sat down and something almost totanic or of teutonic in the way he laid his hat on the table

See here Mr Phathead he said I want the loan of a thousand dollars

The manager spasmed On what security? he winced

None said Lachford

The manager brightened

You offer no collateral at all? he said

Not a cent said Tom except my personality

Good said the banker delighted You shall have it The personal element Mr Lachford has become the ne plus ultra of business I recognize in you one of those full blooded high pepped long sighted wide eyed men who are entitled to bank loans This bank will back you

A Course of Treatment

That night Seth and Min and Tom set in consultation over their buttermilk and pancakes at the supper table

What do you mean to do with the money Tom? asked Min

Tom buttermilked a minute and then Going to get a gang of men and treat that dirt

Treat it

Yes treat it run it into vats and out again sluce it pulverize it sling it around —anything—

Seth stopped pancaking and ear-lifted

What's that for? he sexuded

I'll tell you said Tom I'm going to raise bonds on it and float a company and make a clean up

But it's only dirt said Seth Somehow we failed every time to make it harden into cement

I don't want cement said the promoter Dirt'll do Here's the idea I'll have an assayer come and make an assay I don't care what he calls it because the name I've settled on is palladium We'll announce a find of plladium and from a company to work it

Capitalization and Destination

Min looked up from the little pile of children's clothing that she was sewing Issuing common stock she said as she bit off a piece of thread on a basis of prospective earnings capitalized

But what then? said Seth If we sell the stock and it's no good?

We don't need to worry We sell it and then we clear out

Where to?

The sad eyed woman looked up from the little garment in her lap Havana she said

Within a week it was known all over Smudgeville that heavy deposits of palladium had been found on the old Lachford place Gangs of men were at work Derricks cranes vats and sluices rose all over the place Little crowds of people stared round to watch The palladium was put into a converter and carried from there to a container from which was passed to a hopper

What is it?' asked the people The Smudgeville Intelligence explained that palladium was a graminiferous amygdoloid and that its calcareous properties rendered it of great commercial value It was practically impervious to collusion which made it a high soporofic

An assayer was brought a real one and he walked round over the Lachford place and carried off samples But the report of the analysis of the dirt Tom Lachford showed to no one He shoved it into the drawer of the witchen dresser unopened Then Tom Lachford called again upon the banker

Mr Phathead he said my brother and I have made a find of igniferous palladium It runs at least 48 per cent to the kilowatt and we want to raise money for incorporation and material

Mr Lachford said the banker I congratulate you on your discovery I recognize in you one of those wide visioned broad sighted frog eyed men that make this country what it is How much money do you want?

Ten thousand dollars said Tom

The Moral of Machinery

That evening when Tom came home he told Seth and Min that he had arranged the incorporation at thirty thousand dollars and was going to order ten thousand dollars worth of machinery

What machinery?' asked his brother

Any machinery said the promoter It doesn't matter as long as it's bulky

The mere assemblage and erection of machinery added Min thoughtfully as she helped the brothers to fried eggplant conveys to the investor a guarantee of bona fides

But after supper Seth Lachford went to the kitchen dresser and he took out of it the assayer's report upon the dirt that lay in an envelope and for a long while stod lookig at the document with a frown upon his face See here Tom I'll not sell stuff like that he evolved slowly No sir I'll go broke before I'll sell it

The brothers sat looking at each other their faces working

If you don't said Tom we owe the bank $15 000 and it's ruin

I'll meet it said Seth his face still working

If you do said Tom his face stopping working You'll meet it in the penitentiary

Tom said Seth there's been Lachfords on this place for four generations and never a thief among them

To Save Tom From Himself

For two weeks after that the work at the palladium deposits went on and the Lachfords walked around the plant, avoiding each other—Tom keen and restless Seth boody his eyes ever on the dirt

Only once Tom spoke to Seth They've placed the first lot of my shares at par he said and they can sell more they say Give me your shares now and Min's and we'll sell them and get out

Seth turned on his heel and without a word went to the house

He called his wife aside He took out the assayer's paper opened it and spread it out before her Tom says he'll sell your shares for ten thousand dollars Min Are you going to sell off that stuff and he tapped the paper fiercely to your friends and neighbors people of your own town?"

Min looked at the document The chemical analysis was beyond her grasp but the single item at the bottom estimated commercial value was plain enough for a child

No Seth ! sheh said I can't do it It ain't right

Look Min Seth went on I want my name to stand right in this town If Tom tries to sell out those shares could you get ten thousand ddollars from your folk and buy them?

I might said Min I doubt Pa could raise it but if you want it Seth I'll try

Share and Share

The next day Min started off to her folks in Pennsylvania to raise ten thousand dollars and on the same morning the shares of Amalgamated Palladium Limited went on the local exchange as a suburb security aind there was great excitement in financial circles in Smudgeville The shares opened at 80 rose straight to par reacted to 70 sank down to 20 lay again in four hops At 2 p m they were reported as restless at 3 buoyant and at closing time strong with an undercurrent of weakness

That night Tom Lachford packed his grip to leave by the midnight express bound towards Havana

I'm off Seth he said say goodbye to Min when she comes back If you're wise you'll get out quick The shares will break tomorrow and then—

I'm not quitting Tom said Seth goodby

Min came back two days later

I've got the money Seth she said Pa raised it partly on the steers and the rest on a mortgage

Too late I guess Min said Seth The shares went to five hundred yesterday and this morning they're hold out for a thousand dollars a share

Virtue and Its Reward

It was a week later that Tom Lachford sat on the Colorado Claro hotel at Havana with a cocktail in front of him and $4 000 in Cuban money to his credit And it was there he got a copy of a home paper sent him by mail He opened it with trembling hands looking for Seth's ruin And instead of it he saw a big headline saying that Amalgamated Palladium was selling at two thousand a share and his hands trembled more Last of all he read a two column account of the discovery of graphite on the Lachford place and he shook like a leaf all over

Meantime Min and Seth were sitting over their buttermilk in the kitchen living room adding up figures

I can't cipher it out said Seth but it's millions all right

And what is the stuff anyway asked Min if it ain't palladium?

Graphite it's called said Seth I always noticed those black streaks in the crushings I guess that's it I'm glad I didn't sell If I could have bought back those shares I meant to give them to Tom didn't I Min?

Oh certainly said Min so did I and I'm glad too we didn't sell I felt bad about it all along Seth and when I saw that assayer's paper where it said commercial value ten thousand dollars a ton a light broke in on me and I saw it wasn't right

Charles E. Mitchell Began Banking Career After Meeting New York Financier Who Got Him To Forsake Manufacturing Business.

Oakleigh Thorne saw in him the quality of Genius and ultimately He Rose to be Head of the Biggest Bank in America. By Preston Wright.

By PRESTON WRIGHT.

At No 55 Wall Street, New York in a massive temple like edifice, is housed the largest financial institution in America, the National City Bank

Dominating the wide spread ramifications of the business which centers behind the pillared front of the institution is a man still in his forty-seventh year

Strangely enough this man Charles E Mitchell entered upon his banking career after he had been well launched in an entirely different business

Until he made a trip from Chicago to New York in 1906, Mitchell had no thought of becoming a banker, in the metropolis however he met a man who perceived in him a genius for large financial operations Through him he was diverted from his original field of activity

Oakleigh Thorne president of the Trust Company of America had his judgment of Mitchell fully vindicated The latter in less than fifteen years arrived at the very pinnacle of Wall street success

At the time he met Oakleigh Thorne, Charles E Mitchell was assistant to President Enos M Barton of the Western Electric Co in Chicago

Among the products of this concern were large switchboards for power houses They were not manufactured by the Western Electric but were assembled from parts provided by various concerns It occurred to Mitchell — and this was merely one of several instances of the initiative and resourcefulness which had made him President Barton's assistant at twenty nine—that there would be a big advantage in combining these companies

President Barton endorsed the idea and at the proper time Mitchell came east to lay the plan before Oakleigh Thorne

This negotiation revealed Mitchell to Thorne as a vigorous and incisive personality with mental qualifications of high degree He questioned the younger man about his previous career When the conversations had reached a certain stage he surprised his visitor with a startling question?

How would you like he said to come down to New York as my assistant?

And without waiting for an answer he continued

This is the day of consolidations in business I'm up to my neck in them I am well acquainted with the financial problems involved but your industrial training would be very helpful to me What about it?

Mitchell requested time Thorpe had approved his consolidation plan so he went back to Chicago to report his success and to inform President Barton of the new offer The Western Electric executive had developed and sent more than one young man to success in the world of business and his assistant knew that whatever advice he received from his chief it would be worth following

Go ahead and good luck to you said Barton You are ambitious and there you can set a pace to suit yourself Here you can move no faster than the company moves"

Mitchell went east and began his banking work just in time to receive a baptism of fire The year 1907 brought a panic Many banks found themselves in difficulties and the Trust Company of America had trouble in weathering through That it did so was in considerable part due to the efforts of its recruit from Chicago

He in turn gained from the experience a knowledge of the details of banking and finance which was invaluable In 1911 he organized the investment banking firm of C E Mitchell & Co., which had a remarkable success He attracted so much attention that in 1916 he liquidated his own concern and took over the direction of the National City Co the investment corporation affiliated with the National City Bank He was elected president of the National City Co that same year Five years later in 1921 he also became president of the National City Bank In addition he now is chairman of the board of the International Banking Corporation owned by the bank which conducts branches all over the world

As to the earlier part of Mitchell's career—the portion during which he gained the experience that fitted him for his place with the Trust Company of America—it contains abundant proof that if he had not become a great banker he would have been a great manufacturer

He left Amherst college with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1898 his twenty second year His finances were low and learning that the Western Electric company was taking on college men and giving them apprenticeship courses in its factory he came to the New York branch office and asked for a job He was given one at $10 a week in Chicago

He almost went broke getting to that city but soon after he got on the job his future was assured He studied book keeping at night to fit himself for promotion This came with a job in the credit department He spent more night hours studying commercial law and became assistant manager The manager was transfered to Kansas City and Mitchell got his job The company was losing on its equipments business but the credit manager as expeditiously as possible remedied this situation His good work earned the praise of President Barton and in due time he became the latter's assistant

A City of Goodwill

Lincoln Neb March 6

To the editor of The Lincoln Star Something is stirring in Lincoln The fight is on for a better Lincoln and by this we mean a city of Goodwill where not only the commercial interests of our business men but the physical and spiritual well being of all our citizens including especially the under privileged ones is a matter of deep concern Now is the time for all men and women who believe that a Society of Goodwill is attainable to see to it that only persons who are unmistakably socially minded are intrusted with the administration of the affairs of the city

The question of values is continually coming to the front when funds belonging to the city or to an organization are to be expended If always the deciding question were Is this investment going to bring the greatest return in human happiness to the citizens of this community money would often flow into different channels from those originally contemplated

No one can question the writer's interest in the erection of adequate buildings for church public education and civic welfare purposes but investments in stone and mortar must often be postponed until certain investments in human lives have been made To be specific when the plans for the new animal shelter were reviewed a short time ago I was minded to ask if it wouldn't be possible to plan for a children's ward where some of Lincoln's children who are living in habitations hardly fit for dogs might be sheltered until employment could be found for their fathers by the socially-minded citizens who could be persuaded to tackle the problem Is this a fair question? Think it over This is the time when the men and women of our churches are being asked to really evaluate their church membership in terms of service activities and it is the duty of the Council of Social Agencies of which the Council of Churches is a member to enlist men and women in a vigorous campaign for healthier citizens All for each and each for all is a perfectly good slogan When it does become the basis of our efforts we will have high standards for the housing of industrial workers wholesome recreation for all our children and so the day nursery which will make provision for the little children of mothers who have to work a Sunset Home for the aged who are nearing the end of life's journey homeless and alone an adequate plan for surrounding the unprotected girls of our city with the right influences so that they will be pretty sure to go straight instead of otherwise These are just a few of the things we may look forward to if the socially minded folks of Lincoln will fill their community chest and their church and their club treasuries with sacrificial gifts and the one hundred per cent stewardship of their time talents and m n

THE DISEASE OF UNHAPPINESS.

In the last four centuries 37 years have been added to the average lifetime," according to Dr. Eugene Lyman Fiske, of New York City. Seven of these living years wrested from eternity were gained in the past 14 years; so that at this rate, there will be an addition of 12 1-2 years in the next quarter of a century.

At this rate the average span of human life in 1950, if science is as successful in the next 25 years as it has been in the last decade, will be the allotted three score and ten. In the sixteenth century the average lifetime was 21 years.

"Will this extension of human life add to the sum total of human happiness?" Dr. Fiske inquires. "I firmly believe that it will. The time has come to consider unhappiness as a disease, a mental disorder, a faulty functioning of the brain and nervous system in meeting the demands of life.

"Most of us are merely nibbling at life. There is a time coming when life will be one-third longer and two-thirds more worth living. This will not come as a natural evolution, but as a result of deliberate, purposeful application of scientific knowledge.

"The data which we now have on hand indicates how far we are from having reached the golden age. But the facts uncovered do give promise of its approach, for we have learned that at least 60 per cent of the load of misery borne by the human race can be lifted; it is due to human ignorance and neglect. I do not predict a time when there will be no unhappiness or discontent but the discontent will be of a nobler order.

How much is there in this for the layman?

All of us recognize those more common causes for unhappiness. It does not require any unusual imagination or experience to vision the suffering of poverty. There are thousands of people in this country and millions in the world who have in the bitterly cold months of the winter now drawing to a close endured the pangs of hunger for lack of food to eat the whip of cold for lack of fuel to keep them warm.

A Hindu visitor to these shores at one time made the statement that millions of his countrymen had never known what it was to have over one meal a day. In time these little brown men, women and children became inured to the hardships of life and it is doubtful if they suffer because of the lack of sustenance considered necessary in America for happy and well-ordered life. What they have sustains life if it does not satisfy their wants. They go about their tasks devoutly, unmoved by physical surroundings or conditions. They have acquired a philosophy which permits happiness under circumstances which would mean only the most dire distress and discontent in America.

Then visit the slums of some of the great cities of this country and of Europe. Families are thrown together in the most crowded, ill-smelling quarters, equipped with the most meager necessities of life. It cannot be said that these people who live and die in squalor never know happiness. They have their hours of supreme exaltation and joy. Come those times when their souls are lifted on wings and their spirits rejoice in the goodness of God and men.

Shift the scene to the rugged frontiers where men and women face the naked realities of nature. Their pleasures are few and simple and yet enduring. Their griefs and anxieties and worries which they face are many; the hardships which they are called upon to bear so great as to challenge the stoutest heart. Yet, who would make bold to say that the pioneers of Nebraska, and of other lands were not supremely happy in the achievement of their tasks?

Unhappiness is a disease, science tells us, and to conquer it is the next goal which medicine has established for itself.

What a thought to warm humanity!

What an opportunity to serve mankind!

First, it is to be presumed, science will set about to reduce bodily ailments to the minimum. Most of us will admit that the cornerstone of happiness is health. Without it there can be no freedom of soul from fierce torment. Having triumphed over those physical defects which record their indelible impressions upon the mind, what next? Some will call it spirituality. Others will be content to view it as a philosophy. Certainly it has to do with the mind and the soul. When that day arrives then, man will be happier because his spiritual nature is more highly developed or he has acquired a richer philosophy of life. He will have learned to curb angry passions; to think kinder thoughts and to perform more generous deeds. This may not be the radical view but even cold, calculating medical science has come in more recent years to consider to a larger degree the human element as apart from the body.

NEBRASKA'S FIRE WASTE.

In a bulletin which has just been sent out by the National Board of Fire Underwriters the people of Nebraska are given a few figures which they would do well to ponder over. And not only do these figures call for serious thought, they likewise demand vigorous action, for they show that while the grand total of fire losses in the United States for the year 1923 amounted to $535,372,782, those in the state of Nebraska for the same period amounted to $5,307,884, or approximately 10 per cent of the whole. Nebraska was twenty-seventh among the forty-eight states of the union.

Fire wastage in Nebraska was practically doubled in five years, the record for 1918 being $2,688,078 and the increase amounting to $2,619,806. It is well known that this state doubled in neither population nor property during the five years under consideration. The obvious answer is—Negligence. There are twenty so-called originating causes for fires and the statistics compiled show that of the loss in this state $472,926 comes under the heading, "Matches-Smoking." This is almost 10 per cent off all the loss and it is followed by "Spontaneous Combustion," which claimed $278,403 of the tangible property of Nebraskans.

A third classification, "Stoves, Furnaces, Boilers and Their Pipes," took no less than $222,482 of wealth and all of these are properly designated "strictly preventable" or "partly preventable" and imply negligence or carelessness upon the part of some person or persons. Fire engineers declare that fully 75 per cent of the country's fire destruction always is clearly avoidable.

And fire loss is total loss, notwithstanding the fact that the owner of the burned property may be partly indemnified by insurance companies. The property is gone. It has vanished from the assessment rolls and the tax on all other property is correspondingly higher. Then there is the cost of extinguishing all these fires, which must of course be borne by the general public, resulting in a still greater enhancement of taxation.

Fire is pure waste, and it is all the more regrettable because such a great proportion of it could be avoided by the exercise of proper care.

NO MORE SKELETON BILLS.

Attorney General Spillman's ruling that "skeleton bills" introduced in the legislature have no legal status has knocked the props from under that particular attempt to set aside the constitution of Nebraska. The attorney general has thereby rendered a valuable service to the state and its people. It is not likely that any such procedure will be undertaken in future sessions of the lawmaking assembly.

The only purpose of a "skeleton bill" is to evade that provision in the constitution which limits the presentation of bills by members of the house and senate to the first 20 days of the legislative term. Somebody conceived the idea that a number and title, with the clause "Be it enacted," and nothing else but blank space, could be handed in during the 20-day period and filled out later with whatever the introducer wished to put into it. The practice started two years ago with three or four measures of an emergency nature. This year some 40 or 50 "skeletons" made their appearance. Probably the next session would have brought hundreds of them.

This farcical system and the abuses likely to develop from it constituted a real menace to the welfare of Nebraska. The attorney general's opinion has seemingly removed that prospect. It has put misguided legislators back on the right track and compelled them to respect the constitution.

The 20-day clause was put into the organic instrument for a purpose. That was to insure that the latter part of each legislative session would be devoted to constructive work and serious consideration of proposed laws, instead of giving the solons unlimited time for drafting additional bills.

Of course, either branch of the legislature may amend any bill before it, or even substitute another bill on the same subject. That allows plenty of leeway for incorporating new ideas or suggestions as they arise, which may be deemed meritorious. A bill, when introduced, does not have to be a finished product. It should, however, contain sufficient substance to show that the introducer had something definite in mind when it was drafted.

A NEW MOFFAT TUNNEL PROBLEM.

The Moffat tunnel, to be the longest railroad tunnel in America, has met with an obstacle that is likely to tax its engineers to their greatest skill.

Though tubes have been driven under rivers, in this case water from Crater lake, 13,000 above the tunnel and on top of the Colorado continental divide, has begun to seep into the tunnel at an alarming rate. The whole of Crater lake is now drained and no serious results have been seen, but as soon as the spring thaw arrives, water may rush in so madly that workmen and their projects might be destroyed.

Therefore, the engineers are moving swiftly to put a plug in the leak.

The railroad and not the contracting company will stand losers for this contingency, because it was the railroad which guaranteed against just such mishaps as this, and thus was able to obtain a much lower bid for the routine work of the project. The present circumstance is one that may well eat into the big guarantee fund.

But if this difficulty is overcome, as hundreds of men gnawing into the rock from either side of the divide claim, the Moffat tunnel will have placed Denver on a direct line to the Pacific coast, and consequently afford residents as far west as Nebraska a more easy access to some portions of the west.

When the Missouri Pacific took over the assets of the Moffat company, which had already swallowed the fortunes of its founder and several successors, it was expected that the Moffat would connect with the Denver & Rio Grande and thus make the long desired route to the coast complete.

The trouble in Moffat tunnel really is more serious for Denver than would be the discontinuance of main line service from the east, and Denver stands ready to give still more honor, then, to the engineers who vow to conquer, if conquer they do.

LONGWORTH AS SPEAKER.

In his inaugural address Calvin Coolidge directed attention to the importance of party government. Failure to support those principles which the party in power advocated, he said, led to confusion in government.

Entertaining those views, the recent election of Nicholas Longworth as speaker of the house should not occasion surprise. He has been the most devoted of party regulars. Since 1903, the new speaker has been elected to every congress with a single exception. That was in 1913-15. Surely more striking evidence of his unfaltering fidelity to party could not be desired. His lone defeat resulted from his decision to follow his illustrious father-in-law into the Bull Moose camp. Instead Speaker Longworth elected to throw his fortunes with the Taft crowd even though he knew it would cost him the seat which he occupied in congress.

Still there are many traits in the Longworth personality which especially commend his election. Because he has been a faithful follower of the political philosophy that in party government regularity is the method of great good does not imply that he is blindly partisan. He may be expected to preside over the deliberations of the house fairly and honestly. He has personal charm, affability and good nature. He has been in congress long enough to know how to accomplish the greatest results in the shortest possible time. The changes which have shorn the speakership of much of the importance which it formerly possessed calls for conciliatory powers rather than the autocratic and unyielding hand of old. Mr. Longworth is essentially a compromiser; willing to give and to take. He should prove of material assistance to President Coolidge in carrying forward his program.

With Longworth as speaker of the house and Senator Curtis as the president's spokesman in the senate, the question of party regularity is certain to play a more important part in legislative action at the next session of congress.

STILL ANOTHER WONDER.

Though unestimated millions heard the president's inaugural address by radio and made up a larger audience than ever before listened to a speech of any kind, the wonder of this event lay less in the instantaneous transmission of sound, perhaps, than in the almost as rapid sending of pictures.

The millions, who listened to the chief executive of the United States speak to them from out of the air had become used to such procedure. Most of them had heard speeches in a similar manner night after night for the past few years. Some of them have even heard voices from Europe, and few would be put out of countenance by hearing sounds from any part of the world.

With pictures it is different. Newsaper readers are accustomed to waiting a few days for the visual evidence of some great event at some distant point about which they have read. The first views have been sent by fastest trains, and by airplanes, but in any case a considerable time must elapse before their arrival.

This time, the condition was changed. The inaugural took place at 11 o'clock, eastern standard time, and less than an hour later the early editions of California afternoon newspapers were printing reproductions by the thousands of photographs snapped as Calvin Coolidge raised his hand.

The feat was made possible by an invention announced only a few months passed. It was so far from perfection at that time, however, that pictures transmitted were extremely hazy in outline and not at all adequate for practical purposes. But in those few months, engineers have wrought on their work so skillfully that the pictures are almost as perfect as can be reproduced in an ordinary newspaper engraving.

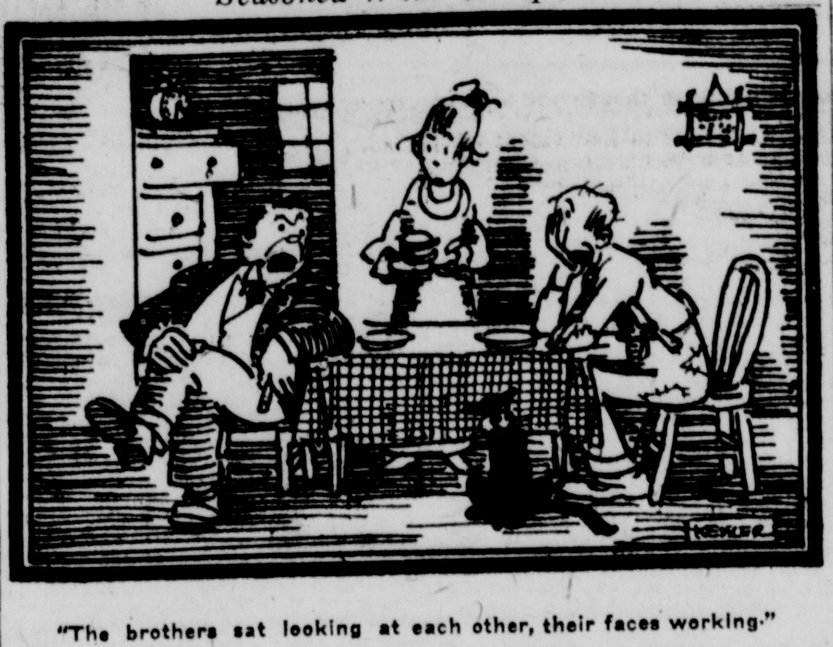
PRUNING A PROMOTER

The Modern Mode In a Business Story of Virtue Seasoned With Gumption



"The brothers sat looking at each other, their faces working."

In the little factory town of Smudgeville the 5 o'clock whistles blew. The machines stopped. The steam died. The hands quit. The doors closed. The factories shut. Work was over.

Seth Lachford shut the door of the tumble-down place that was called Lachford's Works, and went and sat on a pile of shingles, thinking of his overhead costs. The Lachford business was so undermined bby overhead that with any further depression it would go up altogether.

All around Seth as he sat were the great piles of crumbledd gray dust that represented his five years' efforts to make cement. His face and the attitude were those of a man who had failed. But there was something, too, in the hard-bitten, tight-lipped, close-nipped, short-necked appearance of the man that showed that in his case failure, after all, meant litle more than lack of success.

Home, Wife, and Children.

Seth Lachford, rose, painfully, from the bunch of shingles, locked the door of the mean place that he called his Works, and walked across the lot to the house he called his home, where the woman he called his wife was cooking supper for the things he called his children.

"Things any better today?" she queried.

Seth head-shook dejectedly.

"Are your overhead expenses per unit of output still disproportionate to the selling cost of the product?" asked the sad-eyed woman as she helped her husband to the fried potatoes.

"Yes, Min," desponded Seth, "the capital cost of operation shows an curve right along."

"I see," said Min, thoughtfully, as she poured out molasses for the children, "and each further increment of outlay merely agglomerates your differential."

"It does," Seth glumped.

"Oh, Seth," suddenly Min's face sanguinated, "I forgot, there's a letter from brother Tom. He'll be here in the morning, and he says he can straighten everything out."

The Promoting Brother.

Next morning, Tom Lachford, promoter, blew into Smudgeville, and together Tom and Seth walked round the "plant" and looked at the crumblled piles of gray dust.

The brothers were a contrast—Seth bent and hesitant, Tom square built, bull-chested, ox-necked, box-jawed, pop-eyed—in short, a hundred and fifty per cent American all through.

"See here, Seth," said Tom, "you've tried five years to make cement and you've failed?"

Seth ingurigitated without speaking.

"Well, look here," Tom went on. "I've got an idea and it's a big thing—make a fortune out of these piles of dirt. But, first of all I want a thousand dollars casn."

"I haven't got it," exhaled Seth, "and the bank won't lend it."

"Pshaw!!" said Tom, "show me the way to that bank!

Equating the Personal Equation.

Tom Lachford walked straight to theSmudgeville First National bank, straight into, and straight through it to the managers room. There was something compellig about the man, something dynamic in the way he sat down, and something almost totanic or of teutonic in the way he laid his hat on the table.

"See here, Mr. Phathead," he said, "I want the loan of a thousand dollars."

The manager spasmed. "On what security?" he winced.

"None," said Lachford.

The manager brightened.

"You offer no collateral at all?" he said.

"Not a cent," said Tom, "except my personality."

"Good!!" said the banker delighted. "You shall have it. The personal element, Mr. Lachford, has become the ne plus ultra of business. I recognize in you one of those full-blooded, high-pepped, long-sighted, wide-eyed men who are entitled to bank loans. This bank will back you."

A Course of Treatment.

That night Seth and Min and Tom set in consultation over their buttermilk and pancakes at the supper table.

"What do you mean to do with the money, Tom?" asked Min.

Tom buttermilked a minute, and then, "Going to get a gang of men and treat that dirt."

"Treat it?"

"Yes, treat it, run it into vats and out again, sluce it, pulverize it, sling it around—anything—"

Seth stopped pancaking and ear-lifted.

"What's that for?" he eexuded.

"I'll tell you," said Tom, "I'm going to raise bonds on it and float a company and make a clean-up."

"But it's only dirt!" said Seth, "somehow, we failed every time to make it harden into cement.'

"I don't want cement," said the promoter. "Dirt'll do. Here's the idea. I'll have an assayer come and make an assay. I don't care what he calls it, because the name I've settled on is palladium. We'll announce a find of plladium and from a company to work it."

Capitalization and Destination.

Min looked up from the little pile of children's clothing that she was sewing. "Issuing common stock,," she said, as she bit off a piece of thread, "on a basis of prospective earnings capitalized."

"But what then?" said Seth. "If we sell the stock and it's no good?

"We don't need to worry. We sell it and then we clear out."

"Where to?"

The sad-eyed woman looked up from the little garment in her lap. "Havana," she said.

Within a week it was known all over Smudgeville that heavy deposits of palladum had been found on the old Lachford place. Gangs of men were at work. Derricks, cranes, vats and sluices rose all over the place. Little crowds of people started round to watch. The palladium was put into a converter and carried from there to a container from which was passed to a disturber. It was then put into a hopper.

"What is it?" asked the people. "Palladium" was the answer. The Smudgeville Intelligence explained that palladium wah a graminiferous amygdoloid and that its calcareous properties rendered it of great commercial value. It was practically impervious to collusion which made it a high soporofic.

An assayer was brought, a real one, and he walked round over the Lachford place and carried off samples. But the report of the analysis of the dirt Tom Lachford showed to no one. He shoved it into the drawer of the witchen dresser unopened. Then Tom Lachford called again upon the banker.

"Mr. Phathead," he said, my brother and I have made a find of igniferous palladium. It runs at least 48 per cent to the kilowatt and we want to raise money for incorporation and material.

"Mr. Lachford," said the banker, "I congratulate you on your discovery. I recognize in you one of those wide-visioned, broad-sighted, frog-eyed men that make this country what it is. How much money do you want?"

"Ten thousand dollars," said Tom.

The Moral of Machinery.

That evening when Tom came home he told Seth and Min that he had arranged the incorporation at thirty thousand dollars and was going to order ten thousand dollars' worth of machinery.

"What machinery?" asked his brother.

"Any machinery," said the promoter, "It doesn't matter: as long as it's bulky."

"The mere assemblage and erection of machinery," added Min, thoughtfully as she helped the brothers to fried eggplant, "conveys to the investor a guarantee of bona fides."

But after supper Seth Lachford went to the kitchen dresser and he took out of it the assayer's report upon the dirt, that lay in an envelope and for a long while stod lookig at the document with a frown upon his face. "See here, Tom, I'll not sell stuff like that," he evolved slowly. "No, sir, I'll go broke before I'll sell it."

The brothers sat looking at each other, their faces working.

"If you don't" said Tom, "we owe the bank $15,000, and it's ruin.'

"Ill meet it,' said Seth, his face still working.

"If you do," said Tom, his face stopping working, "You'll meet it in the penitentiary."

"Tom," said Seth, "theres been Lachfords on this place for four generations, and never a thief among them."

To Save Tom From Himself.

For two weeks after that the work at the palladium deposits went on, and the Lachfords walked around the plant, avoiding each other—Tom keen and restless, Seth boody, his eyes ever on the dirt.

Only once Tom spoke to Seth. "They've placed the first lot of my shares at par," he said, "and they can sell more, they say. Give me your shares now and Min's and we'll sell them and get out."

Seth turned on his heel and, without a word, went to the house. He called his wife aside. He took out the assayer's paper, opened it, and spread it out before her. "Tom says he'll sell your shares for ten thousand dollars, Min. Are you going to sell off that stuff," and he tapped the paper fiercely, "to your friends and neighbors, people of your own town?"

Min looked at the document. The chemical analysis was beyond her grasp, but the single item at the bottom, "estimated commercial value," was plain enough for a child.

"No, Seth!!" sheh said, "I can't do it. It ain't right.'

"Look, Min," Seth went on, I want my name to stand right in this town. If Tom tries to sell out those shares, could you get ten thousand ddollars from your folk and buy them?"

"I might," said Min, "I doubt Pa could raise it, but if you want it, Seth, I'll try."

Share and Share.

The next day Min started off to her folks in Pennsylvania to raise ten thousand dollars, and on the same morning the shares of Amalgamated Palladium Limited went on the local exchange as a vuurb security, aind there was great excitement in financial cirlces in Smudgeville. The shares opened at 80, rose straight to par, reacted to 50 sank down to 20, lay again in four hops. At 2 p. m. they were reported as restless; at 3 buoyant, and at closing time strong with an undercurrent of weakness.

That night Tom Lachford packed his grip to leave by the midnight express, bound towards Havana.

"I'm off, Seth," he said; say goodbye to Min when she comes back. If you're wise you'll get out quick. The shares will break tomorrow and then—"

"I'm not quitting, Tom," said Seth; "goodby."

Min came back two days later.

"I've got the money, Seth," she said. "Pa raised it partly on the steers and the rest on a mortgage."

"To late, I guess, Min," said Seth. "The shares went to five hundred yesterday and this morning they're hold out for a thousand dollars a share."

Virtue and Its Reward.

It was a week later that Tom Lachford sat on the Colorado Claro hotel at Havana with a cocktail in front of him, and $4,000 in Cuban money to his credit. And it was there he got a copy of a home paper sent him by mail. He opened it with trembling hands, looking for Seth's ruin. And instead of it he saw a big headline saying that Amalgamated Palladium was selling at two thousand a share, and his hands trembled more. Last of all he read a two-column account of the discovery of graphite on the Lachford place, and he shook life a leaf all over.

Meantime Min and Seth were sitting over their buttermilk in the kitchen living room, adding up figures.

"I can't cipher it out," saidd Seth, "but it's millions all right."

"And what is the stuff anyway," asked Min, "if it ain't palladium?"

"Graphite, it's called, said Seth. "I always noticed those black streaks in the crushings. I guess that's it. I'm gladd I didn't sell If I could have bought back those shares I meant to give them to Tom, didn't I Min?"

"Oh certainly," said Min, "so did I; and I'm glad too we didn't sell. I felt bad about it all all along, Seth, and when I saw that assayer's paper where it said 'commercial value ten thousand dollars a ton, a light broke in on me and I saw it wasn't right."

Charles E. Mitchell Began Banking Career After Meeting New York Financier Who Got Him To Forsake Manufacturing Business.

Oakleigh Thorne saw in him the quality of Genius and ultimately He Rose to be Head of the Biggest Bank in America.

By Preston Wright.

By PRESTON WRIGHT.

At No. 55 Wall Street, New York in a massive, temple-like edifice, is housed the largest financial institution in America, the National City Bank.

Dominating the wide spread ramifications of the business which centers behind the pillared front of the institution is a man still in his forty-seventh year.

Strangely enough this man, Charles E. Mitchell, entered upon his banking career after he had been well launched in an entirely different business.

Until he made a trip from Chicago to New York in 1906, Mitchell had no thought of becoming a banker, in the metropolis, however, he met a man who perceived in him a genius for large financial operations. Through him he was diverted from his original field of activity.

Oakleigh Thorne, president of the Trust Company of America, had his judgment of Mitchell fully vindicated. The latter, in less than fifteen years, arrived at the very pinnacle of Wall street success.

At the time he met Oakleigh Thorne, Charles E. Mitchell was assistant to President Enos M. Barton of the Western Electric Co., in Chicago.

Among the products of this concern were large switchboards for power houses. They were not manufactured by the Western Electric but were assembled from parts provided by various concerns It occurred to Mitchell — and this was merely one of several instances of the initiative and resourcefulness which had made him President Barton's right-hand man at twenty-nine—that there would be a big advantage in combining these companies.

President Barton endorsed the idea and at the proper time Mitchell came east to lay the plan before Oakleigh Thorne.

This negotiation revealed Mitchell to Thorne as a vigorous and incisive personality with mental qualifications of high degree. He questioned the younger man about his previous career. When the conversation had reached a certain stage, he surprised his visitor with a startling question?

"How would you like," he said, "to come down to New York as my assistant?"

And without waiting for an answer, he continued:

"This is the day of consolidations in business. I'm up to my neck in them. I am well acquainted with the financial problems involved, but your industrial training would be very helpful to me. What about it?"

Mitchell requested time. Thorpe had approved his consolidation plan, so he went back to Chicago to report his success and to inform President Barton of the new offer. The Western Electric executive had developed and sent more than one young man to success in the world of business and his assistant knew that whatever advice he received from his chief it would be worth following.

"Go ahead and good luck to you," said Barton. "You are ambitious and there you can set a pace to suit yourself. Here you can move no faster than the company moves."

Mitchell went east and began his banking work just in time to receive a baptism of fire. The year 1907 brought a panic. Many banks found themselves in difficulties and the Trust Company of America had trouble in weathering through. That it did so was in considerable part due to the efforts of its recruit from Chicago.

He in turn gained from the experience a knowledge of the details of banking and finance which was invaluable. In 1911 he organized the investment banking firm of C. E. Mitchell & Co., which had a remarkable success. He attracted so much attention that in 1916 he liquidated his own concern and took over the direction of the National City Co., the investment corporation affiliated with the National City Bank. He was elected president of the National City Co., that same year. Five years later, in 1921, he also became president of the National City Bank. In addition he now is chairman of the board of the International Banking Corporation, owned by the bank, which conducts branches all over the world.

As to the earlier part of Mitchell's career—the portion during which he gained the experience that fitted him for the presidency of the Trust Company of America—it contains abundant proof that if he had not become a great banker he would have become a great manufacturer.

He left Amherst college with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1898, in his twenty-second year. His funds were low and learning that the Western Electric company was taking on college men and giving them courses in its shops and factory he came to the New York branch office and asked for a job. He was given one at $10 a week—in Chicago.

He almost went broke getting to that city, but soon after he got on the job his future was assured. He studied book-keeping at night to fit himself for promotion. This came with a job in the credit department He spent more night hours studying commercial law and became assistant manager. The manager was transfered to Kansas City, and Mitchell got his job. The company was losing on its equipments business, but the credit manager as expeditiously as possible remedied this situation. His good work earned the praise of President Barton and in due time he became the latter's assistant.

People's Forum

A City of Goodwill.

Lincoln, Neb., March 6.

To the editor of The Lincoln Star: Something is stirring in Lincoln. The fight is on for a better Lincoln, and by this, we mean a city of Goodwill, where not only the commercial interests of our business men, but the physical and spiritual well-being of all our citizens, including especially the underprivileged ones is a matter of deep concern. Now is the time for all men and women who believe that a Society of Goodwill is attainable, to see to it that only persons who are unmistakably socially-minded are intrusted with the administration of the affairs of the city.

The question of values is continually coming to the front when funds belonging to the city or to an organization are to be expended. If always the deciding question were: Is this investment going to bring the greatest return in human happiness to the citizens of this community, money would often flow into different channels from those originally contemplated.

No one can question the writer's interest in the erection of adequate buildings for church, public education, and civic welfare purposes, but investments in stone and mortar must often be postponed until certain investments in human lives have been made. To be specific, when the plans for the new animal shelter were reviewed a short time ago, I was minded to ask if it wouldn't be possible to plan for a "children's ward," where some of Lincoln's children who are living in habitations hardly fit for dogs might be "sheltered" until employment could be found for their fathers by the socially-minded citizens who could be persuaded to tackle the problem. Is this a fair question? Think it over. This is the time when the men and women of our churches are being asked to really evaluate their church membership in terms of service activities, and it is the duty of the Council of Social Agencies, of which the Council of Churches is a member, to enlist men and women in a vigorous campaign for a healthier citzenry. "All for each, and each for all" is a perfectly good slogan. When it does become the basis of our efforts we will have high standards for the housing of industrial workers, wholesome recreation for all our children and youth, a day nusery which will make provision for the little children of mothers who have to work, a "Sunset Home" for the aged who are nearing the end of life's journey, homeless and alone, an adequate plan for surrounding the unprotected girls of our city with the right influences so that they will be pretty sure to go straight instead of otherwise. These are just a few of the things we may look forward to if the socially-minded folks of Lincoln will fill their community chest and their church and their club treasuries with sacrificial gifts and be one hundred per cent stewards of their time, talents and money.

ELKS TO GIVE SHOW.

The Lincoln Elks Hippodrome Show and Fashion Revue De Luxe that will be staged at the Orpheum theater on the nights of March 12, 13 and 14, is probably the most pretentious production of entertainment ever staged in this city. This big Hippodrome Show is under the direction of the Joe Bren Production company of Chicago and includes various forms of entertainment. The show consists of two acts and sixteen scenes and will be staged under the peronal direction of H. Ted Routson. Special prologues to the different scenes will be introduced, brilliant musical numbers will pervade throughout the entire production. Many feature acts will appear on the program which includes The Loos Brothers, broadcasting stars of station WEBH located on the Edgewater Beach hotel, Chicago. The Loos Brothers are without a doubt the most popular radio artists in the country and have enjoyed a ten-year reputation as headliners over Keith circuit.

Another feature act is the Six Tip Tops, who recently closed a three week engagement at the Hippodrome in New York, and will come direct to Lincoln from the Terrace Gardens in Chicago.

Other stars appearing on the bill will be Miss Thirza Faye, well-known Pacific coast dancer Miss Harriet Cruise, popular radio star, and "blue singer," Coyle and Curry, the popular sister team in a delightful fantasy of "Songs and Steps," the Ray sisters, three charmig girls in character and novelty dances, Krause and Kelly, a comedy skit an dmusical offering Carroll and Carroll, character impersonators and dancers, featuring little Miss June Starr Carroll.

Flavia Waters' "School of the Dance" is furnishing the different ballets that will be used in the various scenes of this production Joe Zimmerman, popular young tenor, who will be appearing at the Lyric next week, will also appear on this program in a cycle of the latest song hits. Many comedy sketches are used and one of the funniest scenes will be a burlesque travesty on Robert W. Service's famous poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." Another screaming skit, "Learning to be a Hero," written by Ted Routson and presented by Ralph and Viola will add to the pile of laughter. The Sardeson-Hovland company will be responsible for the dazzling gown and style creations in the Fashion Revue De Luxe. Ticket sale for this mammoth Hippodrome and musical extravaganza will open Monday morning at the Orpheum theater.

FILM SHOWS NEW KIND OF NIGHT LIFE.

Something new in night life is shown in "Daughters of the Night," the big new William Fox screen play coming to the Strand theater Monday.

Snappy thinking, honesty, virtue, devotion to duty and heroism are the ingredients of the night life of these "daughters of the night"—the telephone operators.

They are shown true to life, connecting the wires of as thrilling an action plot as has been seen in many a moon

Screen Siftings

Graduated to Drama — Lucille Carlisle, who was Larry Semon's leading woman in so many of his comedies, makes her debut in dramatic pictures in "Adventure," an adaptation of Jack London's story, which is being filmed by Victor Fleming The featured members in the cast of "Adventure" are Tom Moore, Pauline Starke, Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton and Walter McGrail

Another Shiek Found — Lawrence Gray is the latest screen "find" He appeared recently in "The Dressmaker from Paris," which has just been completed, and has been signed under a long-term contract with Paramount Pictures. His first appearance under his new contract will be in a featured role in "Are Parents People" with Betty Bronson, Florence Vidor and Adolphe Menjou. The picture will be directed by Mal St Clair

Mae Marsh Signed Up — Mae Marsh has been engaged to play the leading role in Vitagraph's "In the Garden of Charity," the picturization of Basil King's best seller Others in the cast are Ben Hendricks as leading man, Laska Winters, Earl Schenck, Ivor McFadden and Thomas Mills. The picture is being produced by J. Stuart Blackton.

All Dressed Up—Although Alice Terry has long been recognized as one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, she is enjoying her first opportunity of wearing lavish modern gowns in pictures as Joan Freeman in "Sackcloth and Scarlet," which Henry King is directing for Paramount.

Nebraska Beauty Breaks In — Alyce McCormick, who was given a role in "The Dancing Girl," by the Shuberts, after she had come as a Nebraska prize beauty and won the national contest staged in New York by the National Milliners' association, has been given an important role in "I Want My Man," in which Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon have the featured roles. Miss McCormick is the god-daughter of Maude Ballington Booth, head of the evangelical organization which her father serves Prior to the beauty contest a little over a year ago held by the State Milliners' association, Miss Alyce sang in Omaha in the Volunteers of America service.

Two Featured. — Art Acord and Louise Lorraine, are being co-featured in "Angel of the Desert," which Bob Wyndham is directing for Phil Goldstone.

"Wives' School" Done — Victor Hugo Halperin has finished work on "School for Wives," a picturization of Leonard Merrick's novel, "The House of Lynch." Conway Tearle and Sigrid Holmquist are the principals in the cast.

Comedy Girl Starred—Alice Day, who has been appearing in Mack Sennett comedies for the past year, has been made a star in her own right. The title of the first comedy in which Miss Day is featured is "Love and Kisses." Members of the supporting cast are Raymond McKee, Barbara Tennant, Sunshine Hart and Vernen Dent.

To Reproduce Casino — The Casino at Monte Carlo, the world's most famous gambling resort, will be reproduced accurately and in great detail for "Eve's Secret," which Clarence Badger is making for Paramount. Betty Compson and Jack Holt are co-featured in the picture. The story is laid in France and much of the action takes place at Monte Carlo. "Eve's Secret" is adapted from "Moonflower," the stage play in which Elsie Ferguson appeared a season or so ago.

"Oh, isn't he won-der-ful?"

"Oh, I'd forgotten how gr-aa-nd he was."

Thus two flappers on viewing Rudolph in "A Sainted Devil" last week. The nearby males might have mitigated their scornful looks had they but known the members of the Stanford and Notre Dame teams demanded to see Rudy, and Rudy only, when visiting the United studios. Corinne Griffith, Marion Davies, Colleen Moore, and Anita Stewart play about on the same lot, but the young footballers would have none of them.

Dreams of sudden "movie" wealth didn't last long for Raquel Meller. The Spanish singer, who is appearing in Paris, where "Mare Nostrum" is being produced, was offered a role by Rex Ingram. Demanding about $3,000 more a week than Mary Pickford receives, the singer is still singing and Ingram is producing sans Raquel.

The fan mail of Ricardo Cortez has been miraculously increased recently—and Ricardo says its not due either to his sunny smile or his beaux yeaux, but to his divorce. As he has not said "I do" the divorce is a little previous. A man by the name of Cortez in New York is being sued for divorce and the similarity of names has caused Ricardo to announce that "the report of my divorce is grossly exaggerated." However all the friends and fans are writing him about said divorce.

Among the interesting characters in "Quo Vadis" is Ursus, the giant slave, played by Signor B. Castellani The Roman was not an actor until he became Ursus, who conquers an enraged bull, to which a beautiful Christian girl has been tied to afford entertainment for Nero. One of the directors, Prince Gabriellino D'Annunzio, son of the poet-statesman, saw Castellani, a wrestler who had just thrown two of the most powerful "kings of the mat" in Italy, and procured him for a slave.

Colleen Out of a Cast.

Out of one cast and into another was Collen Moore's hard luck recently, for the second cast was plaster and very, very uncomfortable. Because of an injury while on location filming "The Desert Flower" she will have her head and shouldders in a plaster cast in the Hollywood hospital for six weeks—wherefor you shall pine for "The Desert Flower" six weeks longer Which goes to prove that all the breath taking jumps and the heart stopping, neck breaking falls aren't faked.

Mabel Normand is coming back. The dainty curly-haired star, who had some hard publicity a while back, is to be featured in "The Romance of an Actress" by I G. Chadwick, head of the independent producers. Well, lots of fans will welcome "Mickey" from her retirement.

Maria Guglielmi aspires to become a screen star. Another member of the Guglielmi family arrived via Ellis Island from Italy and hasn't done so badly. She may have more chances at the dotted line, however, if she takes brother's name—umhum, Valentino.

Corinne Griffith's new visiting cards are engraved "Beverley Hills," home of the screen's four hundred. She wrote a check for $100,000 for a little four acre estate and a twelve room English house and manorial lawns. She can gossip over the back fence with the Fairbanks, Mary and Douglas, and Mrs. Charles Chaplin comes from the other way to borrow a little coffee for breakfast.

Two years and a few weeks since the death of Wallace Reid. So many slip out with a dozen rising to take their places, but none has been put in Wally's place by the fans. Reginald Denny, Walter Hiers, Thomas Meighan, Richard Dix—the fans like them but do not accept them in their idol's place. It takes more than the ability to drive a fast car and wear a cap backward to overcome the memories of Wally's charm and personality.

"Extras'" Baby Worries Over.

Many "extras who stand in line for long hours when the "Casting Today' sign is out leave small children at home under the care of more or less competent maids. The worry about their babies was lessened recently when the Assistance league in Los Angeles opened a day nursery. The nursery has all the California sunshine in its cheerful rooms, fitted with baby pink and baby blue. The youngsters have ivory enamelled chairs, tables and beds and luncheons and suppers are served the small guests. Cupboards are filled with toys and the back yard is a fully equipped playground.

Charles Ray, whose contract with Thomas H. Ince was terminated by the latter's death, is planning to reenter independent production, rather than to work for some other producer. Nevertheless a former leap in the dark taught Charles a lesson and he will have a hard headed business manager. "The Courtship of Miles Standish" was more than a little hard on Charles' pocket book.

"An alarm clock, some paper, and a pencil"—these three and nothing more are the prerequistes of film writing fame, according to June Mathis, who adapted "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand" and other notable successes for the screen. The paper and pencil for thoughts, the alarm clock for 5 o'clock—a m—tinging, so that she can get in a couple of hours work before the household arouses itself.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has taken under its wing a large group of youngsters whom it will "build" into featured or star players as their talent displays itself. Watch the progress of afew of these unknowns, George K Arthur, Frank Currier, Helen D'Algy, Nigel de Brulier, Paul Ellis, Dale Fuller, Harriet Hammond, Lucille Lusur, Virginia Noonan, Ethelyn Pierce, and Cecil Holland.

Do you 'member way, way back when John Bunny was the funny man of the screen? Well, Charles Puffy, maybe he is, has come over from Munich to take his place. He's going to make one and two reelers until he becomes a star or a "dud," after which he will burst into feature length films.

One nickel was unexpectedly added to the cost of the Catalina island location trip made by Paramount's "The Night club" company. A small boy, digging in the sand on the spot most suitable for filming one sequence, stood on his right of priority and refused to leave Raymond Griffith offered him a bribe of five pennies as a last resort and the young digger moved to less popular, and less lucrative, sands.

NO CHANGE IN OFFICIAL OATHS

was in ruins. John Quincy Adams had the most brilliant and imposing ceremonies seen until that time, large inaugural procession, lengthy parade, and glittering ball.

The day of Jackson's inauguration found the capital city thronged with his Tennessee friends, who acclaimed him as he marched down Pennsylvania avenue in truly martial style. They also stormed the capitol, garbed in manner that today would resemble a 'movie' scenario, and even then created a furore.

Jackson and Van Buren were the first retiring and incoming executives to ride together in the inaugural procession. Their carriage was a phaeton made from timber of the old frigate, Constitution, the gift to the general from democrats of New York City. After the address, Jackson returned to the White House, where he remained until his departure for the south a few days later, and Van Buren went to a private residence.

When William Henry Harrison rode in his inaugural procession, he was followed by several log cabin floats, signifying the slogan of his campaign. The ceremonies were were elaborate and fatiguing and the new president delivered his address on the east portico in a chill north east wind, effects of the exposure causing his death a month later.

The inauguration of President Polk was featured by umbrellas and a new invention, the magnetic telegraph. Rain fell continuously and speaker and audience stood beneath the umbrellas. Professor Morse brought out his new magnetic telegraph to the portico, from which he could hear everything, having under view all the ceremonies performed, and transmitted the results to Baltimore as fast as they transpired.

The carriage in which Buchanan rode from the National hotel to the capitol was preceded by a liberty car, drawn by six horses and surmounted by a high pedestal upon which stood the Goddess of Liberty, standing by a liberty pole fifty feet high. Following the float was a large model of a full rigged ship on which sailors were working. Fifteen thousand persons attended the naugural ball and at the head of the table was a pyramid of cake 4 feet high, with a flag for each state, and for each territory.

Lincoln's inaugural was badly planned. Though he slipped quietly into Washington to avoid attention, because of threats of assassination, 25,000 strangers thronged the streets and pressed upon his carriage, in spite of his military escort. After taking the oath, he delivered his address on the still, bright March day, but Horace Greeley, who sat nearby said he expected to hear "delivery interrupted by crack of a rifle aimed at his heart."

Twenty thousand friends from New York City attended the Grant inauguration. In the military procession accompanying him were many veterans of the Army of the Potomac. The military procession which accompanied Garfield to the capitol and passed in review before him after the inauguration was led by General Sherman, who saluted as his superior his former subordinate in the army. Garfield stood bareheaded for two hours in a bitter March wind while the troops passed.

Arthur first took the oath at 2:15 o'clock in the morning, after Garfield's assassination, and took it again in the capitol, with Ex-Presidents Grant and Hayes among the onlookers. This was the first time in history two ex-presidents had witnessed the oath of office of a new president and the conditions were made more solemn by the fact that a fourth lay dead in another part of the building.

It has been said thart all the world came to see Cleveland inaugurated and Washington streets were thronged. At the close of the ceremonies, Cleveland kissed the little bible given him by his mother, the chief justice extending the book.

Benjamin Harrison also enjoyed delivering his address to a sea of umbrellas, although the morning exercises were followed in the customary manner. The evening fireworks and torchlight parade were "indefinitely postponed because of the weather."

A touch of sentiment was given to McKinley's inauguration by the presence of the survivors of Major McKinley's old regiment, the 23d Ohio, who followed his carriage to the white house His second inaugural was the centenary of the first inaugural held in Washington.

For Roosevelt's second inaugural, the finest parade ever held in Washing ton was staged, all parts of the country, even the islands, being represented. Governors and their staffs, West Point cadets, Rough Riders, cow boys, Indians, Filipinos, with a band playing "The Star Spangled Banner," and political and commercial clubs from all parts of the union were included. Thirty-five thousand people came from outside of Washington.

A procession and parade to dull all others was planned for Taft, but the elements decreed otherwise. The severest March 4 ever known was that March 4 and many inaugural visitors found themselves stalled many miles from the city on inauguration day. Pennsylvania avenue was impasable and all plans for festivities were abandoned. Taft took his oath on the east portico but the other ceremonies were within the capitol.

Wilson left Princeton, accompanied by several hundred students, who sang.

"Her sons shall give
While they shall live
Three cheers for old Nassau"

Two hundred thousand citizens were in Washington for the ceremonies, which were conducted with Jeffersonian simplicity, and thirty thousand were in the procession. The celebration was sufficiently elaborate as it was, but some of the most pretentious plans were abandoned.

The late President Harding was the first incoming president to ride to his inaugural in a motor car. At his request, there were no elaborate ceremonies and all forms were carried out with the utmost simplicity.

Lincoln Man to Tour World With Troup Famous Dancers

Charles Weidman in the dance "Thunderbird" in which he won great success last summer at the Lake Placid club.

Charles Weidman, who is at present touring with Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, is to accompany these two famous dancers and a ballet of eight others on a tour that will circle the globe.

Mr. Weidman has now been with Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn for five years and is one of the finest examples of a Denishawn dancer that the school has so far produced. Many Lincoln people will remember the distinct personal success which he won in Lincoln last year when he appeared at the Orpheum theater as one of the Denishawn Dancers.

The world tour which is now being planned will open in Tokio, Japan, September 1, where they will have an engagement of ten weeks. From there they will go to China, Java, Egypt, and up into Europe, the entire tour taking about a year to complete. This ballet, The Ruth St. Denis Ted Shawn and the Denishawn Dancers, is the first all-American ballet to circle the globe and it is considered a great honor to be one of the company as it will carry to the Orient and to Europe a message of what America has to offer in the art of dancing.

It is Mr. Weidman's hope to visit Lincoln before sailing but as he has accepted a position in the New York Denishawn school to teach this summer, that may prevent his doing so.

MINERVA'S MAIL

of a man who was a drunkard and beat his wife and turned his children into the street clothed in rags, that was changed into a paragon of sobriety and decency, by being able to demonstrate one of Euclid's problems or by claiming that twice two is four. Perhaps he knows of such a case. But this Bible he thinks is so evil has transformed millions of lives from sin and crime and is doing it every day, and will until the end of time.

Now as to the authorship of the Pentateuch. There is the weight of traditional authority. Both the Christian and the Jewish church agree that it was the work of Moses, with the exception of the last chapter which perhaps Ezra wrote, who "was a ready scribe in the law of Moses (Ezra 7:6) "So for the sake of argument we will admit that Moses did not write after he was dead We doubt if "Twenty-six" would attempt it himself. The apostles are pretty good authority. They give Moses credit for writing it. Finally Christ in quoting from the Pentateuch says: "Moses said, etc." I could mmultiply quotations but have not the space. I have never been ashamed of any position Christtook, and even "Twenty-six" could afford to stand by the words of the Son of God.

The death of Zedekiah next is the object of his eagle eye. He calls it a "diabolical" prophecy. It was about as devilish as the age in which men lived. "Twenty-six" ought to know that compared to the common method of putting men to death, Zedekiah was in luck to have his eyes put out and imprisoned to die a natural death, rather than to have been flayed alive as was the custom. Comparatively speaking he did die in peace. All that the prophet said was true. Israel did lament him. There was no law against offering him burnt odors. Of course they felt sorry. Twenty-six want to know why they took Zenekiah to Riblah? For the very good reason that the king had retired thither and had commanded it. Our friend's fondness for Euclid should have taught him accurate statement. He says that Jericho is "fifty or sixty miles from Jerusalem," when it is but twenty miles.

Again he blunders when he says that Moses in 1st Kings was told to count the tribe of Levi. Here is Euclid's teachings wasted again for Moses was told no such thing in either 1st or 2nd Kings for the very good reason that Moses had been dead for four hundred and fifty years. Did the printer make the mistake Well if that could happen perhaps then some old copyist by simply omitting one little Hebrew character could have made 22,000 instead of 22,300 in Numbers 3:50 where the incident is recorded and and in 1st Kings.

"Twenty-six" favors us with some quotations from the Rigveda, the most famous book of Indian religion which contains hymns to the Vedic gods Agni, Soma, Indra, Maruts, Rudra, Vayu, Parjana, Varuna and a lot more. Some of these hymns are very noble expressions of faith and very pretty. We wonder why he did not quote more from the oriental teachers and founders of religion. This from Confucius: "'Man is the representative of heaven . . . beyond the threshold of her apartments, woman should not be known for evil or good." From the laws of Manu: "A woman is not fit for independence." The Mohammedan apologizes whenever he herefers t oa dog, pig, donkey, or woman. A heathen woman said: "Your Bible must have been written by a woman it says so many kind things about them"

The type of attack against the Bible by "Twenty-six" is the Ingersoll's type which is as dead as its author. It is of no value. It is like visiting a hospital, not to learn of its remedial powers, but to take note only of its sewage, rake over its garbage and peer into repulsive evidences of the waste incident to salvaging humanity. The way of the Bible is approached has all to do with our estimate of it. Approach it by way of Calvary and all is well. Approach it by way of the crude and savage ages which the book faithfully portrays and one can find faults if he is seeking for them. But if judged by its fruits, ther is no book, system of philosophy or organization ancient or modern that helps man, but that it draws its inspiration and power from the pages of Holy Writ.

Yours truly Afamenon, For. Old Sincerity.

said Fred C. Foster. "If it passes it may do a great deal of good, but I rather suspect that it will have hard sledding.

"I am firmly convinced that the divorce question and the alienation of affections question is a matter of home training. It is the environment that the child has when it is small that helps to determine right from wrong at maturity. If children see the wrong example when they are small, and hear the wrong kind of things, if they believe that the sancity of the home means nothing, and that they have a perfect right to play around after they are married they will do so, and think nothing of it. I believe it is too late when people are grown to try to reform them."

Blames Restlessness.

"It is just a question of not wanting to settle down, of still wanting to pick and choose as they did before they were married that causes so many of the wrecked homes and divorces," said Dexter T. Barrett. "Men and women cannot get used to the idea of having just one person after marriage. They still want to play around as they did before hand and pick and choose at will."

Bruce Fullerton believes the bill will be all to the good if enough evidence is required before conviction.

"I think it would be pretty bad to have some hysterical wife who imagines she has a cause to be jealous of some girl, cause her a great deal of trouble for no real reason at all. Just imagine that it would be to have some wife go dashing to the county attorney and filing a complaint against some perfectly innocent girl, just because the woman's husband spoke to her on the street, or just because she went to his office for legitimate reason. There should be some way of preventing unreasonable action on the part of wives and husbands, and then the bill will be all right.'

Senator Cooper has received letters from all over the country concerning his bill. One was from a member of the California legislature who stated that he was interested and wanted a copy of the bill.

However, another letter from a San Francisco attorney does not speak so encouragingly of the bill The letter reads:

"I was formerly and for some years a practicing physician in your state, and you will notice from this letter that I am now practicing law in this state.

"I notice in the press that you have introduced a bill making the alienation of the affections of a wife or husband a felony. In other words, you want to prevent the display of affections, that is, the natural and inherent emotions of a human being, by means of regulation, What next?

"Have you the slightest conception of the most elementary basis of an animal's first, foremost and impelling instinct. Permit me to doubt it. Read the third book of Moses, called Leviticus, 'The Intellectual Development of Europe,' by Professor Draper, and Lecky's 'History of European Morals,' and the 'Pyschology of Sex,' by Havelock Ellis, for information as to whether or not laws have done humanity any good, and to what degree they have been humanity's misfortune.

"Frankly, sir, the success of legislatures in continually passing prohibitory laws is a crime against humanity. I suppose, however that in view of the fact that you are a bachelor, you feel as a notorious but celebrated French woman expressed herself, namely,' 'after us the deluge.' Well, success to you personally for your misdirected efforts.

"Trusting you will pardon my humble attempt to prevent, if possible, the further increase of criminals by legislative fiat—B. M. JACKSON."

The only thing to do is wait and see what happens. If the bill passes it will doubtless change things one way or another, if the bill is not passed—well, perhaps they will change anyway.

The Theatres

(Advertisement)

ELKS TO GIVE SHOW.

The Lincoln Elks Hippodrome Show and Fashion Revue De Luxe that will be staged at the Orpheum theater on the nights of March 12, 13 and 14, is probably the most pretentious production of entertainment ever staged in this city. This big Hippodrome Show is under the direction of the Joe Bren Production company of Chicago and includes various forms of entertainment. The show consists of two acts and sixteen scenes and will be staged under the peronal direction of H. Ted Routson. Special prologues to the different scenes will be introduced, brilliant musical numbers will pervade throughout the entire production. Many feature acts will appear on the program which includes The Loos Brothers, broadcasting stars of station WEBH located on the Edgewater Beach hotel, Chicago. The Loos Brothers are without a doubt the most popular radio artists in the country and have enjoyed a ten-year reputation as headliners over Keith circuit.

Another feature act is the Six Tip Tops, who recently closed a three week engagement at the Hippodrome in New York, and will come direct to Lincoln from the Terrace Gardens in Chicago.

Other stars appearing on the bill will be Miss Thirza Faye, well-known Pacific coast dancer. Miss Harriet Cruise, popular radio star, and "blue singer," Coyle and Curry, the popular sister team in a delightful fantasy of "Songs and Steps," the Ray sisters, three charmig girls in character and novelty dances, Krause and Kelly, a comedy skit an dmusical offering. Carroll and Carroll, character impersonators and dancers, featuring little Miss June Starr Carroll.

Flavia Waters' "School of the Dance" is furnishing the different ballets that will be used in the various scenes of this production. Joe Zimmerman, popular young tenor, who will be appearing at the Lyric next week, will also appear on this program in a cycle of the latest song hits. Many comedy sketches are used and one of the funniest scenes will be a burlesque travesty on Robert W. Service's famous poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." Another screaming skit, "Learning to be a Hero," written by Ted Routson and presented by Ralph and Viola will add to the pile of laughter. The Sardeson-Hovland company will be responsible for the dazzling gown and style creations in the Fashion Revue De Luxe. Ticket sale for this mammoth Hippodrome and musical extravaganza will open Monday morning at the Orpheum theater.

FILM SHOWS NEW KIND OF NIGHT LIFE.

Something new in night life is shown in "Daughters of the Night," the big new William Fox screen play coming to the Strand theater Monday.

Snappy thinking, honesty, virtue, devotion to duty and heroism are the ingredients of the night life of these "daughters of the night" —the telephone operators.

They are shown true to life, connecting the wires of as thrilling an action plot as has been seen in many a moon.

Screen Siftings

Graduated to Drama — Lucille Carlisle, who was Larry Semon's leading woman in so many of his comedies, makes her debut in dramatic pictures in "Adventure," an adaptation of Jack London's story, which is being filmed by Victor Fleming. The featured members in the cast of "Adventure" are Tom Moore, Pauline Starke, Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton and Walter McGrail.

Another Shiek Found — Lawrence Gray is the latest screen "find." He appeared recently in "The Dressmaker from Paris," which has just been completed, and has been signed under a long-term contract with Paramount Pictures. His first appearance under his new contract will be in a featured role in "Are Parents People" with Betty Bronson. Florence Vidor and Adolphe Menjou. The picture will be directed by Mal St. Clair.

Mae Marsh Signed Up — Mae Marsh has been engaged to play the leading role in Vitagraph's "In the Garden of Charity," the picturization of Basil King's best seller. Others in the cast are Ben Hendricks as leading man, Laska Winters, Earl Schenck, Ivor McFadden and Thomas Mills. The picture is being produced by J. Stuart Blackton.

All Dressed Up—Although Alice Terry has long been recognized as one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures, she is enjoying her first opportunity of wearing lavish modern gowns in pictures as Joan Freeman in "Sackcloth and Scarlet," which Henry King is directing for Paramount.

Nebraska Beauty Breaks In — Alyce McCormick, who was given a role in "The Dancing Girl," by the Shuberts, after she had come as a Nebraska prize beauty and won the national contest staged in New York by the National Milliners' association, has been given an important role in "I Want My Man," in which Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon have the featured roles. Miss McCormick is the god-daughter of Maude Ballington Booth, head of the evangelical organization which her father serves. Prior to the beauty contest a little over a year ago held by the State Milliners' association, Miss Alyce sang in Omaha in the Volunteers of America service.

Two Featured. — Art Acord and Louise Lorraine, are being co-featured in "Angel of the Desert," which Bob Wyndham is directing for Phil Goldstone.

"Wives' School" Done — Victor Hugo Halperin has finished work on "School for Wives," a picturization of Leonard Merrick's novel, "The House of Lynch." Conway Tearle and Sigrid Holmquist are the principals in the cast.

Comedy Girl Starred—Alice Day, who has been appearing in Mack Sennett comedies for the past year, has been made a star in her own right. The title of the first comedy in which Miss Day is featured is "Love and Kisses." Members of the supporting cast are Raymond McKee, Barbara Tennant, Sunshine Hart and Vernon Dent.

To Reproduce Casino — The Casino at Monte Carlo, the world's most famous gambling resort, will be reproduced accurately and in great detail for "Eve's Secret," which Clarence Badger is making for Paramount. Betty Compson and Jack Holt are co-featured in the picture. The story is laid in France and much of the action takes place at Monte Carlo. "Eve's Secret" is adapted from "Moonflower," the stage play in which Elsie Ferguson appeared a season or so ago.

"Oh, isn't he won-der-ful?"

"Oh, I'd forgotten how gr-aa-nd he was."

Thus two flappers on viewing Rudolph in "A Sainted Devil" last week. The nearby males might have mitigated their scornful looks had they but known the members of the Stanford and Notre Dame teams demanded to see Rudy, and Rudy only, when visiting the United studios. Corinne Grifith, Marion Davies, Colleen Moore, and Anita Stewart play about on the same lot, but the young footballers would have none of them.

Dreams of sudden "movie" wealth didn't last long for Raquel Meller. The Spanish singer, who is appearing in Paris, where "Mare Nostrum" is being produced, was offered a role by Rex Ingram. Demanding about $3,000 more a week than Mary Pickford receives, the singer is still singing and Ingram is producing sans Raquel.

The fan mail of Ricardo Cortez has been miraculously increased recently—and Ricardo says its not due either to his sunny smile or his beaux yeaux, but to his divorce. As he has not said "I do" the divorce is a little previous. A man by the name of Cortez in New York is being sued for divorce and the similarity of names has caused Ricardo to announce that "the report of my divorce is grossly exaggerated." However all the friends and fans are writing him about said divorce.

Among the interesting characters in "Quo Vadis" is Ursus, the giant slave, played by Signor B. Castellani The Roman was not an actor until he became Ursus, who conquers an enraged bull, to which a beautiful Christian girl has been tied to afford entertainment for Nero. One of the directors, Prince Gabriellino D'Annunzio, son of the poet-statesman, saw Castellani, a wrestler who had just thrown two of the most powerful "kings of the mat" in Italy, and procured him for a slave.

Colleen Out of a Cast.

Out of one cast and into another was Collen Moore's hard luck recently, for the second cast was plaster and very, very uncomfortazle. Because of an injury while on location filming "The Desert Flower" she will have her head and shouldders in a plaster cast in the Hollywood hospital for six weeks—wherefor you shall pine for "The Desert Flower" six weeks longer. Which goes to prove that all the breath taking jumps and the heart stopping, neck breaking falls aren't faked.

Mabel Normand is coming back. The dainty curly-haired star, who had some hard publicity a while back, is to be featured in "The Romance of an Actress" by I. G. Chadwick, head of the independent producers. Well, lots of fans will welcome "Mickey" from her retirement.

Maria Guglielmi aspires to become a screen star. Another member of the Guglielmi family arrived via Ellis Island from Italy and hasn't done so badly. She may have more chances at the dotted line, however, if she takes brother's name—umhum, Valentino.

Corinne Griffith's new visiting cards are engraved "Beverley Hills," home of the screen's four hundred. She wrote a check for $100,000 for a little four acre estate and a twelve room English house and manorial lawns. She can gossip over the back fence with the Fairbanks, Mary and Douglas, and Mrs. Charles Chaplin comes from the other way to borrow a little coffee for breakfast.

Two years and a few weeks since the death of Wallace Reid. So many slip out with a dozen rising to take their places, but none has been put in Wally's place by the fans. Reginald Denny, Walter Hiers, Thomas Meighan, Richard Dix—the fans like them but do not accept them in their idol's place. It takes more than the ability to drive a fast car and wear a cap backward to overcome the memories of Wally's charm and personality.

"Extras'" Baby Worries Over.

Many "extras who stand in line for long hours when the "Casting Today' sign is out leave small children at home under the care of more or less competent maids. The worry about their babies was lessened recently when the Assistance league in Los Angeles opened a day nursery. The nursery has all the California sunshine in its cheerful rooms, fitted with baby pink and baby blue. The youngsters have ivory enamelled chairs, tables and beds and luncheons and suppers are served the small guests. Cupboards are filled with toys and the back yard is a fully equipped playground.

Charles Ray, whose contract with Thomas H. Ince was terminated by the latter's death, is planning to reenter independent production, rather than to work for some other producer. Nevertheless a former leap in the dark taught Charles a lesson and he will have a hard headed business manager. "The Courtship of Miles Standish" was more than a little hard on Charles' pocket book.

"An alarm clock, some paper, and a pencil"—these three and nothing more are the prerequistes of flim writing fame, according to June Mathis, who adapted "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand" and other notable successes for the screen. The paper and pencil for thoughts, the alarm clock for 5 o'clock—a. m.—tingling, so that she can get in a couple of hours work before the household arouses itself.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has taken under its wing a large group of youngsters whom it will "build" into featured or star players as their talent displays itself. Watch the progress of afew of these unknowns, George K. Arthur, Frank Currier, Helen D'Algy, Nigel de Brulier, Paul Ellis, Dale Fuller, Harriet Hammond, Lucille Lusur, Virginia Noonan, Ethelyn Pierce, and Cecil Holland.

Do you 'member way, way back when John Bunny was the funny man of the screen? Well, Charles Puffy, maybe he is, has come over from Munich to take his place. He's going to make one and two reelers until he becomes a star or a "dud," after which he will burst into feature length films.

One nickel was unexpectedly added to the cost of the Catalina island location trip made by Paramount's "The Night club" company. A small boy, digging in the sand on the spot most suitable for filming one sequence, stood on his right of priority and refused to leave. Raymond Griffith offered him a bribe of five pennies as a last resort and the young digger moved to less popular, and less lucrative, sands.

was in ruins. John Quincy Adams had the most brilliant and imposing ceremonies seen until that time, large inaugural procession, lengthy parade, and glittering ball.

The day of Jackson's inauguration found the capital city thronged with his Tennessee friends, who acclaimed him as he marched down Pennsylvania avenue in truly martial style. They also stormed the capitol, garbed in manner that today would resemble a 'movie' scenario, and even then created a furore.

Jackson and Van Buren were the first retiring and incoming executives to ride together in the inaugural procession. Their carriage was a phaeton made from timber of the old frigate, Constitution, the gift to the general from democrats of New York City. After the address, Jackson returned to the White House, where he remained until his departure for the south a few days later, and Van Buren went to a private residence.

When William Henry Harrison rode in his inaugural procession, he was followed by several log cabin floats, signifying the slogan of his campaign. The ceremonies were were elaborate and fatiguing and the new president delivered his address on the east portico in a chill north east wind, effects of the exposure causing his death a month later.

The inauguration of President Polk was featured by umbrellas and a new invention, the magnetic telegraph. Rain fell continuously and speaker and audience stood beneath the umbrellas. Professor Morse brought out his new magnetic telegraph to the portico, from which he could hear everything, having under view all the ceremonies performed, and transmitted the results to Baltimore as fast as they transpired.

The carriage in which Buchanan rode from the National hotel to the capitol was preceded by a liberty car, drawn by six horses and surmounted by a high pedestal upon which stood the Goddess of Liberty, standing by a liberty pole fifty feet high. Following the float was a large model of a full rigged ship on which sailors were working. Fifteen thousand persons attended the naugural ball and at the head of the table was a pyramid of cake 4 feet high, with a flag for each state, and for each territory.

Lincoln's inaugural was badly planned. Though he slipped quietly into Washington to avoid attention, because of threats of assassination, 25,000 strangers thronged the streets and pressed upon his carriage, in spite of his military escort. After taking the oath, he delivered his address on the still, bright March day, but Horace Greeley, who sat nearby said he expected to hear "delivery interrupted by crack of a rifle aimed at his heart."

Twenty thousand friends from New York City attended the Grant inauguration. In the military procession accompanying him were many veterans of the Army of the Potomac. The military procession which accompanied Garfield to the capitol and passed in review before him after the inauguration was led by General Sherman, who saluted as his superior his former subordinate in the army. Garfield stood bareheaded for two hours in a bitter March wind while the troops passed.

Arthur first took the oath at 2:15 o'clock in the morning, after Garfield's assassination, and took it again in the capitol, with Ex-Presidents Grant and Hayes among the onlookers. This was the first time in history two ex-presidents had witnessed the oath of office of a new president and the conditions were made more solemn by the fact that a fourth lay dead in another part of the building.

It has been said thart all the world came to see Cleveland inaugurated and Washington streets were thronged. At the close of the ceremonies, Cleveland kissed the little bible given him by his mother, the chief justice extending the book.

Benjamin Harrison also enjoyed delivering his address to a sea of umbrellas, although the morning exercises were followed in the customary manner. The evening fireworks and torchlight parade were "indefinitely postponed because of the weather."

A touch of sentiment was given to McKinley's inauguration by the presence of the survivors of Major McKinley's old regiment, the 23d Ohio, who followed his carriage to the white house. His second inaugural was the centenary of the first inaugural held in Washington.

For Roosevelt's second inaugural, the finest parade ever held in Washing ton was staged, all parts of the country, even the islands, being represented. Governors and their staffs, West Point cadets, Rough Riders, cow boys, Indians, Filipinos, with a band playing "The Star Spangled Banner," and political and commercial clubs from all parts of the union were included. Thirty-five thousand people came from outside of Washington.

A procession and parade to dull all others was planned for Taft, but the elements decreed otherwise. The severest March 4 ever known was that March 4 and many inaugural visitors found themselves stalled many miles from the city on inauguration day. Pennsylvania avenue was impasable and all plans for festivities were abandoned. Taft took his oath on the east portico but the other ceremonies were within the capitol.

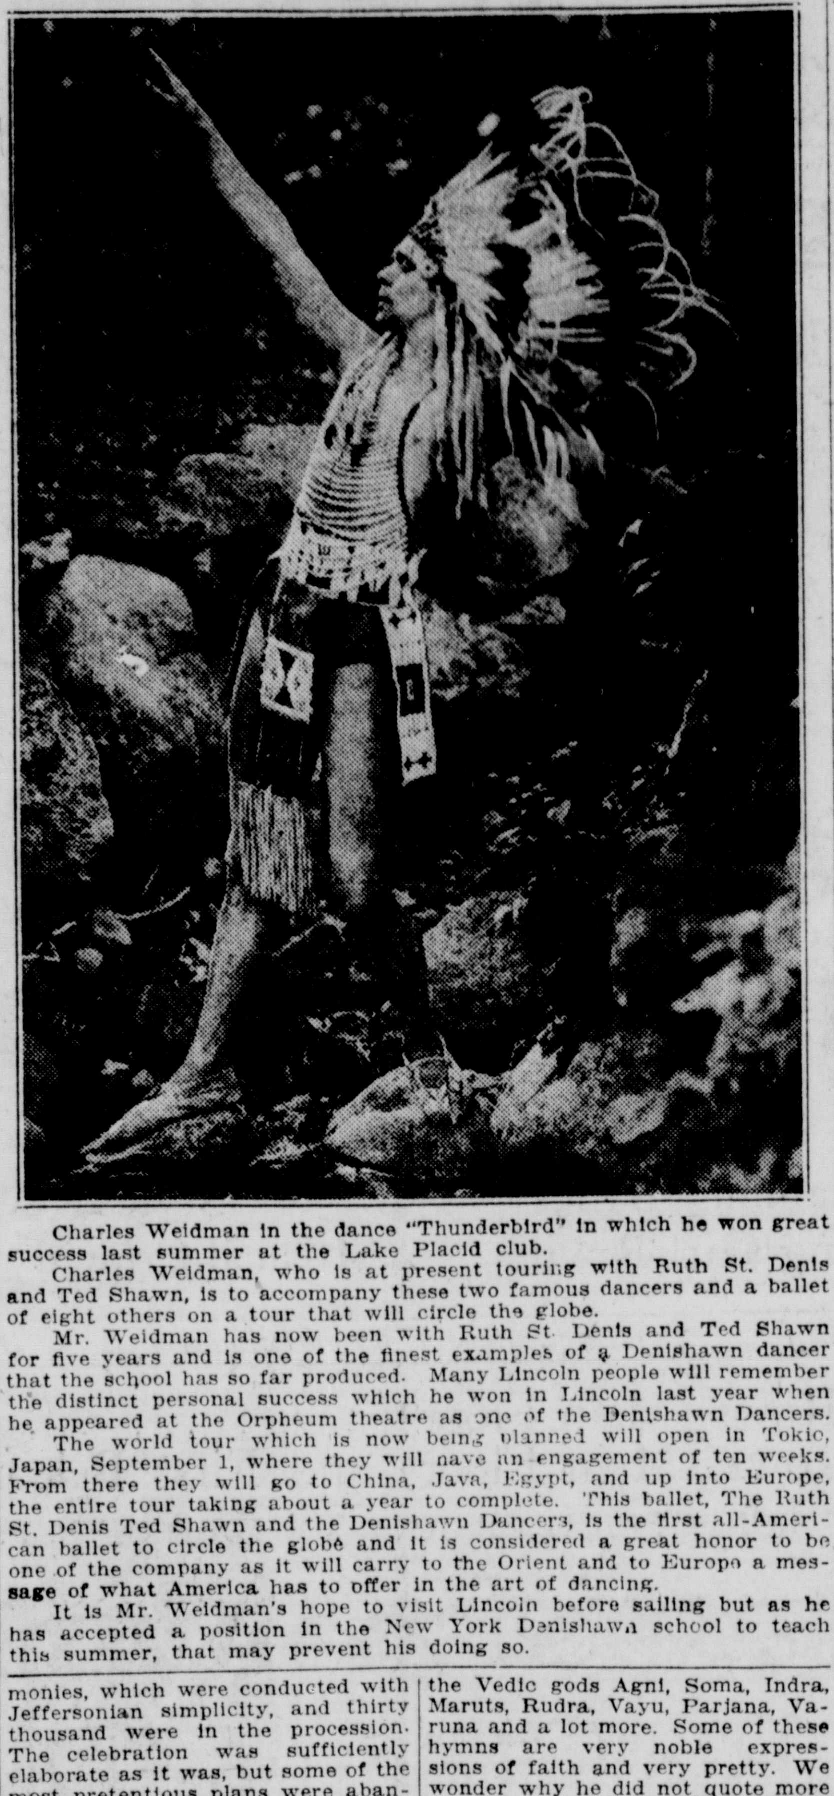
Wilson left Princeton, accompanied by several hundred students, who sang:

"Her sons shall give
While they shall live
Three cheers for old Nassau."

Two hundred thousand citizens were in Washington for the ceremonies, which were conducted with Jeffersonian simplicity, and thirty thousand were in the procession. The celebration was sufficiently elaborate as it was, but some of the most pretentious plans were abandoned.

The late President Harding was the first incoming president to ride to his inaugural in a motor car. At his request, there were no elaborate ceremonies and all forms were carried out with the utmost simplicity.

Lincoln Man to Tour World With Troup Famous Dancers



Charles Weidman in the dance "Thunderbird" in which he won great success last summer at the Lake Placid club.

Charles Weidman, who is at present touring with Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, is to accompany these two famous dancers and a ballet of eight others on a tour that will circle the globe.

Mr. Weidman has now been with Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn for five years and is one of the finest examples of a Denishawn dancer that the school has so far produced. Many Lincoln people will remember the distinct personal success which he won in Lincoln last year when he appeared at the Orpheum theatre as one of the Denishawn Dancers.

The world tour which is now being planned will open in Tokio, Japan, September 1, where they will have an engagement of ten weeks. From there they will go to China, Java, Egypt, and up into Europe, the entire tour taking about a year to complete. This ballet, The Ruth St. Denis Ted Shawn and the Denishawn Dancers, is the first all-American ballet to circle the globe and it is considered a great honor to be one of the company as it will carry to the Orient and to Europe a message of what America has to offer in the art of dancing.

It is Mr. Weidman's hope to visit Lincoln before sailing but as he has accepted a position in the New York Denishawn school to teach this summer, that may prevent his doing so.

MINERVA'S MAIL

of a man who was a drunkard and beat his wife and turned his children into the street clothed in rags, that was changed into a paragon of sobriety and decency, by being able to demonstrate one of Euclid's problems or by claiming that twice two is four. Perhaps he knows of such a case. But this Bible he thinks is so evil has transformed millions of lives from sin and crime and is doing it every day, and will until the end of time.

Now as to the authorship of the Pentateuch. There is the weight of traditional authority. Both the Christian and the Jewish church agree that it was the work of Moses, with the exception of the last chapter which perhaps Ezra wrote, who "was a ready scribe in the law of Moses (Ezra 7:6) "So for the sake of argument we will admit that Moses did not write after he was dead. We doubt if "Twenty-six" would attempt it himself. The apostles are pretty good authority. They give Moses credit for writing it. Finally Christ in quoting from the Pentateuch says: "Moses said, etc." I could mmultiply quotations but have not the space. I have never been ashamed of any position Christtook, and even "Twenty-six" could afford to stand by the words of the Son of God.

The death of Zedekiah next is the object of his eagle eye. He calls it a "diabolical" prophecy. It was about as devilish as the age in which men lived. "Twenty-six" ought to know that compared to the common method of putting men to death, Zedekiah was in luck to have his eyes put out and imprisoned to die a natural death, rather than to have been flayed alive as was the custom. Comparatively speaking he did die in peace. All that the prophet said was true. Israel did lament him. There was no law against offering him burnt odors. Of course they felt sorry. Twenty-six want to know why they took Zenekiah to Riblah? For the very good reason that the king had retired thither and had commanded it. Our friend's fondness for Euclid should have taught him accurate statement. He says that Jericho is "fifty or sixty miles from Jerusalem," when it is but twenty miles.

Again he blunders when he says that Moses in 1st Kings was told to count the tribe of Levi. Here is Euclid's teachings wasted again for Moses was told no such thing in either 1st or 2nd Kings for the very good reason that Moses had been dead for four hundred and fifty years. Did the printer make the mistake Well if that could happen perhaps then some old copyist by simply omitting one little Hebrew character could have made 22,000 instead of 22,300 in Numbers 3:50 where the incident is recorded and and in 1st Kings.

"Twenty-six" favors us with some quotations from the Rigveda, the most famous book of Indian religion which contains hymns to the Vedic gods Agni, Soma, Indra, Maruts, Rudra, Vayu, Parjana, Varuna and a lot more. Some of these hymns are very noble expressions of faith and very pretty. We wonder why he did not quote more from the oriental teachers and founders of religion. This from Confucius: "'Man is the representative of heaven . . . beyond the threshold of her apartments, woman should not be known for evil or good." From the laws of Manu: "A woman is not fit for independence." The Mohammedan apologizes whenever he herefers t oa dog, pig, donkey, or woman. A heathen woman said: "Your Bible must have been written by a woman it says so many kind things about them."

The type of attack against the Bible by "Twenty-six" is the Ingersoll's type which is as dead as its author. It is of no value. It is like visiting a hospital, not to learn of its remedial powers, but to take note only of its sewage, rake over its garbage and peer into repulsive evidences of the waste incident to salvaging humanity. The way of the Bible is approached has all to do with our estimate of it. Approach it by way of Calvary and all is well. Approach it by way of the crude and savage ages which the book faithfully portrays and one can find faults if he is seeking for them. But if judged by its fruits, ther is no book, system of philosophy or organization ancient or modern that helps man, but that it draws its inspiration and power from the pages of Holy Writ.

Yours truly Afamenon, For. Old Sincerity.

said Fred C. Foster. "If it passes it may do a great deal of good, but I rather suspect that it will have hard sledding.

"I am firmly convinced that the divorce question and the alienation of affections question is a matter of home training. It is the environment that the child has when it is small that helps to determine right from wrong at maturity. If children see the wrong example when they are small, and hear the wrong kind of things, if they believe that the sancity of the home means nothing, and that they have a perfect right to play around after they are married, they will do so, and think nothing of it. I believe it is too late when people are grown to try to reform them."

Blames Restlessness.

"It is just a question of not wanting to settle down, of still wanting to pick and choose as they did before they were married that causes so many of the wrecked homes and divorces," said Dexter T. Barrett. "Men and women cannot get used to the idea of having just one person after marriage. They still want to play around as they did before hand and pick and choose at will."

Bruce Fullerton believes the bill will be all to the good if enough evidence is required before conviction.

"I think it would be pretty bad to have some hysterical wife who imagines she has a cause to be jealous of some girl, cause her a great deal of trouble for no real reason at all. Just imagine that it would be to have some wife go dashing to the county attorney and filing a complaint against some perfectly innocent girl, just because the woman's husband spoke to her on the street, or just because she went to his office for legitimate reason. There should be some way of preventing unreasonable action on the part of wives and husbands, and then the bill will be all right.'

Senator Cooper has received letters from all over the country concerning his bill. One was from a member of the California legislature who stated that he was interested and wanted a copy of the bill.

However, another letter from a San Francisco attorney does not speak so encouragingly of the bill. The letter reads:

"I was formerly and for some years a practicing physician in your state, and you will notice from this letter that I am now practicing law in this state.

"I notice in the press that you have introduced a bill making the alienation of the affections of a wife or husband a felony. In other words, you want to prevent the display of affections, that is, the natural and inherent emotions of a human being, by means of regulation. What next?

"Have you the slightest conception of the most elementary basis of an animal's first, foremost and impelling instinct. Permit me to doubt it. Read the third book of Moses, called Leviticus, 'The Intellectual Development of Europe,' by Professor Draper, and Lecky's 'History of European Morals,' and the 'Pyschology of Sex,' by Havelock Ellis, for information as to whether or not laws have done humanity any good, and to what degree they have been humanity's misfortune.

"Frankly, sir, the success of legislatures in continually passing prohibitory laws is a crime against humanity. I suppose, however, that in view of the fact that you are a bachelor, you feel as a notorious but celebrated French woman expressed herself, namely," 'after us the deluge.' Well, success to you personally for your misdirected efforts.

"Trusting you will pardon my humble attempt to prevent, if possible, the further increase of criminals by legislative fiat—B. M. JACKSON."

The only thing to do is wait and see what happens. If the bill passes it will doubtless change things one way or another, if the bill is not passed—well, perhaps they will change anyway.

ANSWERS TO Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I am here to bother you again. It seems like I just can't keep away, but I'm not going to ask you a lot of silly questions as usual, so I hope you won't get tired of reading it. Here goes.

I have seen a great many pictures since I was big enough to know a good one when I saw it, and am sure that the movies are certainly getting better and better. In the past year it seems to me the pictures haven't been as good as they should be, but I am looking forward to better ones now that a new company has taken over our theaters. I know that we will see the best of everything. I think the Sun theater has some of the best shows in town sometimes. Will Mr. Shire have charge of the Sun? I heard that it was independent of the others. If it is, who has charge of it? The former manager certainly did have some good pictures. I haven't missed a chance to go there, because you could go there and see some pictures that weren't shown anywhere else. The same way with the Strand. I am a great Tom Mix fan and the Strand is the only place where they show his picture. I never miss any of them. My sisters make fun of me, and call me a "cheap skate" and every other thing, but nevertheless I go every time he comes there. He is a wonderful actor and his horse is just as wonderful. He always does some dandy stunts and I am a great one for western pictures.

Now, dear editor, I want you to tell me all you can about Robert Frazer. I saw him at the Sun the past week in a picture called "Bread" and I enjoyed it very much. The whole cast of it was good, and I am sure if the manager of the Sun will continue to bring good pictures like that it will not be long until he will have everyone crowding into his little theater, and he has some dandy crowds now.—JUSTICE.

You are not the only admirer of Tom Mix. He is one of the most popular heroes of the screen. He is paid the largest weekly salary ever paid to a star of western pictures in his new contract with Fox. He will also share in the profits on his productions. Tom is very particular about his horses and his costumes. He is said to have forty different pairs of boots, and about as many hats. He wears white gloves upon all osccations, even when riding his horse. It would take a fair-sized salary to keep them clean.

Robert Frazer is not a newcomer in motion pictures by any means, but he's becoming quite a popular leading man. He played recently opposite Bebe Daniels in "Little Miss Bluebeard," and with Pola Negri in "The Charmer." You no doubt remember seeing him with Miss Negri also in "Men" a year or so ago. Pola says he is the "perfect lover." Before playing in the movies he was on the stage with Julia Arthur in several Shakespearean plays. He played opposite Mary Nash in "Thy Name Is Woman," and had the title role in "The Wanderer." He also supported Florence Reed in "The Mirage." Mr. Frazer is six feet tall and an all-round athlete. He was chosen to replace Doug Fairbanks in "The Snow Shop" when Doug quit to play in pictures, because of his physical fitness to throw the villain over the cliff. Mr. Frazer has dark hair and eyes. Besides being an actor, he is also a chemist, inventor, painter and a number of other different things. Oh, yes, he's a married man, too.

Eli Shire will not take over the management of the Sun theater, which will still be run under the direction of Nicholas Paper.

Dear Movie Editor—I am coming to you for the cast of "Secrets," in which Norma Talmadge played the role of an old lady at the last. I have seen many stars play the part of old women in pictures, but I thought Norma enacted the role the best I have ever seen it done. She was wonderful. She is the most versatile actress we have on the screen in my estimation, besides being the most beautiful. Was she ever on the stage before going into many times had she been married pictures? How old is she? How before she married Mr. Schenck? She looks more like Natalie than she does like Constance. I think Constance is as cute as a "bug's ear."

Does Norma have any children? Does Constance? Has Constance ever re-married? How many children does Natalie have? I remain as before, THANK YOU.

Norma Talmadge stepped from school into pictures without any previous stage training. She was fortunate in getting an early start, and marrying a weathy man who could greatly aid her in her screen career. I heard a critic say not long ago that Norma would be a great artist if she really had to work, and didn't have everything that heart could desire handed to her on a silver platter. I think she deserves a great deal more credit for attaining the heights she has reached when she knew every luxury was hers without working for it. She is only twenty-seven now, and has been working in motion pictures since she was fourteen. Joseph Schenck is her only husband, and they have no children. Constance is still single and has no children. She has had her name linked with nearly every eligible in filmdom since her divorce from Mr. Pialoglou, but she evidently intends to elude the matrimonial net until she is sure of what she wants. Natalie has two children.

The cast for "Secrets" is: Mary Marlowe, Lady Mary Carleton, Norma Talmadge; Sir John Carleton, Eugene O'Brien; Robert Carleton, Frank Elliott; John Carleton, George Cowell; Audrey Carleton, Clarissa Selwyne; Blanche Carleton, Alice Day; Susan, Patterson Dial; Miss Channing, Claire McDowell; Mrs. Mainwaring, Gertrude Astor; Mrs. Marlowe, Emily Fitzroy; Mr. Marlowe, George Nichols; "Lady Lessington," Florence Wix; Arbuthnot, Winter Halls Dr. McGovern, Charles Ogle; Bob, Harvey Clark.

Dear Movie Editor: What would we fans do without you! Your page is the first I turn to on Sunday morning. I certainly do want you to know that I enjoy it. I am a great movie fan, and have been for years when lots of people scoffed at the movies. I remember when the Sun and the Majestic used to be the best motion picture houses here. I used to go at least once a week, and was severely criticized by my friends for having such "low brow" tastes. They seemed to think that going to a movie was about on the level with reading a "dime novel." Those same friends, however, are some of the most ardent fans in Lincoln now.

Has "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" ever been filmed and if so, who were leading players?

What nationality is Carmel Myers? Is Richard Talmadge related to the Talmadge sisters? What is his address?

Has Claire Windsor's little boy ever played in pictures? Who played, the leading male role in "The Voice from the Minaret?"

Has Jack Holt finished "The Thundering Herd?" What will his next picture be, and who will play opposite him? Who will direct the picture? I am beginning to think that the director plays about as important a part in pictures as does the star.

Jack Holt is a favorite of mine. Lewis Stone and Raymond Griffith are other favorites. I think Raymond is going to be one of our future stars. He has simply 'run away" with every picture I have seen him in recently.

This letter is getting rather lengthy so will bring it to a close. Thank you very much in advance for your time and space, T. B.

Carmel Myers doesn't deny the fact that she is the daughter of Rabbi Myers of Los Angeles. Richard is not related to the Talmadge girls. In fact, Richard uses the name for screen purposes. He has another in private life. Address him at 1438 Grower street, Los Angeles.

Little Billy Bowes played in "What Do Men Want?" He has played in a few other pictures, too. Eugene O'Brien is opposite Miss Talmadge in "The Voice from the Minaret."

Yes, "The Thundering Herd" has been completed. Jack's next will be in "Eve's Secret" in which he is co-starred with Betty Compson. Clarence Badger is directing the picture. It is adapted from the stag play, "Moonflower" in which Elsie Ferguson played.

Dear Movie Editor—I am a frequent visitor to your department, so I'll not take up too much space this week. There has been quite a lot of comment lately about Gloria Swanson. It was reported some time ago that she had died, but that the company didn't want it announced until after her pictures were released, but you said she did not die. Now it has been reported that she is very sick and not expected to live, and that the company that she works for has released all of the pictures that she had made before she died, and now they are going to have her death announced and are saying she is sick, etc. just to satisfy the public. Is this true?

Will you please give me the address of Alan Crosland, William K. Howard, Hobart Henley and C. Gardiner Sullivan?

What will Doug Fairbanks next picture be, and who will be his leading lady?

Is little Clara Bow in pictures now? If so, what company is she working for and what is her next picture? I've only seen her once or twice, but I thought she was awfully cute.

What is John Patrick's next picture?

Hoping I have not overstayed this time, and thanking you in advance for answering my questions, I remain, FRANKIE.

What nonsense! Don't you, yourself, think it would be rather ridiculous for a company to suppress the news of a star's death, if it did occur, and then have her get sick and die when they wanted it announced? Gloria has been very ill, and for a time it was feared she would not recover, but she is improving now and hopes to be able to wear her new title for years yet.

It would be the height of folly for any company to even try to keep the news of a prominent star's death a secret as long as there are newspaper men abroad. There would be no reason for doing it, anyhow, because it has been proven that the box office receipts do not fall off any when the star in the picture has passed away. There are a few people who obect to seeing pictures when they know the player is dead, but they are the minority.

Address Alan Crosland and William K. Howard in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Cal. Hobart Henley may be reached in care of Warner Brothers, Hollywood. C. Gardiner Sullivan receives letters at the F. B. O Studio, Melrose avenue, Hollywood.

John Patrick is working in "After Business Hours' 'for Waldorf Productions.

Dear Movie Editor—Your answers in the Sunday Star to the movie fans are very interesting and as a rule very correct, and many people interested in the play and players get a good deal of information and pleasure out of your letters

One correspondent asked you about who was the oldest and youngest movie directors. Permit me to state that the oldest director is George D. Baker, who is past sixty, and does not look it. He is also called the "dean of directors" and with the directing of "Balsar's Magic Skin," he celebrated also that as the work of his 100th play. I have the pleasure of knowing Mr. Baker, who has a brother in this state of Nebraska.

I have lived in California for sixteen years and am pretty well informed about the movie folks and saw a goodly number of them personally.

Do you think that the play, "Ben Hur" will ever get here to Lincoln? But I do hope it will. I can hardly wait for "Romola," to come here. A friend from California wrote to me that the prologue for "Romola" in the Grauman Egyptian Theater was very beautiful.

Please pardon me for this intrusion of writing to you. I hope you will also kindly overlook it, if my composition in English has a flaw or so. I never went to school in the United States. What I learned it was merely from books and newspapers and the dictionary. Wishing you good health and success in your work, Respectfully yours, M. J. D.

Thank you very much for your information concerning Mr. Baker. You should know the "sunny Southland" very well after dwelling there for so many years. You must have been there when the motion picture industry was a mere infant.

It will be sometime before "Ben Hur" is completed. They expect to release it by a year from now if they have good luck. It will no doubt be shown in Lincoln as soon as it is released, or perhaps it will tour the country as a road show, as some of the other big pictures have done with its own orchestra.

The prologues at Grauman's Egyptian Theater certainly add much to the enjoyment of the pictures. If one is fortunate enough to see a picture there, and then happens to see it at a smaller theater without the elaborate prologues for which the Egyptian Theater is famous, it doesn't seem like the same picture. The theater, itself, is enchanting, with its wonderful curtains and decorations; the ushers in their Egyptian costumes, and the faint odor of incense that is in the air. It's an ideal setting for any picture.

You are to be congratulated upon your writing and English. I receive letters from high school students who have had every advantage offered them, that are not nearly so well written.

Screen Siftings

Another Heart Throbber—"The Home Maker," Dorothy Canfield's heart throbbing novel of home life, will be produced at Universal City under the direction of King Baggot. Mary O'Hara, the woman who adapted "Black Oxen" and "The Prisoner of Zenda" for the screen, will write the continuity for "The Home Maker." The star and supporting cast have not yet been announced.

"Rose" Story Filmed.—Marie Prevost has been chosen to enact the role of Rose Kirby, the heroine of Kathleen Norris' story, "Rose of the World." The story is being filmed at the Warner Brothers studio under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

Dances To Fame—Greta Nissen, whose acting and dancing in the stage version of "The Beggar on Horseback," was one of the sensations of the past theatrical season, is to play the leading role in the Paramount picture, "In the Name of Love." The story is an original by Sada Cowan, and will be directed by Miss Cowan and Howard Higgins.

Richardo Cortez, who recently completed the title role in "The Spaniard," under the direction of Raout Walsh, has been chosen to play opposite Miss Nissen in "The Name of Love." Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Edythe Chapman, Lillian Leighton and Richard Arlen are all members of the supporting cast.

Ex-Actor is Director—Alan Hale, who recently laid aside his make-up box, for the megaphone, has been chosen to direct Rudolph Valentino in his next picture, "The Hooded Falcon." Mr. Hale played with Valentino in "The Four Horsemen." "The Hooded Falcon" is a story of fourteenth-cetury romance in Spain. It was originally called "The Scarlet Power."

ANSWERS TO Movie Fans

Dear Movie Editor—I am here to bother you again. It seems like I just can't keep away, but I'm not going to ask you a lot of silly questions as usual, so I hope you won't get tired of reading it. Here goes.

I have seen a great many pictures since I was big enough to know a good one when I saw it, and am sure that the movies are certainly getting better and better. In the past year it seems to me the pictures haven't been as good as they should be, but I am looking forward to better ones now that a new company has taken over our theaters. I know that we will see the best of everything. I think the Sun theater has some of the best shows in town sometimes. Will Mr. Shire have charge of the Sun? I heard that it was independent of the others. If it is, who has charge of it? The former manager certainly did have some good pictures. I haven't missed a chance to go there because you could go there and see some pictures that weren't shown anywhere else. The same way with the Strand. I am a great Tom Mix fan and the Strand is the only place where they show his picture. I never miss any of them. My sisters make fun of me, and call me a "cheap skate" and every other thing, but nevertheless I go every time he comes there. He is a wonderful actor and his horse is just as wonderful. He always does some dandy stunts and I am a great one for western pictures.

Now, dear editor, I want you to tell me all you can about Robert Frazer. I saw him at the Sun the past week in a picture called "Bread" and I enjoyed it very much. The whole cast of it was good, and I am sure if the manager of the Sun will continue to bring good pictures like that it will not be long until he will have everyone crowding into his little theater, and he has some dandy crowds now.—JUSTICE.

You are not the only admirer of Tom Mix. He is one of the most popular heroes of the screen. He is paid the largest weekly salary ever paid to a star of western pictures in his new contract with Fox. He will also share in the profits on his productions. Tom is very particular about his horses and his costumes. He is said to have forty different pairs of boots, and about as many hats. He wears white gloves upon all osccations, even when riding his horse. It would take a fair-sized salary to keep them clean.

Robert Frazer is not a newcomer in motion pictures by any means, but he's becoming quite a popular leading man. He played recently opposite Bebe Daniels in "Little Miss Bluebeard," and with Pola Negri in "The Charmer." You no doubt remember seeing him with Miss Negri also in "Men" a year or so ago. Pola says he is the "perfect lover." Before playing in the movies he was on the stage with Julia Arthur in several Shakespearean plays. He played opposite Mary Nash in "Thy Name Is Woman," and had the title role in "The Wanderer." He also supported Florence Reed in "The Mirage." Mr. Frazer is six feet tall and an all-round athlete. He was chosen to replace Doug Fairbanks in "The Snow Shop" when Doug quit to play in pictures, because of his physical fitness to throw the villain over the cliff. Mr. Frazer has dark hair and eyes. Besides being an actor, he is also a chemist, inventor, painter and a number of other different things. Oh, yes, he's a married man, too.

Eli Shire will not take over the management of the Sun theater, which will still be run under the direction of Nicholas Paper.

Dear Movie Editor—I am coming to you for the cast of "Secrets," in which Norma Talmadge played the role of an old lady at the last. I have seen many stars play the part of old women in pictures, but I thought Norma enacted the role the best I have ever seen it done. She was wonderful. She is the most versatile actress we have on the screen in my estimation, besides being the most beautiful. Was she ever on the stage before going into many times had she been married pictures? How old is she? How before she married Mr. Schenck? She looks more like Natalie than she does like Constance. I think Constance is as cute as a "bug's ear."

Does Norma have any children? Does Constance? Has Constance ever re-married? How many children does Natalie have? I remain as before, THANK YOU.

Norma Talmadge stepped from school into pictures without any previous stage training. She was fortunate in getting an early start, and marrying a weathy man who could greatly aid her in her screen career. I heard a critic say not long ago that Norma would be a great artist if she really had to work, and didn't have everything that heart could desire handed to her on a silver platter. I think she deserves a great deal more credit for attaining the heights she has reached when she knew every luxury was hers without working for it. She is only twenty-seven now, and has been working in motion pictures since she was fourteen. Joseph Schenck is her only husband, and they have no children. Constance is still single and has no children. She has had her name linked with nearly every eligible in filmdom since her divorce from Mr. Pialoglou, but she evidently intends to elude the matrimonial net until she is sure of what she wants. Natalie has two children.

The cast for "Secrets" is: Mary Marlowe, Lady Mary Carleton, Norma Talmadge; Sir John Carleton, Eugene O'Brien; Robert Carleton, Frank Elliott; John Carleton, George Cowell; Audrey Carleton, Clarissa Selwyne; Blanche Carleton, Alice Day; Susan, Patterson Dial; Miss Channing, Claire McDowell; Mrs. Mainwaring, Gertrude Astor; Mrs. Marlowe, Emily Fitzroy; Mr. Marlowe, George Nichols; "Lady Lessington," Florence Wix; Arbuthnot, Winter Hall; Dr. McGovern, Charles Ogle; Bob, Harvey Clark.

Dear Movie Editor: What would we fans do without you! Your page is the first I turn to on Sunday morning. I certainly do want you to know that I enjoy it. I am a great movie fan, and have been for years when lots of people scoffed at the movies. I remember when the Sun and the Majestic used to be the best motion picture houses here. I used to go at least once a week, and was severely criticized by my friends for having such "low brow" tastes. They seemed to think that going to a movie was about on the level with reading a "dime novel." Those same friends, however, are some of the most ardent fans in Lincoln now.

Has 'The Hoosier Schoolmaster" ever been filmed and if so, who were leading players?

What nationality is Carmel Myers? Is Richard Talmadge related to the Talmadge sisters? What is his address?

Has Claire Windsor's little boy ever played in pictures? Who played, the leading male role in "The Voice from the Minaret?"

Has Jack Holt finished "The Thundering Herd?" What will his next picture be, and who will play opposite him? Who will direct the picture? I am beginning to think that the director plays about as important a part in pictures as does the star.

Jack Holt is a favorite of mine. Lewis Stone and Raymond Griffith are other favorites. I think Raymond is going to be one of our future stars. He has simply 'run away" with every picture I have seen him in recently.

This letter is getting rather lengthy so will bring it to a close. Thank you very much in advance for your time and space, T. B.

Carmel Myers doesn't deny the fact that she is the daughter of Rabbi Myers of Los Angeles. Richard is not related to the Talmadge girls. In fact, Richard uses the name for screen purposes. He has another in private life. Address him at 1438 Grower street, Los Angeles.

Little Billy Bowes played in "What Do Men Want?" He has played in a few other pictures, too. Eugene O'Brien is opposite Miss Talmadge in "The Voice from the Minaret."

Yes, "The Thundering Herd" has been completed. Jack's next will be in "Eve's Secret" in which he is co-starred with Betty Compson. Clarence Badger is directing the picture. It is adapted from the stag play, "Moonflower" in which Elsie Ferguson played.

Dear Movie Editor—I am a frequent visitor to your department, so I'll not take up too much space this week. There has been quite a lot of comment lately about Gloria Swanson. It was reported some time ago that she had died, but that the company didn't want it announced until after her pictures were released, but you said she did not die. Now it has been reported that she is very sick and not expected to live, and that the company that she works for has released all of the pictures that she had made before she died, and now they are going to have her death announced and are saying she is sick, etc. just to satisfy the public. Is this true?

Will you please give me the address of Alan Crosland, William K. Howard, Hobart Henley and C. Gardiner Sullivan?

What will Doug Fairbanks next picture be, and who will be his leading lady?

Is little Clara Bow in pictures now? If so, what company is she working for and what is her next picture? I've only seen her once or twice, but I thought she was awfully cute.

What is John Patrick's next picture?

Hoping I have not overstayed this time, and thanking you in advance for answering my questions, I remain, FRANKIE.

What nonsense! Don't you, yourself, think it would be rather ridiculous for a company to suppress the news of a star's death, if it did occur, and then have her get sick and die when they wanted it announced? Gloria has been very ill, and for a time it was feared she would not recover, but she is improving now and hopes to be able to wear her new title for years yet.

It would be the height of folly for any company to even try to keep the news of a prominent star's death a secret as long as there are newspaper men abroad. There would be no reason for doing it, anyhow, because it has been proven that the box office receipts do not fall off any when the star in the picture has passed away. There are a few people who obect to seeing pictures when they know the player is dead, but they are the minority.

Address Alan Crosland and William K. Howard in care of Famous Players-Lasky, Hollywood, Cal. Hobart Henley may be reached in care of Warner Brothers, Hollywood. C. Gardiner Sullivan receives letters at the F. B. .O Studio, Melrose avenue, Hollywood.

John Patrick is working in "After Business Hours' 'for Waldorf Productions.

Dear Movie Editor—Your answers in the Sunday Star to the movie fans are very interesting and as a rule very correct, and many people interested in the play and players get a good deal of information and pleasure out of your letters

One correspondent asked you about who was the oldest and youngest movie directors. Permit me to state that the oldest director is George D. Baker, who is past sixty, and does not look it. He is also called the "dean of directors" and with the directing of "Balsar's Magic Skin," he celebrated also that as the work of his 100th play. I have the pleasure of knowing Mr. Baker, who has a brother in this state of Nebraska.

I have lived in California for sixteen years and am pretty well informed about the movie folks and saw a goodly number of them personally.

Do you think that the play, "Ben Hur" will ever get here to Lincoln? But I do hope it will. I can hardly wait for "Romola," to come here. A friend from California wrote to me that the prologue for "Romola" in the Grauman Egyptian Theater was very beautiful.

Please pardon me for this intrusion of writing to you. I hope you will also kindly overlook it, if my composition in English has a flaw or so. I never went to school in the United States. What I learned it was merely from books and newspapers and the dictionary. Wishing you good health and success in your work, Respectfully yours, M. J. D.

Thank you very much for your information concerning Mr. Baker. You should know the "sunny Southland" very well after dwelling there for so many years. You must have been there when the motion picture industry was a mere infant.

It will be sometime before "Ben Hur" is completed. They expect to release it by a year from now if they have good luck. It will no doubt be shown in Lincoln as soon as it is released, or perhaps it will tour the country as a road show, as some of the other big pictures have done with its own orchestra.

The prologues at Grauman's Egyptian Theater certainly add much to the enjoyment of the pictures. If one is fortunate enough to see a picture there, and then happens to see it at a smaller theater without the elaborate prologues for which the Egyptian Theater is famous, it doesn't seem like the same picture. The theater, itself, is enchanting, with its wonderful curtains and decorations; the ushers in their Egyptian costumes, and the faint odor of incense that is in the air. It's an ideal setting for any picture.

You are to be congratulated upon your writing and English. I receive letters from high school students who have had every advantage offered them, that are not nearly so well written.

Screen Siftings

Another Heart Throbber—"The Home Maker," Dorothy Canfield's heart throbbing novel of home life, will be produced at Universal City under the direction of King Baggot. Mary O'Hara, the woman who adapted "Black Oxen" and "The Prisoner of Zenda" for the screen, will write the continuity for "The Home Maker." The star and supporting cast have not yet been announced.

"Rose" Story Filmed.—Marie Prevost has been chosen to enact the role of Rose Kirby, the heroine of Kathleen Norris' story, "Rose of the World." The story is being filmed at the Warner Brothers studio under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

Dances To Fame—Greta Nissen, whose acting and dancing in the stage version of "The Beggar on Horseback," was one of the sensations of the past theatrical season, is to play the leading role in the Paramount picture, "In the Name of Love." The story is an original by Sada Cowan, and will be directed by Miss Cowan and Howard Higgins.

Richardo Cortez, who recently completed the title role in "The Spaniard," under the direction of Raout Walsh, has been chosen to play opposite Miss Nissen in "The Name of Love." Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Edythe Chapman, Lillian Leighton and Richard Arlen are all members of the supporting cast.

Ex-Actor Is Director—Alan Hale, who recently laid aside his make-up box, for the megaphone, has been chosen to direct Rudolph Valentino in his next picture, "The Hooded Falcon." Mr. Hale played with Valentino in "The Four Horsemen." 'The Hooded Falcon" is a story of fourteenth-cetury romance in Spain. It was originally called 'The Scarlet Power."

VISITORS WILL SEE SCORES OF AIDS AT MANOR

Housewives May Profit By Tour Through New Lincoln Home.

Infinite Number of Time Saving Conveniences Are Provided.

To the housewife, the tour through Stratford Manor will be an interesting one. But more than that, the journey will be a profitable one, for in the house she will find many of the little conveniences for which she has often wished, and an infinitely greater number of aids for which she has never felt the need: aids easily secured and easily incorporated in her own home

For the housewife, the tour through the Manor will really be a day in a land of dreams, for she can not but imagine herself the mistress of the Manor, the lady of the craming house she explores.

Some lucky Lincoln lady will some day of course be mistress of the Manor, and to her each day the house will become more and more a home. Each day will find some time saved by the use of the conveniences furnished in the house; each day she will again have occasion to appreciate the carefulness with which the plans have been made and the built-in conveniences installed.

To the woman who does her own housework, the kitchen is an all-important room, and the arrangement of this one part of the house will go a long way in her satisfaction with the home in which she lives. More time and thought are expended on planning the kitchen than on any other room, and who can say that the health and happiness of the American family are not related to the arrangement, the equipment, and the finish of the kitchen?

Movable labor-saving devices are legion for the kitchen. Minor utensils, the use of which save minutes and at the same time save the energy of the busy housewife, are secured from time to time by the thoughtful housekeeper. But built-in equipment is permanent, and must probably be chosen once for all.

Choice of built-in cupboards which extend from floor to ceiling is one feature in securing satisfactory built-in furniture. At Stratford Manor, this type is used, thus eliminating the dust-catching places above and below. Three-ply paneling is used in place of the wallboard sometimes found, on account of its greater sanitary value.

Wood doors are used in the cupboards to one side, back of which food stuffs will be stored, but the china cabinet is fitted with a glass door, that the dishes may be seen, and for greater attractiveness through the door to the dining room.

To Mrs. Harvey Rathbone goes much of the credit for the convenient arrangement of the kitchen at the Manor. Mrs. Rathbone spent a busy morning at the unfinished house, working out in careful detail the arrangement of furniture for the important room. A small drawer was added to the high cupboard to the left of the sink, just large enough to hold cleaning powder and the kitchen soaps "Toe-room" at the cabinets, so that the housewife can stand close enough to her worktable to prevent fatigue, was another of the kitchen improvements included under the supervision of this practical housewife. Space for the movable worktable was left below the window to the back of the house, so that a triangle arrangement is perfected for the Frigidaire refrigerator, the worktable, and the stove. A clock-niche is the other unusual feature included, so that the small clock which makes so much difference by its ticking as to whether or not the roast is properly cooked and the vegetables tender enough, may be in no danger of falling from its allotted place.

Two steps lead from the kitchen to the stairway which leads from the living room. These are an additional assistance to the housewife, whose morning preparations in the kitchen are often interrupted by the necessity to complete some of the minor tasks left unfinished in the second story, or even by journeys to the store-room in the attic, or the finished room on the third floor.

Upstairs the built-in conveniences are legion as well. Medicine cabinets are installed in second and third-floor bathrooms, and two linen closets on the second floor are a decided addition to the convenience for the lady of the house. The window-seat in the large upstairs room which has made so favorable an impression on the housekeepers who have made visits to the house, will be another convenience, for it simplifies the furnishing problem amazingly, and adds to the usefulness of the window not only for lighting, but also for comfort.

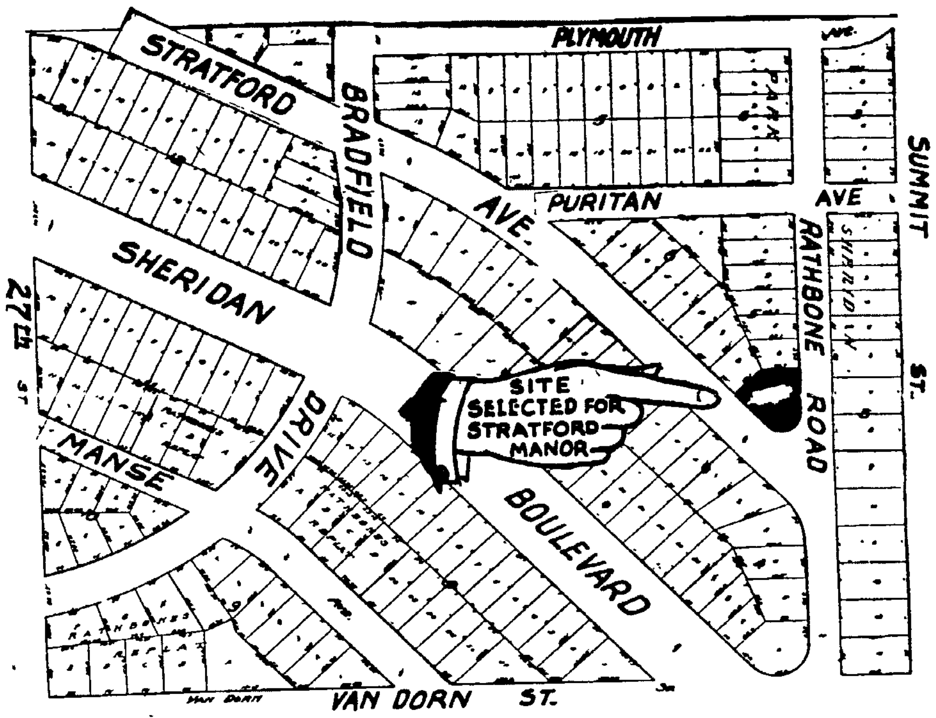
The stair-case is one of the extremely interesting features of the Manor as well ,and the auxiliary stair which leads to third floor is of almost equal importance. The slope of the stairs makes an unrealized difference to the housewife's fatigue at the end of a busy day, and the easy incline of the Stratford Manor stairs is a matter for remark. The stairs leading to the third floor are as wide as the lower flight, and make the carrying of trunks and boxes to the third floor a much easier matter than is customary.

From the use of a crude ladder to the modern wide graceful flight of stairs is a far cry, but that has been the history of this particular part in home-building. Latest improvements include the possibility of assembling a staircase virtually without the use of a nail. The various pieces are "tongued-and-grooved" together, a process very similar to the "dove-tailing" found in high-grade furniture. This eliminates the possibility of warping of the wood after the stairs are installed, and makes a squeaky staircase, that abomination to the housewife, almost an impossibility.

But many other conveniences have been built in at Stratford Manor. Various conveniences have now come to be considered integral parts of the business of building a house, and are as such considered by the builder. Furniture and conveniences from Curtis, Towle, and Paine companies, or from any other of the concerns which specialize in high-grade and practical built-in furniture, have come to be regarded as necessities in the erection of a house.

The fireplace, which has long held so important a part in the stories and pictures of home life, has also come to be regarded as the logical center of the house. Yet an ungraceful mantel can mar the whole effect of the fireplace, no matter how carefully its tiling may be done, no matter how good its proportions. At the Manor, a straight mantel of dark oak, finished to harmonize with the other woodwork, has been installed, and the large heavy fireplace, with its spreading mantel-piece has become a distinguishing feature.

Site of Stratford Manor



The site of the Manor is located at the corner of Stratford avenue and Rathbone road, just a block from the intersection of Sheridan boulevard and Van Dorn street. The house is located on the flatiron-shaped plot of the triangular block, and faced southeast.

Living Room of Home Should Be Resort Of All

The living-room is the shrine of the family life, the place for the gathering of the clans, the oasis in the so-called spiritual desert of the jazz age.

But to be a true inner shrine for the members of the family, it must be large enough to accommodate all of them, and it must be so attractively furnished that they will wish to spend their time there. The ethical effect of furnishings is significant, for to the comfortable properly finished room will come all the members of the family, while the one which has any jarring notes will be shunned by all alike.

The point of central interest in the living room is of course the fireplace. Today it is fashionable to be old-fashioned, at least in house furnishing, and the mother of the household will have less trouble if she has a fireplace so that her brood may gather in the evening around the hearth.

If the architecture of the living room permits a real hearth fire, she is doubly fortunate, for it is possible through the use of the fire to give to the living room the real effect desired for long evenings at home, and the hearth is the heart of the home.

ANTIQUES USEFUL

Antiques in furniture, bearing the legend "Made in America," are not so ridiculous as they sound. For the underlying design is actually taken from the furniture of a century gone by, and the quality of the finish is infinitely superior. It is only in the deception of certain dealers that the use of modern-made "antiques" is condemnable.

Lincoln's Home Beautiful, In Which Whole City Has Interest, Started Only Four Months Ago

Four months ago, building operations were started at site of Stratford Manor, Lincoln's home beautiful. Today Lincoln people are exploring the newly-built home, looking with wonder and admiration at the work of the [illegible] weeks: each seeing in the [illegible] as it now stands the possibility of realization of his own particular dreams.

From October 24, when Mayor Zehrung turned the first furrow of earth at the Manor site, to March 8, when the house completed and furnished, is open for inspection, is a short time indeed. Yet in that time, the change from an unoccupied lot to the site of Lincoln's home beautiful, the English house rising proudly from it, has been achieved. Through the co-operation of local business men, men whose firms are made up of people who realize that Lincoln's gain is in the long run personal profit, the house has been built.

The building of the house was intended to exemplify the best practices in the selection of materials and the most modern methods of good construction. Its erection was intended as a lesson to those interested in home building, and to them was given the opportunity of watching the processes in the order of their completion.

The foundation of the house is an all-important feature in any house, and it is of interest to local people to know that the brick of the foundation work as well as that of the house itself was made here in Lincoln. The house is built of enduring, hard-burned, shale brick, so that frost, fire nor time can affect it. Unsightly cracks, sticking doors, and rattling windows follow improperly constructed foundations, and the materials are of paramount importance.

Foundation Built Well.

The foundation not only carries the weight of the house, but its quality insures a dry basement, for storage purposes, and one where damp air will avoid the possibility of lack of laundering facilities.

Too many home-builders apparently have overlooked the fact that the basement represents from a half to a fourth of the total available space in the house, and with the idea of saving a few dollars, they have compromised with quality in foundation work, only to discover later than they have paid dearly for their trouble in saving a few dollars.

Carpenter work at the Manor was begun November 7 of last year, and lathing was begun December 12, according to the records of the Harvey Rathbone company office. The scaffolding for the Manor was quickly raised; window and door frames were placed as the apertures were cut in the walls. Double-headers were of course used, placed edgewise, to support the weight from above Sheeting of ship-lap, nailed to the studding, was used next, to make it possible to trust the house to the rigorous climate of Nebraska, with her frequent and sudden changes of temperature and wind. Waterproof paper further protects the house, and protects the inner layers, since it is placed just inward from the brick wall

Parallel joists were next in order, forming a foundation for the rough floor, for which the boards run diagonally across the rooms. Bridging connects the joists in the well-built house, and is installed to prevent the possibility of sagging floors or insufficient support

Lumber at the Manor house was pre-seasoned, to prevent danger of swelling or contraction with changing climatic conditions. As a further guard, the diagonal boards of the rough floor were securely fastened to the studding below them, and three eight penny common nails were used in each rough floor board at its intersection with the studding.

Much Soon Accomplished.

Within the first month, work progressed with surprising speed at the Manor, for by the last of November the brick work on the exterior had been begun. The scaffolding rose stark against the sky-line of this newer residence section of the city, and window and door frames had already been placed. Spaces for the various rooms had been marked off accurately with respect to the architects' drawings; the staircase spaces had been placed; and weatherproofing details were practically completed.

Two layers of tar paper were used on the sides and roof of the house for complete safety, and instead of leaving gaps between the wide boards of the roof to form the foundation for the shingles, these pieces of wood were placed touching one another.

Wiring and rough plumbing were the next steps at the house, for the pipes and wires had to be covered by the plaster and lath. Inspection by the city authorities was of course necessary before the work could be completed. These are important matters in house-building, for the danger of having to tear out a wall and repair plumbing and wiring is a grave one if the matter is not properly handled at first. To change a small detail here or a minor matter there is a small affair unless the preliminaries of tearing out walls are found necessary, in which case the labor assumes gigantic proportions. For this reason, special care was taken at the Manor as to the installation of wiring and the rough plumbing.

Cold weather here made its inroads in the work at the Manor. No less formidable an enemy than Jack Frost, with his ally, Old Man Winter, came to mar the happiness of the builder, and to try the patience of the home-owner or prospective builder. But an interlude of warmer weather was the Christmas present which old Santa Claus had in his pack for the builders of the home beautiful, and plastering operations following the application of lath were resumed the day after Christmas at the house. Working at top speed, the plasterers applied the first layer, or "brown coat" of rougher plaster during that week end. With the application of this first layer the house was sealed up, instead of being left unprotected save by the lath.

Furnace Kept Burning.

Plastering is the only operation in the building of the house after the excavation is completed where weather conditions can actually bring activity to a halt, and the Buying or Building a Home?

A community's or a city's enterprise and progressiveness are in most cases gauged by the character of its building development. This applies not only to residential buildings, but to business buildings as well. The structure that is built for permanency, architectural beauty and practicability is a real link in a city's record of advancement.

We do not mean to imply of course, that every one who buys or builds can afford the same class of HOME, but you can build a HOME of the better type through the Loan Plan we offer, for you can extend your payments over a period of 15 years if necessary, on easy monthly payments. Buying or building a home is an important event—it should be approached with care and thought.

VISITORS WILL SEE SCORES OF AIDS AT MANOR

Housewives May Profit By Tour Through New Lincoln Home. Infinite Number of Time Saving Conveniences Are Provided.

To the housewife, the tour through Stratford Manor will be an interesting one. But more than that, the journey will be a profitable one, for in the house she will find many of the little conveniences for which she has often wished, and an infinitely greater number of aids for which she has never felt the need: aids easily secured and easily incorporated in her own home.

For the housewife, the tour through the Manor will really be a day in a land of dreams, for she can not but imagine herself the mistress of the Manor, the lady of the craming house she explores.

Some lucky Lincoln lady will some day of course be mistress of the Manor, and to her each day the house will become more and more a home. Each day will find some time saved by the use of the conveniences furnished in the house; each day she will again have occasion to appreciate the carefulness with which the plans have been made and the built-in conveniences installed.

To the woman who does her own housework, the kitchen is an all-important room, and the arrangement of this one part of the house will go a long way in her satisfaction with the home in which she lives. More time and thought are expended on planning the kitchen than on any other room, and who can say that the health and happiness of the American family are not related to the arrangement, the equipment, and the finish of the kitchen?

Movable labor-saving devices are legion for the kitchen. Minor utensils, the use of which save minutes and at the same time save the energy of the busy housewife, are secured from time to time by the thoughtful housekeeper. But built-in equipment is permanent, and must probably be chosen once for all.

Choice of built-in cupboards which extend from floor to ceiling is one feature in securing satisfactory built-in furniture. At Stratford Manor, this type is used, thus eliminating the dust-catching places above and below. Three-ply paneling is used in place of the wall-board sometimes found, on account of its greater sanitary value.

Wood doors are used in the cupboards to one side, back of which food stuffs will be stored, but the china cabinet is fitted with a glass door, that the dishes may be seen, and for greater attractiveness through the door to the dining room.

To Mrs. Harvey Rathbone goes much of the credit for the convenient arrangement of the kitchen at the Manor. Mrs. Rathbone spent a busy morning at the unfinished house, working out in careful detail the arrangement of furniture for the important room. A small drawer was added to the high cupboard to the left of the sink, just large enough to hold cleaning powder and the kitchen soaps. "Toe-room" at the cabinets, so that the housewife can stand close enough to her worktable to prevent fatigue, was another of the kitchen improvements included under the supervision of this practical housewife. Space for the movable worktable was left below the window to the back of the house, so that a triangle arrangement is perfected for the Frigidaire refrigerator, the worktable, and the stove. A clock-niche is the other unusual feature included, so that the small clock which makes so much difference by its ticking as to whether or not the roast is properly cooked and the vegetables tender enough, may be in no danger of falling from its allotted place.

Two steps lead from the kitchen to the stairway which leads from the living room. These are an additional assistance to the housewife, whose morning preparations in the kitchen are often interrupted by the necessity to complete some of the minor tasks left unfinished in the second story, or even by journeys to the store-room in the attic, or the finished room on the third floor.

Upstairs the built-in conveniences are legion as well. Medicine cabinets are installed in second and third-floor bathrooms, and two linen closets on the second floor are a decided addition to the convenience for the lady of the house. The window-seat in the large upstairs room which has made so favorable an impression on the housekeepers who have made visits to the house, will be another convenience, for it simplifies the furnishing problem amazingly, and adds to the usefulness of the window not only for lighting, but also for comfort.

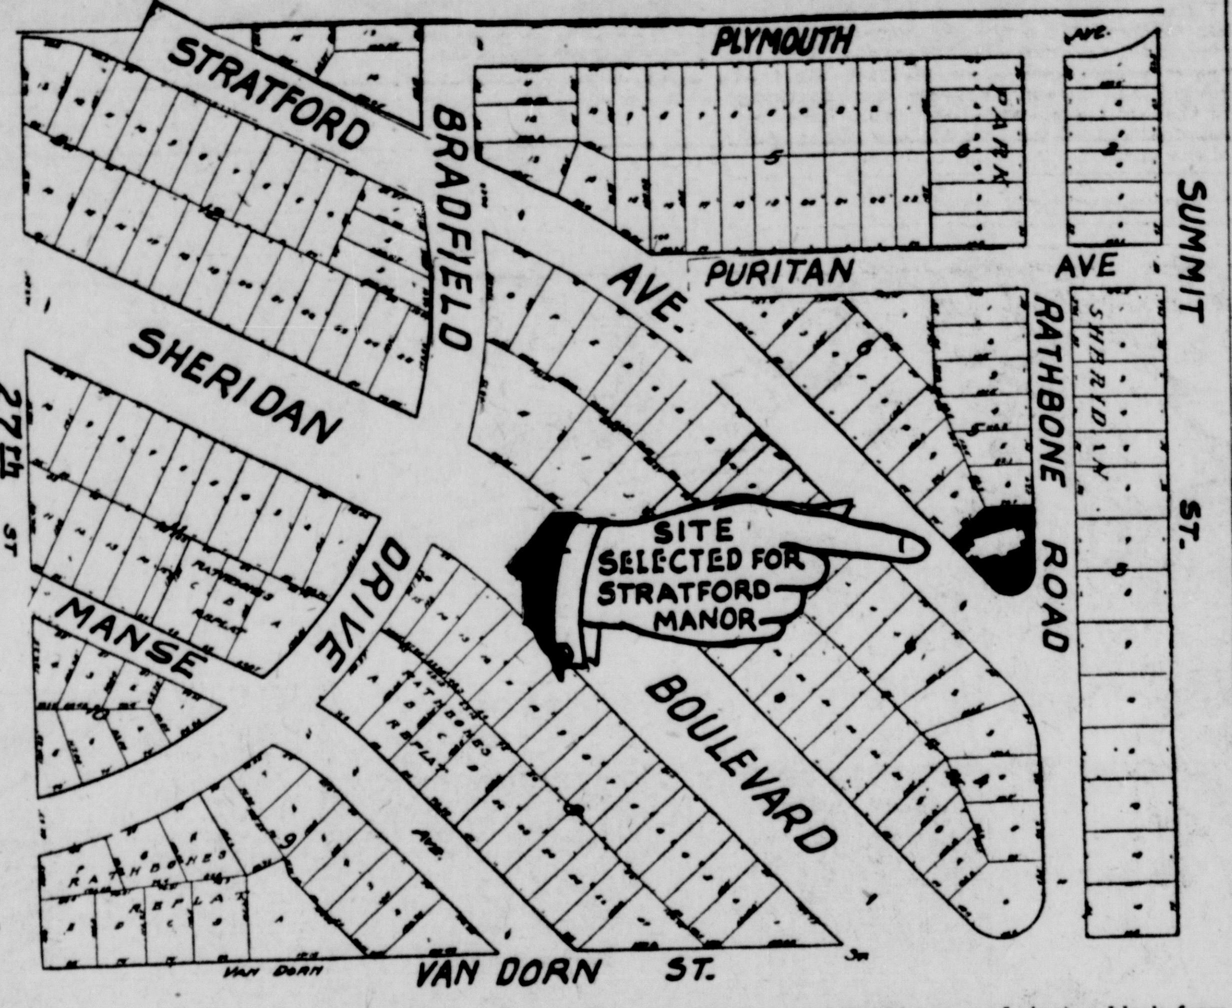
The stair-case is one of the extremely interesting features of the Manor as well ,and the auxiliary stair which leads to third floor is of almost equal importance. The slope of the stairs makes an unrealized difference to the housewife's fatigue at the end of a busy day, and the easy incline of the Stratford Manor stairs is a matter for remark. The stairs leading to the third floor are as wide as the lower flight, and make the carrying of trunks and boxes to the third floor a much easier matter than is customary.

From the use of a crude ladder to the modern wide graceful flight of stairs is a far cry, but that has been the history of this particular part in home-building. Latest improvements include the possibility of assembling a staircase virtually without the use of a nail. The various pieces are "tongued-and-grooved" together, a process very similar to the "dove-tailing" found in high-grade furniture. This eliminates the possibility of warping of the wood after the stairs are installed, and makes a squeaky staircase, that abomination to the housewife, almost an impossibility.

But many other conveniences have been built in at Stratford Manor. Various conveniences have now come to be considered integral parts of the business of building a house, and are as such considered by the builder. Furniture and conveniences from Curtis, Towle, and Paine companies, or from any other of the concerns which specialize in high-grade and practical built-in furniture, have come to be regarded as necessities in the erection of a house.

The fireplace, which has long held so important a part in the stories and pictures of home life, has also come to be regarded as the logical center of the house. Yet an ungraceful mantel can mar the whole effect of the fireplace, no matter how carefully its tiling may be done, no matter how good its proportions. At the Manor, a straight mantel of dark oak, finished to harmonize with the other woodwork, has been installed, and the large heavy fireplace, with its spreading mantel-piece has become a distinguishing feature.

Site of Stratford Manor



The site of the Manor is located at the corner of Stratford avenue and Rathbone road, just a block from the intersection of Sheridan boulevard and Van Dorn street. The house is located on the flatiron-shaped plot of the triangular block, and faced southeast.

Living Room of Home Should Be Resort Of All

The living-room is the shrine of the family life, the place for the gathering of the clans, the oasis in the so-called spiritual desert of the jazz age.

But to be a true inner shrine for the members of the family, it must be large enough to accommodate all of them, and it must be so attractively furnished that they will wish to spend their time there. The ethical effect of furnishings is significant, for to the comfortable properly finished room will come all the members of the family, while the one which has any jarring notes will be shunned by all alike.

The point of central interest in the living room is of course the fireplace. Today it is fashionable to be old-fashioned, at least in house furnishing, and the mother of the household will have less trouble if she has a fireplace so that her brood may gather in the evening around the hearth.

If the architecture of the living room permits a real hearth fire, she is doubly fortunate, for it is possible through the use of the fire to give to the living room the real effect desired for long evenings at home, and the hearth is the heart of the home.

ANTIQUES USEFUL

Antiques in furniture, bearing the legend "Made in America," are not so ridiculous as they sound. For the underlying design is actually taken from the furniture of a century gone by, and the quality of the finish is infinitely superior. It is only in the deception of certain dealers that the use of modern-made "antiques" is condemnable.

Lincoln's Home Beautiful, In Which Whole City Has Interest, Started Only Four Months Ago

Four months ago, building operations were started at site of Stratford Manor, Lincoln's home beautiful. Today Lincoln people are exploring the newly-built home, looking with wonder and admiration at the work of the [illegible]t weeks: each seeing in the h[illegible] as it now stands the possibility of realization of his own particular dreams.

From October 24, when Mayor Zehrung turned the first furrow of earth at the Manor site, to March 8, when the house completed and furnished, is open for inspection, is a short time indeed. Yet in that time, the change from an unoccupied lot to the site of Lincoln's home beautiful, the English house rising proudly from it, has been achieved. Through the co-operation of local business men, men whose firms are made up of people who realize that Lincoln's gain is in the long run personal profit, the house has been built.

The building of the house was intended to exemplify the best practices in the selection of materials and the most modern methods of good construction. Its erection was intended as a lesson to those interested in home building, and to them was given the opportunity of watching the processes in the order of their completion.

The foundation of the house is an all-important feature in any house, and it is of interest to local people to know that the brick of the foundation work as well as that of the house itself was made here in Lincoln. The house is built of enduring, hard-burned, shale brick, so that frost, fire nor time can affect it. Unsightly cracks, sticking doors, and rattling windows follow improperly constructed foundations, and the materials are of paramount importance.

Foundation Built Well.

The foundation not only carries the weight of the house, but its quality insures a dry basement, for storage purposes, and one where damp air will avoid the possibility of lack of laundering facilities.

Too many home-builders apparently have overlooked the fact that the basement represents from a half to a fourth of the total available space in the house, and with the idea of saving a few dollars, they have compromised with quality in foundation work, only to discover later than they have paid dearly for their trouble in saving a few dollars.

Carpenter work at the Manor was begun November 7 of last year, and lathing was begun December 12, according to the records of the Harvey Rathbone company office. The scaffolding for the Manor was quickly raised; window and door frames were placed as the apertures were cut in the walls. Double-headers were of course used, placed edgewise, to support the weight from above. Sheeting of ship-lap, nailed to the studding, was used next, to make it possible to trust the house to the rigorous climate of Nebraska, with her frequent and sudden changes of temperature and wind. Waterproof paper further protects the house, and protects the inner layers, since it is placed just inward from the brick wall.

Parallel joists were next in order, forming a foundation for the rough floor, for which the boards run diagonally across the rooms. Bridging connects the joists in the well-built house, and is installed to prevent the possibility of sagging floors or insufficient support.

Lumber at the Manor house was pre-seasoned, to prevent danger of swelling or contraction with changing climatic conditions. As a further guard, the diagonal boards of the rough floor were securely fastened to the studding below them, and three eight penny common nails were used in each rough floor board at its intersection with the studding.

Much Soon Accomplished.

Within the first month, work progressed with surprising speed at the Manor, for by the last of November the brick work on the exterior had been begun. The scaffolding rose stark against the sky-line of this newer residence section of the city, and window and door frames had already been placed. Spaces for the various rooms had been marked off accurately with respect to the architects' drawings; the staircase spaces had been placed; and weatherproofing details were practically completed.

Two layers of tar paper were used on the sides and roof of the house for complete safety, and instead of leaving gaps between the wide boards of the roof to form the foundation for the shingles, these pieces of wood were placed touching one another.

Wiring and rough plumbing were the next steps at the house, for the pipes and wires had to be covered by the plaster and lath. Inspection by the city authorities was of course necessary before the work could be completed. These are important matters in house-building, for the danger of having to tear out a wall and repair plumbing and wiring is a grave one if the matter is not properly handled at first. To change a small detail here or a minor matter there is a small affair unless the preliminaries of tearing out walls are found necessary, in which case the labor assumes gigantic proportions. For this reason, special care was taken at the Manor as to the installation of wiring and the rough plumbing.

Cold weather here made its inroads in the work at the Manor. No less formidable an enemy than Jack Frost, with his ally, Old Man Winter, came to mar the happiness of the builder, and to try the patience of the home-owner or prospective builder. But an interlude of warmer weather was the Christmas present which old Santa Claus had in his pack for the builders of the home beautiful, and plastering operations following the application of lath were resumed the day after Christmas at the house. Working at top speed, the plasterers applied the first layer, or "brown coat" of rougher plaster during that week end. With the application of this first layer, the house was sealed up, instead of being left unprotected save by the lath.

Furnace Kept Burning.

Plastering is the only operation in the buildng of the house after the excavation is completed where weather conditions can actually bring activity to a halt, and the Shrubs and flowers which grow out a small distance from the ground must too, be planted at the proper seasons, carefully tended and thinned when necessary. The second year, Mr Herminghaus thinks, should see a presentable landscape effect, and the full execution of the plan can be realized in all probability within three years from the beginning of the development.

Week of Better Homes Observed Here May 10-17

"Better Homes Week" is the name given May 10 to 17, when throughout the nation, home demonstrations will be given. Mrs. E. L. Marty, president of the Lincoln Woman's club, has accepted the invitation of Herbert Hoover to act as local chairman to promote a better homes demonstration in Lincoln.

Fifteen hundred communities last year celebrated the "better homes" week, and the movement assumes greater proportions when the fact, brought out through surveys during the last nation-wide demonstration, that out of the five billions of dollars spent for building last year, two billions were for residence buildings, is known. It must also be remembered that additional funds are expended for furnishings and finishing work.

The better homes movement is supported by private gifts and public funds, and has no commercial backing whatsoever. Its objects are stated as the desire to put knowledge of high standards in home furnishing, and equipment within the reach of all citizens of the United States, to encourage the building of sound and attractive houses, and to encourage thrift and home ownership. The committees have as their object the encouragement of sensible and appropriate furnishings with an eye to housekeeping efficiency, the encouragement of general study of home conditions with a view to improvement, the encouragement of home training instruction in public [illegible] promotion of neighborhood improvement.

MIRRORS INVALUABLE.

Mirrors are used in the home chiefly to complement other furniture, but in the small house they are invaluable in adding to the impression of space, for they reflect back the space already seen to practically double the impression.

Full Charm Of Stratford Manor Landscape Will Not Be Evident For Three Years

"Fools rush in where wise men fear to tread" says an old adage, and this is especially true, it would seem, of building operations. So many minor matters must be considered before the actual excavation and the raising of the walls may be undertaken, that it is necessary indeed to have expert aid and advice.

The "contour map," for example. Who would ever think of having a drawing to show how the land sloped? Who would ever consider the matter of drainage in relation to the type of architecture, or the possible effect of the land's conformation before he decided upon the type of architecture?

Yet these are all-important details, and must be considered with the greatest care as preliminaries to the actual task of building.

For Stratford Manor, the contour map was especially important for the site of the house is an irregular lot, with an appreciable fall toward the street side. The Manor is placed on a flatiron-shaped lot, so that there is but one possible direction for its facing. Whether the house should be placed to the front of the lot or to the center, or as far back as was possible still leaving space for the cement drive, was, however, a problem.

A circular garden, extending from the sidewalk at the front practically to the door of the Manor was seen to be the solution of the problem of the eccentric lot and its landscaping. A six-foot rise was observed in the 20 feet between the walk and the house, and this can be absorbed with comparative ease by the use of the circular garden plot.

A Modern Realization.

English landscaping combines with the half-timber of the architecture at the Manor, making of it a typically modern reproduction of an old-fashioned residence. Unusual in its realization, the circular treatment planned for the grounds of Lincoln's home beautiful adds greatly to the charm of the architecture, as the beauty of a perfect jewel is enhanced by the properly chosen mounting.

"The circle" is the unusual feature of the development plan as laid out by Ernst Herminghaus, landscape architect. That "Rome was not built in a day," and that the final beauty of the Manor will not be realized its first year, must be understood, but the house as it now stands shows the possibility of the plan already undertaken.

The house is placed on a direct line with the axis of the circle whose southeastern side forms the intersection of Stratford avenue with Rathbone road.

Entered from the front door of the Manor, this round space is a grassy plot, framed by perennials, planted with a view to coloring, height and season. The outer rim of the floral tiers is formed by a background of Persian lilac, a small-leaved variety with lavender blossoms. Whitney crabs, which are small, pyramidal trees, will be used in the outer circle, so that to the casual passer by, these formal trees will contrast with the grassy lawn, and will be backed by the darker green of the lilac bushes.

To the resident of the Manor, or the fortunate guest who is privileged to spend however small a time there, "the circle" will serve as a summer out-of-doors conservatory. Velvety green grass will form the carpet for the circular space; and the walls will be made of the restful green of the lilac and crab, which together form the background for the brilliantly-colored flowers, some of which will be in bloom at every season of the year.

Privacy Is Achieved.

From the street, the sidewalk is flanked by backberry and elm trees on the parking—trees which shed their shadows on the cement of the promenade and on the smooth gray of the pavement. On the inner side, large trees are used toward the back of the lot, with various shrubs extending along the lot line. Japanese barbarry, red-twigged dogwood, forsythia, honeysuckle, mock orange, Japanese rose, spirea, red snowberry, lilac, cranberry and snowball are the shrubs mentioned in the development plans.

A flagstone walk leads from Rathbone road to the side entrance of the house, and is matched by the terrace which opens into the living room, and by the stoop at the front door which gives entrance to the garden, striking again the old-world note in the Manor. Tall hedges, flowering at their own seasons, carry out the tradition of privacy and withdrawal from the hum of commerce, which is so important a detail in the use of this particular type of architecture.

Persian lilacs will be used to separate the Manor site from the lots of adjacent property. Taller trees back up the shrubs at the back of the lot where the drive comes to enter the garage at the rear of the house. The Y-shaped drive, planned to furnish space for turning an automobile to face the opposite direction, adds irregularity to the shape of the lot, unifying the development plan.

Thus are the plans made for the landscaping and improvement of the grounds surrounding the "home beautiful." Thus are the specifications completed for the home which all Lincoln will admire.

Those who go to the Manor this afternoon or within the coming week will, however, find no velvety plots of grass, no leafy trees, no flowering perennials, no gracefully-twining shrubs on the site of the Manor. For Nature must have time to carry out her work of beautification, and even with the aid of man can not accomplish her perfect work during the inclement weather.

Man has, however, been able to improve greatly upon the plans and upon the proper realization of those plans. So it is that the two evergreen trees, one on either side of the large front doorway, are flourishing. So it is that the tall trees on Stratford avenue and those on Rathbone road are healthy, and show every sign of leafing out in the spring. So it is that the ground has already been prepared ready for sodding, to prepare the grassy lot which is so vastly important for the house.

"Great oaks from little acorns grow" as any schoolboy can tell you, but the process is a long one. Modern knowledge has made possible the transplantation of large trees, however, and already the tall trees around the border of the parking at the Manor are growing in proof of the possibility.

HOURS SPENT IN CHOOSING COLORS

Mrs. Harvey Rathbone and Others Selected Drapery With Care.

Harmoniousness In Tones Has Big Part In Comfort of a Home.

Color plays so important a part in our lives that we sometimes fail to appreciate its true influence on the things we do and the way we feel. More digestions are ruined by the use of unsuitable colors for dining room decoration, it has been said, than by poorly-cooked foods.

In the choice of draperies at Stratford Manor the matter of uniformity was watched with great care, and the matter of suitability for the purpose for which the room is intended was also of great importance

Mrs. Harvey Rathbone deserves much of the credit for the taste in the choice of draperies, for she spent a great deal of time and much careful consideration on the matter. Hours were spent at the house imagining the various possibilities; and other hours were spent at the Perkins-Huffman company store deciding on ways and means of carrying out her preferences for the house.

Cretonne, in a rather large figure, is used in the downstairs of the house, giving life and verve and rest to the rooms, finished as they are in dark wood The carpets at the house were chosen with a view to withstanding the heavy wear which would follow the visits of Lincoln people to the Manor, and were secured through the Perkins-Huffman commpany, from the Bigelow-Hartford mills.

The Dutch style curtain is used in the juvenile room, where Dutch figures are painted in rose and blue tints on the French gray background of the child's furniture. Rose-colored frills, picoted, are used around the spread for the child's bed, and figured material forms the covering.

Rose is used in the master's room, with spreads for the twin beds. These, ruffled around the edges, are of silky figured material, which is sun fast and tub fast. The same color is used for the curtains and valances, framing the white curtains at the windows.

The guest room, where we find black painted furniture, with delicate flower groups in pastel shades, helitrope predominating, has lavender valances at the windows, and the bedspread is of gold-colored silky material, with a figure woven in. It, too, is ruffled and picoted.

The third floor room, furnished in birds-eye maple, carries out its idea of simplicity by using dotted Swiss curtains at the windows. Thus the crisp starchy effect is secured at the windows at comparatively small cost.

Scenes At the Ground Breaking

—MacDonald.

The ground-breaking ceremonies at the site of Stratford Manor marked the beginning of active work, for after Mayor F. C. Zehrung turned the first furrow, excavation was rushed to prepare for building operations. The upper picture shows Mayor Zehrung, who as a mayor has to be a good plowman, and who guided the hand plow as it turned up a twenty-two foot furrow.

A crowd of about two hundred Lincoln people attended this first step in the building program. Among them were the members of the group shown below:

Center row: Miss Margaret Fedde, home economics department, University of Nebraska; Mrs. L. W. Wilkens, leader home economics department Lincoln Woman's club; Mrs. E. L. Marty, president Lincoln Woman's club; Miss Helen McDonald; and Mrs. F. M. Hall.

VARIED TREATMENT

If the rug is figured let the draperies be plain; if solid color is used in your floor covering, use figured draperies and hangings. Length of overcurtains depends upon whether one desires to make the ceiling appear higher or lower; overcurtains to the floor make rooms seem higher, and curtains reaching to the casing make the room seem lower A group of windows should be tied together with a valance, for a valance over a single window gives an unfinished appearance.

HOURS SPENT IN CHOOSING COLORS

Lincoln's Home Beautiful

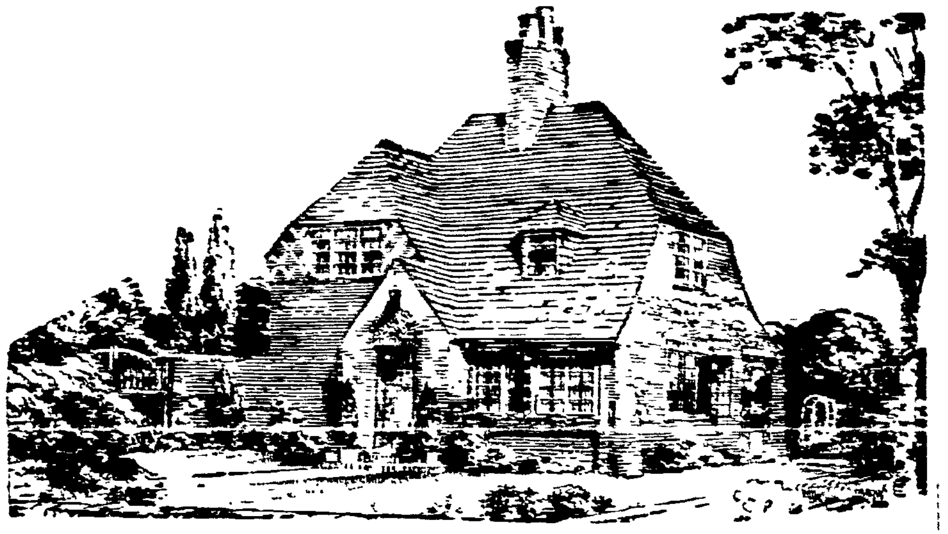
You can afford a brick home now



The charming English Cottage shown above is designed to bring out the full beauty of Thorncliffe Clinkers. Complete plans and specifications of this house may be obtained from us.

HAVE you ever longed for the summer coolness and the winter warmth of a brick house, for the pride and joy of ownership felt by the man who dwells in a home of brick?

If the beauty and charm - - the permanence and fire safety - - of the brick house appeal to you, do not dismiss brick as a possibility for your home on the mistaken idea that it is too expensive.

Once when frame construction was very cheap, the brick house was a luxury for the favored few. But the nearby forests are gone now, lumber must come long distances, paying high freight rates. The cost of frame construction has doubled and redoubled. At the same time quantity production with modern labor saving machinery has improved the quality and reduced the relative cost of brick.

Today you can build your home of brick for only seven per cent more than a frame house would cost. The many savings in a brick house after it is built -- slow depreciation, elimination of repairs, low heating and insurance costs, painting confined to the doors and window openings--in five years amount to more than twice the additional first cost of brick.

At Yankee Hill, a suburb of Lincoln, is located the great plant of the YANKEE HILL BRICK COMPANY. Here are made not only building brick, but also high quality face brick in a wide variety of colors and textures. Because of the saving in freight, the Nebraska Home-Builder enjoys a distinct price advantage in the purchase of YANKEE HILL BRICK.

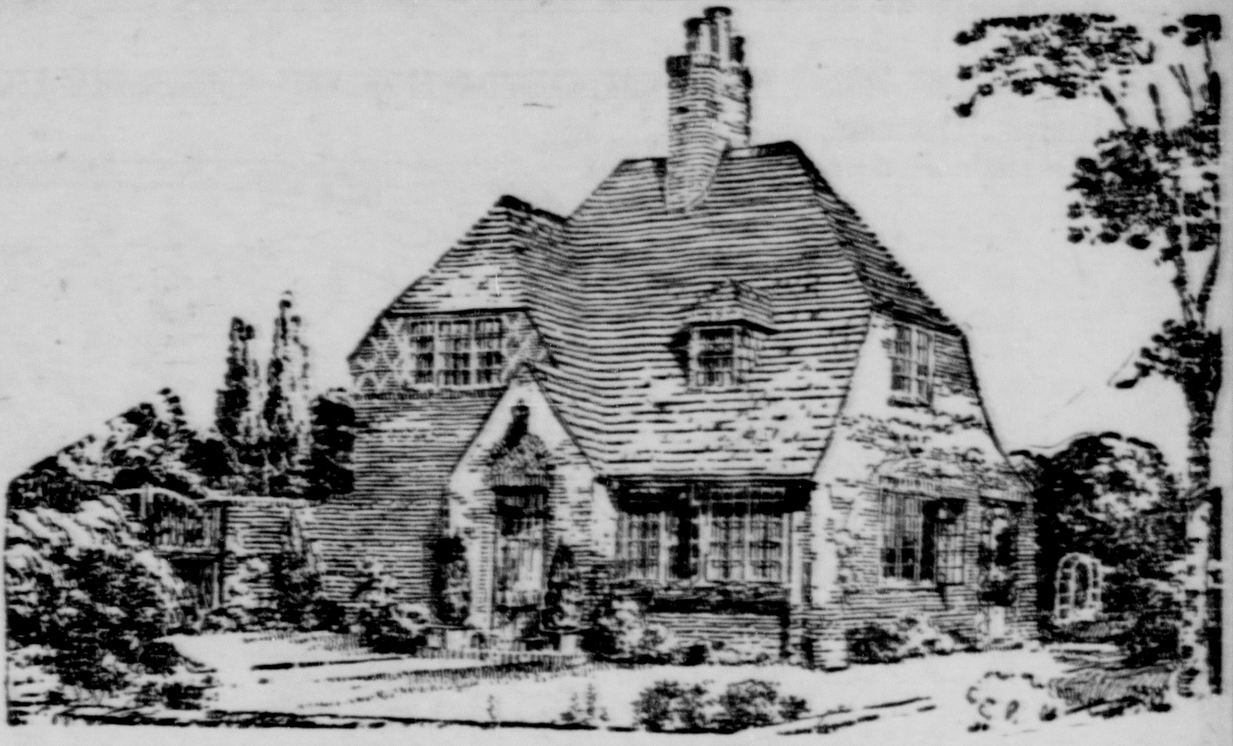
Yankee Hill Brick for Economy Comfort, Beauty Durability Fire Safety

You can afford a brick home now



The charming English Cottage shown above is designed to bring out the full beauty of Thorncliffe Clinkers. Complete plans and specifications of this house may be obtained from us.

HAVE you ever longed for the summer coolness and the winter warmth of a brick house, for the pride and joy of ownership felt by the man who dwells in a home of brick?

If the beauty and charm - - the permanence and fire safety - - of the brick house appeal to you, do not dismiss brick as a possibility for your home on the mistaken idea that it is too expensive.

Once when frame construction was very cheap, the brick house was a luxury for the favored few. But the nearby forests are gone now, lumber must come long distances, paying high freight rates. The cost of frame construction has doubled and redoubled. At the same time quantity production with modern labor saving machinery has improved the quality and reduced the relative cost of brick.

Today you can build your home of brick for only seven per cent more than a frame house would cost. The many savings in a brick house after it is built -- slow depreciation, elimination of repairs, low heating and insurance costs, painting confined to the doors and window openings--in five years amount to more than twice the additional first cost of brick.

At Yankee Hill, a suburb of Lincoln, is located the great plant of the YANKEE HILL BRICK COMPANY. Here are made not only building brick, but also high quality face brick in a wide variety of colors and textures. Because of the saving in freight, the Nebraska Home-Builder enjoys a distinct price advantage in the purchase of YANKEE HILL BRICK.

Landscaping plans for the Manor site were drawn by Ernst Herminghause, and include the use of "the circle" as the distinctive feature The front door opens on this unusual garden, which is surrounded by a hedge, within which flowers are planted Tal ltrees are used around the parking at the house, and at the back, separating the site from other lots, is a hedge

The problem of development was an especially difficult one for the Manor with its irregularly-shaped site, and was made more difficult by the fact that the land is not level, with a rise of something like six feet in the twenty feet between the street and the house

Fireplace Still Holds Sway As Heart of Home, But Good Taste in Treatment Needed

Modernism in the home has crowded out many of the most charming and once cherished articles of furnishing, and schemes of decoration, but one feature holds its own down through the ages—the fireplace

In the earliest days, the fireplace was the means of using fire within the house, and the fireplace thus served for cooking and heating purposes alike The old colonial house of a century or so ago had fireplaces galore, a large one in the kitchen, where pots and pans might be used for cooking, where roasted fowls and meats were prepared, one in the living room around which the family gathered for hours in the evening, one in the dining room to add its cherry glow to the evening dinner hour, and one in each of the bedrooms if possible

The "gingerbread" molding of another day came to its popularity largely through its use in ornamentation for the fireplace, for this was one of the few places in the house which admitted of ornateness The tiled fronts of the period just past mark another epoch in the history of the enduring fireplace

While the fireplace continues to be a feature in the impression by the room, the mantel will hold its own True, its function is decorative rather than utiliatrian, yet the place it has made for itself is so definite and so large that any consideration of home decoration will sooner or later deal with the mantel It may stand over a fireplace whose use is imaginary rather than real; yet it is still a mantel, and its decorative possibilities demand attention

Overloaded Mantel Taboo.

The beauty of an otherwise attractive room may be seriously impaired by yielding to the temptation to overload the mantel. It should never fall into the category of the old-fashioned "whatnot," and become a place for brica-brac Gimcracks should be avoided, and the mantel should never become a resting-place for groups of family portraits The mantel is usually a dominating feature of the room, and its significance should not be belittled by the use of a miscellany of unimportant ornaments

A portrait, a mirrorr, or a really good picture may be used in the space above the mantel with good effect The use of inartistics accessories for the mantel is as heinous a crime as can be committed against the gods of good taste, and it is therefore necessary that the articles of ornament placed on the shelf when the space is filled, be shown for their character and arranged with good taste

Only a few things should be placed on the mantel shelf these few then should be worthy of attention Empty spaces serve to enhance the lines of the mantel, and to emphasize the graceful lines of the surrounding articles They are restful, and they lend character to articles near them

'The fitness of things" is as important a principle in interior decoration as elsewhere and is particularly applicable to the decoration of the mantel piece. To use small articles in profusion on a large mantelpiece with massive carving is to "clutter' the really good piece of furniture, to place one or two large pieces on a small mantel is to emphasize its narrowness

In every scheme of balance there is a central point, with reference to which one must consider the factors of size and distance. In the arrangement of the mantel the artistic quality of balance is to be carefully observed

Careful Arrangement Needed.

Like subjects should be paired at equal distances from the center; if they are not strictly alike, correspondence in general in size and in shape is permissible To give the effect of balance, the lack of size in an ornament may be offset by distance from the center If the larger objects are placed at the ends of the shelf and the smaller between, a bracefully descending curve will be described, the use of the larger articles in the center will give a tapering effect.

Pieces of pottery not too highly colored may be used to advantage on the ordinary mantelpiece one or two good photographs framed alike or similarly may be used to balance one another Dark wooden bowls are often used and the mantel clock has not lost its popularity Bronze jars balancing one another with a small statue as a centerpiece are also particularly effective and custom anctions the glass candy dish which rests on a pedestal or which rises in gentle curves from its base

The average housewife has at irregular intervals the urge to rearrange the furniture in her home The urge is often fatal to the carefully planned decorative scheme, often however, its result is extremely effective The fireplace and mantel constitute one place where such activity is usually not misspent, for variety in the use of mantel ornaments in a virtue greatly to be admired To substitute for the bronze statue and jars of one period the brass candlesticks and green pottery flower bowl of another time; to replace this latter scheme with a dark wooden nut bowl flanied with matching candlesticks holding colored tapers, to succeed these with two photographs placed one at either end with a fruit below as a center article—all are good combinations yet each serves to intensify the beauty of its setting by virtue of its novelty time for drying of plaster was considerably extended by the necessity of watching weather conditions

A furnace fire was kept burning in the Manor from the time of the completion of the first coat of plaster Thus the heat expedited the drying of the plaster and made it more even, so that no cracks would appear The windows were left a trifle ajar, to permit the moisture to escape instead of collecting upon the window panes and marring the plaster and the wood

The scaffolding was removed out at the Manor during the first week of the New Year, and the house, with the brick work of the exterior completed seemed to be a real home Shingling had been completed, with the slate shingles applied hit-or-miss to secure the weatherbeaten appearance consistent with the type of architecture The half-timber effect had been efficiently secured with the rough-hewn dark wood on the dormers and on the second story at the front These pieces of wood were stained dark to add to the appearance of great age which an integral part of the beauty of the house The brick work was another of the interesting details, especially the "herringbone" effect of the diagonally placed bricks, [illegible] the decorative feature over windows

Inside work is more detailed than the labor on the exterior of the house It is however, none the less interesting although progress seems less rapid The installation of weather stripping furnished by the Chamberlin company, was begun as soon as the plaster had completely dried, as a means of fuel saving, since it holds the heat in, and as a means of further insuring the housewife against temperature fluctuations within the house

Care in Finishing.

Planing and preparation of the narrow oak boards for the Manor was begun during the first part of February although modern building knowledge tells us that the finished floors should not be installed until almost the last of the building operations Painters had completed two-thirds of their work when the carpenters left the job the last of February The floors had to be sized before they were laid, then sanded, filled, and varnished Two coats were applied when the floors were finished, the last coat was not placed upon the floors until the electric fixtures were installed last week Thus the final finish was not endangered by water spots, or by hob-nailed shoes of workmen who had not yet completed their work

Placing of door hardware, hanging the doors themselves, placing of the two flights of stairs, and staining of the floors and woodwork were among the last jobs at the house, with papering and decorating immediately preceding the hanging of the lighting fixtures and the final coat of varnish for the floors

Thus, within the past week, the finishing touches were placed on the Manor The house, thrown open today after two weeks when work was progressing at such furious speed that the house had to be closed, is ready for occupancy, completely furnished and equipped for the use of the people who are to live in it During the last three days of the week the furniture, previously selected and set aside, was moved in The minor things which make the house a home instead of a mere shelter, had already been picked and were taken out to the Manor. Even to groceries and fuel, the house was prepared and finished, that Lincoln people who today inspect the house may find in Stratford Manor a true 'home beautiful"

STYLE IN PAPER

Choice of wall paper is largely a matter of personal taste, but there are styles even in dressing walls The restless birds never alighting which were formerly used on bedroom walls have given way to dainty flowers The large-patterned brocade papers of former years have given way to smaller conventional patterns or mixed effects in more subdued tones Wall paper must obviously 'follow styles in architecture and furnishing

Phelan's Duxpar

Phelan's Duxpar is as nearly weather-proof, scar-proof, ammonia-proof, alcohol-proof, acid-proof, oil-proof and wear-proof as it is possible to make a varnish. Boiling water won't hurt it. It won't turn white. You can't crack or scratch it and soaking in water will not change its color. It is a pale, heavy-bodied varnish, made to meet the most exacting requirements. Use it for floors, for all kinds of interior finishes, mouldings, wainscots, woodwork, doors, linoleums. For refinishing the finest furniture, for refrigerators, and for all outdoor work. It will stand wear and tear, exposure to heat, cold moisture, fumes and smoke.

Best for Floors and Linoleums

Floors that are much traveled are always a hard test of varnish. Constant walking, washing, waxing, polishing and cleaning won't mar the hard, brilliant surface of your floors if they are varnished with PHELAN'S DUXPAR Varnish. Hot water, steam from radiators, rain and sun won't hurt them They won't scratch white And they'll wear, and wear, and wear.

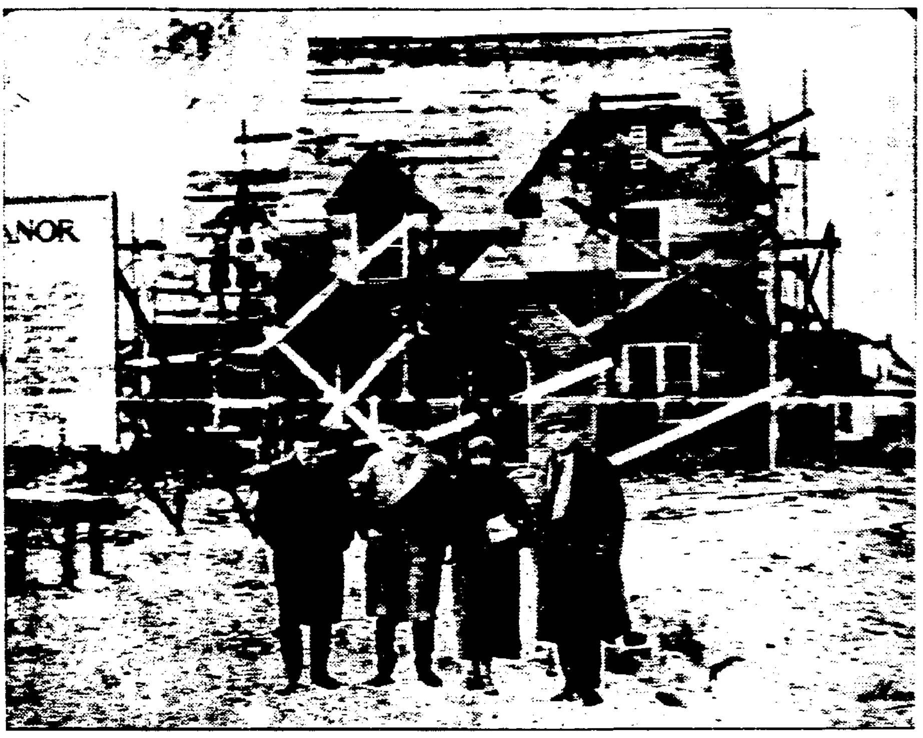
Distinguished Visitors At Manor



—MacDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Leibers visited Stratford Manor with Adrian M. Newens of the University School of Music, and Kirk Radmore of the Nash company. Mr. and Mrs. Leibers were here but two days, when Mr. Leibers appeared in Shakespearean plays and they visited the house when its construction was at the first stage.

Mrs. Leibers is particularly interested in the English type of architecture, and was especially interested in the fact that the type is so consistently observed in Stratford Manor.

NO GLOOM; NO GLARE IN NEW HOME SCHEMES

Lighting In Stratford Manor Chosen For Style and Utility.

Care Expended In Living Room, Vestibule and Master's Room.

In interior decoration, the choice of lighting fixtures is an all-important detail. The elimination of the gloom and glare of former days is essential to comfort and convenience for the people who will later use the light shed by the fixtures installed. The long winter evening spent with a book becomes, in fact, a nightmare, rather than a pleasure to the person who must necessarily read under improperly constructed or improperly chosen lights.

Stratford Manor is especially fortunately fitted with fixtures for lighting. The choice of styles which fit into the type of the house was a difficult one, but one which has added immeasurably to the charm of the house.

The oxidized copper lantern which will be used at the front door of the manor, according to C. D. Bryson of the Korsmeyer company, is an especially interesting piece, because of its suitability. The contrast of the shining copper with the darker portions makes a pleasing complement for the dark brick of the house; and the lantern style is especially adaptable to the English style of the house.

The small vestibule will be lighted by a small ceiling fixture, which sheds a diffused glow. This entry has three doors, with a radiator on the fourth side, and a ceiling fixture is the only possibility. Globes of orange will be used, to spread the glimmer of the light, and to soften its rays.

Living Room Bright.

Two ceiling fixtures have been specified for the living room, with five side lights in the room. Each of the overhead units will use three globes, frosted, and will suspend them by means of narrow bronze bands from a central fixture. The unit is simplicity itself, and combines admirably with the almost medieval style of the house.

Brackets on the walls have the same bronze finish as the central fixtures and are made in the candle style. Five of these brackets will be used in the living room: One on either side of the fireplace; one on either side of the furniture arrangement against the stairs; and one at the back of the room, next to the French doors which give on the terrace from the garage.

The dining room has one ceiling fixture in the bronze style, similar to the one employed in the living room. Four wall brackets are used, flanking the French doors from the living room, and one on either side of the room.

A white overhead lamp, with frosted globe, is the kitchen fixture, similar to the one used in the modern sanitary kitchen everywhere. The light is diffused, but there is no danger of harming the ceiling lamp. Wall sockets have been placed in sufficient numbers so that a ceiling fixture presents no practical difficulty.

The second story fixtures are as appearing as those on the first [illegible]

Unique Fixture in Bedroom.

The large bedroom, which has raised so much favorable comment from those who have visited the Manor, will be supplied with an especially interesting fixture. Suspended from a bronze [illegible] is a bowl of copper that is the globe, studded from below with a small bell-shaped glass. The coloring of the glass and of the [illegible] plate [illegible] shades of tan and [illegible] and harmonizes especially well with the furniture already chosen for the room. Wall brackets specified for this room are of the same design as the ceiling fixture [illegible] and are used with shades of the same pattern.

The sleeping porch will be lighted [illegible] gives sufficient glow for light. Reading lamps have been provided for as well and will be used as auxiliaries for the one central light.

Ceiling fixtures in the two bedrooms on the second floor beside the owner's room will set the color scheme for the other bracket fixtures. Colored glass shades in the mushroom shape are to be used as a central fixture.

In the upstairs hall a glass globe is used with a ceiling fixture in the more oval shape which takes less space and is more adapted to use with the close walls of the vestibule or runway.

Thus are the details of lighting fixtures adapted to the needs of the individual house, with the use of those particular features which most nearly reflect the type of architecture, and to the special purpose, fitting admirably with color schemes of the various rooms, and with the various uses of the rooms and of the lighting fixtures which are to be included.

FINISH FLOORS IN MANOR HOUSE

Sanding and Filling Is Important Part Of Interior Work.

Proper sanding of floors is extremely important in the finishing of the woodwork at the house. Edges are scraped by hand in the proper completion of the work in finishing floors, and the sanding follows this hand work. This is [illegible] with [illegible] paramount importance, since imperfections left after the scraping will always show as scars on the finished floors.

[illegible] is [illegible] applied to the floors after the scraping will have been completed, with the object of filling the pores and cracks in the floors. Thus there can be no possibility of moisture absorption, and the danger of squeaking floors is brought to the minimum.

Two coats of varnish are used after the "filler" coat has completely dried. Each coat must be hand sanded after it has been completely dried, so that a smooth finish may be secured without lumps or small indentations in the floor.

Care of the floor is another of the details argued by the floor-sanding company owners, W. H. Jensen and R. C. Stokke. With constant tests of the effects of boiling water and of extreme pressure, new discoveries are constantly being added to the field of floor finishing, but with all the newest improvements in the original operations, it is necessary that the home-owner watch his treatment of the floors, to prevent marring and scratching, difficult at best to remove.

LEST WE FORGET

As you go through STRATFORD MANOR you will notice beautiful lighting fixtures, so placed as to change night into day without the glare that usually accompanies artificial light. In other places you will find many electrical servants that enable Milady to dispose of her housework with the least amount of fatigue. But don't forget behind each of these conveniences is the power plant where men are at work twenty-four hours a day firing boilers that operate dynamos that never stop. A holiday at the power plant would leave thousands of homes in darkness and make the electrical servants as useless as fifth wheels. Distinguished Visitors At Manor

—MacDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Leibers visited Stratford Manor with Adrian M. Newens of the University School of Music, and Kirk Radmore of the Nash company. Mr. and Mrs. Leibers were here but two days, when Mr. Leibers appeared in Shakespearean plays, and they visited the house when its construction was at the first stage.

Mrs. Leibers is particularly interested in the English type of architecture, and was especially interested in the fact that the type is so consistently observed in Stratford Manor.

NO GLOOM; NO GLARE IN NEW HOME SCHEMES

Care Expended In Living Room, Vestibule and Master's Room.

In interior decoration, the choice of lighting fixtures is an all-important detail. The elimination of the gloom and glare of former days is essential to comfort and convenience for the people who will later use the light shed by the fixtures installed. The long winter evening spent with a book becomes, in fact, a nightmare, rather than a pleasure to the person who must necessarily read under improperly constructed or improperly chosen lights.

Stratford Manor is especially fortunately fitted with fixtures for lighting. The choice of styles which fit into the type of the house was a difficult one, but one which has added immeasurably to the charm of the house.

The oxidized copper lantern which will be used at the front door of the manor, according to C. D. Bryson of the Korsmeyer company, is an especially interesting piece, because of its suitability. The contrast of the shining copper with the darker portions makes a pleasing complement for the dark brick of the house; and the lantern style is especially adaptable to the English style of the house.

The small vestibule will be lighted by a small ceiling fixture, which sheds a diffused glow. This entry has three doors, with a radiator on the fourth side, and a ceiling fixture is the only possibility. Globes of orange will be used, to spread the glimmer of the light, and to soften its rays.

Living Room Bright.

Two ceiling fixtures have been specified for the living room, with five side lights in the room. Each of the overhead units will use three globes, frosted, and will suspend them by means of narrow bronze bands from a central fixture. The unit is simplicity itself, and combines admirably with the almost medieval style of the house.

Brackets on the walls have the same bronze finish as the central fixtures and are made in the candle style. Five of these brackets will be used in the living room: One on either side of the fireplace; one on either side of the furniture arrangement against the stairs; and one at the back of the room, next to the French doors which give on the terrace from the garage.

The dining room has one ceiling fixture in the bronze style, similar to the one employed in the living room. Four wall brackets are used, flanking the French doors from the living room, and one on either side of the room.

A white overhead lamp, with frosted globe, is the kitchen fixture, similar to the one used in the modern sanitary kitchen everywhere. The light is diffused, but there is no danger of harming the ceiling lamp. Wall sockets have been placed in sufficient numbers so that a ceiling fixture presents no practical difficulty.

The second story fixtures are as interesting as those on the first floor. Shades to harmonize with the color schemes of the different rooms will be obtained, used with ceiling fixtures, and adapted for use with the wall brackets which are included in plans for the rooms, according to later tendencies.

Unique Fixture in Bedroom.

The large bedroom, which has caused so much favorable comment from those who have visited the Manor, will be supplied with an especially interesting fixture. Suspended from a bronze holder by a chain of copper links is the globe, shaded from below with a small bell-shaped glass. The coloring of the glass and of the circular plate against the ceiling is in shades of tan and gold, and harmonizes especially well with the furniture already chosen for the room. Wall brackets specified for the room are in the same design as the ceiling fixture, in the candle style, and are used with shades of the same scheme.

The sleeping porch will be lighted with a ceiling fixture which furnishes sufficient glow for light. Reading lamps have been provided for as well, and will be used as auxiliaries for the one central light.

Ceiling fixtures in the two bedrooms on the second floor beside the "owner's room" will set the color scheme for the other bracket fixtures. Colored glass shades in the mushroom shape are to be used as a central fixtures.

In the upstairs hall, a glass globe is used with a ceiling fixture, in the more oval shape which takes less space and is more adapted to use with the close walls of the vestibule or runway.

Thus are the details of lighting fixtures adapted to the needs of the individual house, with the use of those particular features which most nearly reflect the type of architecture; and to the special purpose, fitting admirably with color schemes of the various rooms, and with the various uses of the rooms and of the lighting fixtures which are to be included.

GOOD IMPRESSION OF MANOR HOUSE GIVEN BY DOORS

Heavy, Oaken Slab Forms Permanent Entrance, In Keeping With Style.

Large Strap Hinges and Eight Inch Boards Heighten Medievael Effect

"First impressions are lasting," the old saying reads, and we realize on every hand the truth of the statement. But the first impression of Stratford Manor will be pleasing as well, and the psychology of the first view is thus utilized.

Typifying the style of the house, the entrance to the Manor borrows some of its attractiveness from the extreme simplicity and the ruggedness of the old English home. The entrance receives the maximum of attention, as it is responsible for the visitors' first impression.

A heavy oaken slab forms the door for the Manor, and is finished on the outer side as if several wide boards had been nailed together shutter fashion. For the interior side, however, the door is paneled, with one of the smaller squares replaced by a "peek-hole" of glass. The exterior is finished in dark color, to further enhance the idea of great weight; the interior matches perfectly the paneling of the woodwork within the house.

The door, shaped to fit the arched opening of the vestibule "lean-to." is made up of fifteen smaller squares, with three others not yet complete. The circular parts of this door are sawed as circular pieces tongued and grooved to dovetail into the other pieces of the door.

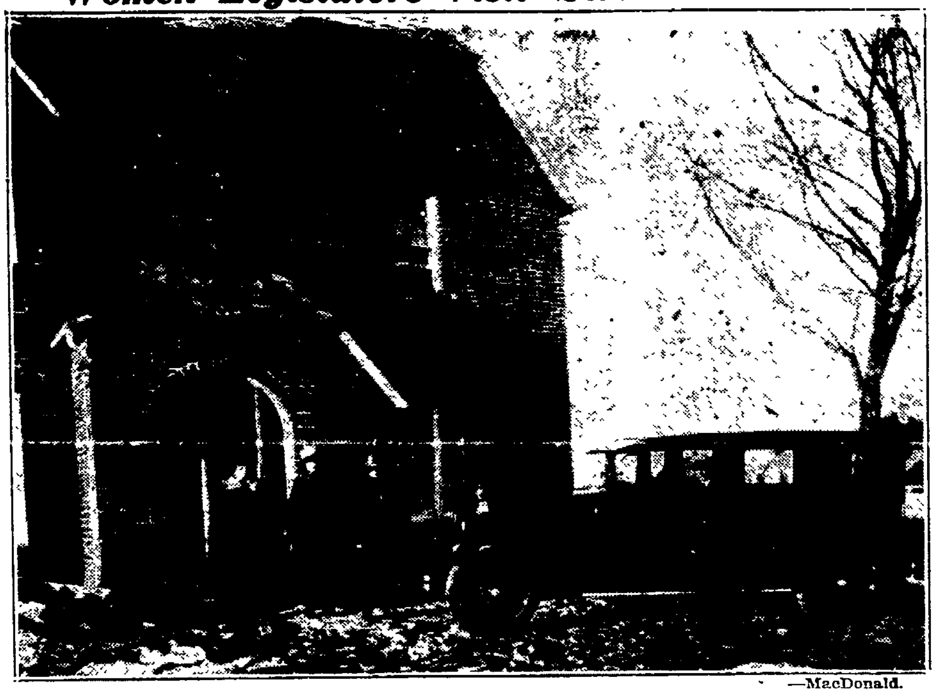
Slabs which compose the door on its outer surface are eight inches wide, and they too, are tongued and grooved to provide for the fitting into one another. This method guards against possible warping of the wood with use and exposure.

Large "strap" hinges, made of metal, and fastened three-fourths of the way across the door, add to the English effect of the door and to its consistence with the type of architecture for the house.

Four by seven and a half feet are the dimensions of the door as it stands. Ideal proportions provide that the door should be twice as high as it is wide; for Stratford Manor the deviation is slight, and is counterbalanced by the effect of the entrance addition.

"Postern gates" are the favorite entrances in England, the country from which the architectural style for the house was borrowed. One enters the grounds through a lower door, flanked by a lodge where the caretaker of the estate makes his home. In this fashion may the tiled entrance hall serve as introduction to the living room, called "the heart of the home."

Women Legislators Visit Stratford Manor



—MacDonald.

Nebraska's three women legislators left the House of Representatives one afternoon to visit another more common but scarcely less interesting house: Stratford Manor. They are shown in the photograph as they stood at the door after their tour of the Manor. Mrs. Clara Humphreys of Mullen, Miss Sarah T. Muir of Lincoln, and Mrs. Mabel Gillespie of Gretna are the three women shown above, with Perry C. Tudor of the Nash company.

The very ruggedness of the type, particularly as it is exemplified in this specific house, precludes outside ornamentation. The weather-beaten shingled effect, the dark brick of the walls, the half-timber of the upper story and of the front gable—all these lend themselves to solidity in the doorway, expressing the individuality of the house. Its architectural pattern sprang into being as a result of the need for buildings which could withstand the severity of the English winters: the need for staunch walls, not affected by wintry winds.

Heavy doors, not easily moved by whistling gales, and strong enough to weather snows and rains, were scarcely less necessary.

In consistence with the style from which the house has come, the door and architectural accessories have been planned. For Stratford Manor, the English type was the obvious one: for another house this particular door might be unsuitable.

The classic type of entrance, called the most formal of all, is wide. For the modern house, this proportion is changed slightly, so that the present ratio is something like three to seven. For the Colonial house, the triple motif or doorway and sidelights is especially pleasing, if the entrance leads to an interior hall instead of a vestibule built separately from the house. To attain correct proportions, sidelights are made about one-third the width of the door. The transom used in the house which admits of any ornamentation whatever in the entrance, may be rectangular, extending across door and sidelights; semi-circular, topping the door only and using the top of the door as the diameter of the incomplete circle; or semi-elliptical. The difficulty with the third plan, most effective when properly executed, is that the figure must be the half of a geometrical ellipse, rather inconvenient of attainment especially if the builder be inexperienced or incompletely informed.

Since proportion is so important a factor in the building of the house and the planning of the doorway, it must also enter into the calculations in connection with the vestibule, if one is provided, and in relation to comparative sizes of rooms of the house.

Startford Manor, with its carefully drawn preliminary plans, suffered but one change in proportion. To give greater width to the door, it was decided to widen the gable built for the vestibule. But this small hall had also to be lengthened, for the wider door could not open into the house in the space originally allowed. In another room, the use of the wider door might have caused untold difficulty, for the Manor vestibule it meant simply the enlarging of the built-on vestibule.

MUSIC LENDS ITS MELODY TO HOME

Console Model, Phonograph Will Supply Best Of Selections.

Baby Grand Piano Is So Placed as to Create a Music Room.

Music is an essential part of the home, for around the living room are spent many of the happiest hours of life. Soft music, played by a member of the family or by some talented guest is always a concomitant of shaded lights and congenial company; yet what possibility could there be for the realization of even so universal a desire as this without the presence of a instrument?

A console model phonograph, furnished by the Crancer company, is one of the musical instruments which can be operated by any one, and through the use of this Brunswick it will be possible for the people of the Manor to hear the very best of any particular type of music which may appeal to their tastes or desires.

Great artists of the ages sing for the recording companies; Virtuosi play their instruments for the edification and pleasure of those who "listen in" through the use of the phonograph. If young Jane and John want to invite their friends in for the evening, the Brunswick is always ready, if one puts on the right record and turns the crank vigorously enough, to furnish jazz in the desired tempo and with the required verve, so that rugs are instantly rolled up and the most potent of jazz is instantly calling forth the dancers.

The occasional musician, however, who enters the house at times, or the member of the family who has talent and training to play any instrument, finds the piano in the home almost a necessity. For voice or violin, 'cello or harp, lose much of their charm when head unaccompained, and the member of the family, who is training musically will need the services of the piano for pitch as well as time.

Thus the piano, a Knabe Ampico baby grand, has been installed at the house by the Crancer company, which has been furnishing the music for the house. The grand piano is a real addition to the beauty of the furnishings of any house, and in Stratford Manor with its long living room, it helps to form an auxiliary group of furniture, which materially aids in the furnishing problem. The use of the piano with its floor lamp divides the one large room into two divisions, making a music room and living room of the one division.

Through the use of this particular instrument, it is possible to have artists' reproductions of piano selections as well as vocalists, violinists, and other instrumentalists. For with this piano, one can have at any time the very greatest works of the men and women who have attained greatest skill and greatest fame in the art of piano-playing. Of unusual merit is this feature of the piano's possibilities in its use in a home for a family, such as will reside in Stratford Manor.

windows at either side of the fireplace chimney, and a charming room as the house now stands, furnished ready for use.

Seven Rooms In Plan.

Seven rooms are thus included in the house plan: a living room, dining room and kitchen on the first floor, with the garage built in as an integral part of the house; three chambers and a sleeping porch on the second floor; and an additional room and bath, beside the storage space, on the third story.

Modern comfort is not sacrificed to the antique beauty of the design, but attractiveness is combined with convenience in a way which will doubtless excite wonder to those who examine the house. The very antiquity of the exterior has in fact the effect of enhancing the delight of the visitor in the convenience and modrn style of the interior.

Wall Brackets Are Newest Departure

The use of wall brackets is one of the newer departures in lighting. With this convenience it is possible to use the light of but one globe concentratedly, without turning on overhead lights which flood the room without giving sufficient light at any one point. More individual fixtures is the present cry—a useful tendency in the crusade for beauty in the home.

RUGS IMPORTANT

Oriental rugs are very well in themselves, but their eccentric coloring makes choice of draperies and complementing furniture extremely dificult. The beauty of the rug often serves to belittle the furnishings of the house, and the dark colors of the rugs often become too sombre.

RUGS IN MANOR HOUSE 'LIVABLE'

Fashion Now Is to Have Small Rugs With Polished Floor Showing.

From the olden days when furs were used as floor coverings to the modern day of Oriental and Persian [illegible] from this expensive sort of floor covering to the sort which costing much less will withstand an infinitely greater amount of wear is an equally important transition

The home to be really livable must be so furnished that the mere using of its equipment will not in any way detract from its value or usefulness The show place is all very well for somebody else but when it comes to living as Van Dyke's song puts it there is no place like home

Stratford Manor furnished with the prime objective of livability is equipped with furniture solidly manufactured of heavy wood Its draperies are selected for service and for continued attractiveness Its floor coverings then must as well be practical

Rugs from the Bigelow-Hartford Mills were selected for the first floor in solid colors with darker borders These are an especially heavy weave and an especially close nap so that the tramp of the thousands of feet which will walk over them during the time that Stratford Manor is open for inspection will not leave the floor coverings threadbare

Carpets Not in Style

Wiltons and Axminsters are durable rugs of slightly less formal design, and are used on the upper floors These carpets were secured from the Marshall Field company and are very much used especially in this section of the country where they can be secured with but slight difficulty for shipping and selection That they harmonize with the color schemes previously accepted for the rooms in which they are to be used is an important detail in their acceptability and one which determines to a large degree the satisfaction they can give to the housewife

The present tendency in the use of rugs is away from the carpeting of former days and toward the use of smaller rugs which permit borders of well finished wood to show around the edges Especially is this found in the newer houses built since the era when good floors were considered excess baggage and unnecessary expenditure in home-building

Bedrooms are more subject to the tendency toward smaller rugs than are the downstairs divisions of the house for there is not so much walking around Cleaning problems greatly influence this tendency as well and the use of the vacuum cleaner for the larger rooms with the possibility of removing floor coverings when cleaning in the bed rooms have largely affected the matter In Stratford Manor as in many other newly-furnished houses the bedroom rugs are oval rather than oblong, while downstairs rugs keep to the accepted oblong shape conforming to the rooms in which they are placed

Inspected the Manor

—MacDonald.

Miss Alice Loomis and Mrs Samuel R McKelvie were photographed when they visited together Stratford Manor, the home beautiful during its construction The house was in an advanced stage with brick work practically completed and interior finishing progressing rapidly Mrs McKelvie as a housekeeper and Miss Loomis whose work with the vocational education department of the state leads her into the theoretical and psychological field in housekeeping were particularly interested in decorative possibilities for the house

CHOOSE ELECTRIC SEWING MACHINE

Manor House to Be Equipped With Most Modern Convenience.

For speed and convenience, the modern electric sewing machine has its recommendations Household sewing and the plain work which any housewife does for herself even in these days of ready-to-wear clothes may be quickly dispatched with the use of the electric machine Hand work has seen its day, and survives only in those finer bits of fancy work which are used as ornamental pieces in the home of today The quicker and more efficient method of machine sewing has almost completely supplanted the former system

An Eldrege Two-Spool sewing machine is one of the fixtures of the house and is placed in the third floor room where its hum will not be an inconvenience to the other people in the house and where it may be used by the maid without any inconvenience to the members of the family The cabinet in the console type is of walnut, and the machine is a handsome piece of furniture so that it can be moved to the downstairs rooms during days or weeks of greater activity or so that its dark wood will harmonize attractively with the woodwork finish in any of the second-floor rooms which may be used for sewing

Telephone Upstairs Huge Aid In Saving Steps For Workers

A telephone on the stair landing is an incredible aid in step-saving as the housewife who has run downstairs several times in the course of completing her morning's work upstairs can testify To compromise the distance, so that two or three steps upward or a few downward makes the telephone accessible is perhaps the best plan

Electricity Means Real Home Comfort

Convenience is the modern cry in house planning and furnishing Electrical contrivances are a real addition to the home only when wall sockets are installed in sufficient number to make their use easy and to eliminate reaching to screw plugs into overhead fixtures

Did you ever paint a picture of your future home?

Perhaps not literally but haven't you planned the details of a prospective home to be built some time in the future? If so there is just one thought we want to leave with you.

BETTER LUMBER

is the most important item that will go into that home. The average family builds a house just once in a lifetime. It would be "penny wise and pound foolish" to use anything but first grade, correctly seasoned lumber. Most home builders follow the example of the builder of Stratford Manor and buy their lumber from the

RUGS IN MANOR HOUSE 'LIVABLE'

Fashion Now Is to Have Small Rugs With Polished Floor Showing.

From the olden days when furs were used as floor coverings to the modern day of Oriental and Persian and imported rugs is a far cry. Yet from this expensive sort of floor covering to the sort which, costing much less, will withstand an infinitely greater amount of wear, is an equally important transition.

The home, to be really livable, must be so furnished that the mere using of its equipment will not in any way detract from its value or usefulness. The show place is all very well for somebody else, "but when it comes to living," as Van Dyke's song puts it, "there is no place like home."

Stratford Manor, furnished with the prime objective of livability, is equipped with furniture solidly manufactured of heavy wood. Its draperies are selected for service and for continued attractiveness. Its floor coverings then must as well be practical.

Rugs from the Bigelow-Hartford Mills were selected for the first floor, in solid colors, with darker borders. These are an especially heavy weave, and an especially close nap, so that the tramp of the thousands of feet which will walk over them during the time that Stratford Manor is open for inspection, will not leave the floor coverings threadbare.

Carpets Not in Style.

Wiltons and Axminsters are durable rugs of slightly less formal design, and are used on the upper floors. These carpets were secured from the Marshall Field company, and are very much used especially in this section of the country, where they can be secured with but slight difficulty for shipping and selection. That they harmonize with the color schemes previously accepted for the rooms in which they are to be used is an important detail in their acceptability and one which determines to a large degree the satisfaction they can give to the housewife.

The present tendency in the use of rugs is away from the carpeting of former days, and toward the use of smaller rugs, which permit borders of well finished wood to show around the edges. Especially is this found in the newer houses, built since the era when good floors were considered excess baggage, and unnecessary expenditure in home-building.

Bedrooms are more subject to the tendency toward smaller rugs than are the downstairs divisions of the house, for there is not so much walking around. Cleaning problems greatly influence this tendency as well, and the use of the vacuum cleaner for the larger rooms, with the possibility of removing floor coverings when cleaning in the bed rooms have largely affected the matter. In Stratford Manor, as in many other newly-furnished houses, the bedroom rugs are oval rather than oblong; while downstairs rugs keep to the accepted oblong shape, conforming to the rooms in which they are placed.

Inspected the Manor

—MacDonald.

Miss Alice Loomis and Mrs. Samuel R. McKelvie were photographed when they visited together Stratford Manor, the home beautiful, during its construction. The house was in an advanced stage, with brick work practically completed, and interior finishing progressing rapidly. Mrs. McKelvie as a housekeeper, and Miss Loomis whose work with the vocational education department of the state leads her into the theoretical and psychological field in housekeeping, were particularly interested in decorative possibilities for the house.

CHOOSE ELECTRIC SEWING MACHINE

Manor House to Be Equipped With Most Modern Convenience.

An electric sewing machine is one of the conveniences which, installed at the Manor house in the Sheridan district, will add immeasurably to the convenience of the housewife who will eventually inhabit the residence.

For speed and convenience, the modern electric sewing machine has its recommendations. Household sewing, and the plain work which any housewife does for herself even in these days of ready-to-wear clothes, may be quickly dispatched with the use of the electric machine. Hand work has seen its day, and survives only in those finer bits of fancy work which are used as ornamental pieces in the home of today. The quicker and more efficient method of machine sewing has almost completely supplanted the former system.

An Eldrege Two-Spool sewing machine is one of the fixtures of the house, and is placed in the third-floor room, where its hum will not be an inconvenience to the other people in the house, and where it may be used by the maid without any inconvenience to the members of the family. The cabinet, in the console type is of walnut, and the machine is a handsome piece of furniture, so that it can be moved to the downstairs rooms during days or weeks of greater activity, or so that its dark wood will harmonize attractively with the woodwork finish in any of the second-floor rooms which may be used for sewing.

Telephone Upstairs Huge Aid In Saving Steps For Workers

A telephone on the stair landing is an incredible aid in step-saving, as the housewife who has run downstairs several times in the course of completing her morning's work upstairs can testify. To compromise the distance, so that two or three steps upward or a few downward makes the telephone accessible, is perhaps the best plan.

Electricity Means Real Home Comfort

Convenience is the modern cry in house planning and furnishing. Electrical contrivances are a real addition to the home only when wall sockets are installed in sufficient number to make their use easy, and to eliminate reaching to screw plugs into overhead fixtures.

Light, Airy Underground Room Makes Cellar Work a Pleasure.

Newest Devices Installed to Remove Drudgery From Laundry.

Since one-fourth of the available space of the house is basement room, with the proportion extending to one half in certain cases, the treatment of this underground part of the house is of unrealized importance At Stratford Manor, the basement is especially interesting, for here the idea of convenience through the use of most modern improvements is most consistently carried to completion

The basement dug 8 feet deep is extremely light and airy an important feature in the use of this room for laundry and ironing purposes Steel sashes are used on the windows, that the space may be as much glass as possible Deep area-ways are used for the windows to give greater space through which angled rays of the sun may fall

In such an environment the work of the basement is not so unpleasant as it might otherwise become for the housewife who does her own work

With the use of the newer improvements in housework the labor of laundering is further lightened The washing machine to be used is a Voss obtained from the Lincoln Gas and Electric Light company and its utilization of electric power makes the wash day labor largely a matter of handling clothes

Laundry Work Made Easy

The Thor ironer or mangle is one of the less common basement improvements but is none the less interesting Its adaptability to the small laundry of the ordinary or average house is one of its special features and it is so adjusted that it is possible to iron with it not only the flat pieces taken by the old style mangle but also the dresses and finer pieces which are really the hardest part of the weekly ironing The body of the machine folds over and locks in a vertical position when not in use, so that it is much easier and less unwieldy to handle than was the former machine—forerunner of the present type

Almost human is the characterization given to this mangle which may be operated by a worker either standing or sitting It operates from any convenience outlet supplying the regular household current, and no special wiring is necessary The speed of the roll over which the clothes pass automatically varies in proportion to the texture and to the amount of moisture of the piece being ironed Thick or very damp pieces pass through the machine at a lower rate of speed than lighter or drier ones. This is also automatic

A special switch prevents the motor being shut off when the two pieces are locked together A situation which would injure or perhaps ruin the piece of clothing or material in the ironer at the time

Roses and violets and sweet peas! Tulips, crocuses, hyacinths, and daffodils! Spring!

Who can pass a florist's window without coveting the dainty blossoms behind the glass? Who does not feel more kindly disposed toward the world at large when he sits down at a table and looks across it, over a low bowl of fresh flowers? Thus do the little things influence us Thus do the smaller details make their mark on our very dispositions

In the furnishing and the addition of the finishing touches to the house, flowers pay an extremely important part. For over a bowl of flowers the hostess looks more charming, the host more genial, and the guest more interesting The bouquet of fresh flowers in the living room is a trivial thing perhaps, but its bright colors liven the dark finish of the wood enhance the lustre and richness of the dull harmonies in tapestries, rugs and upholstery

The family garden plot no matter how small, will furnish flowers for the house throughout the summer, but when winter comes it is necessary to secure the blossoms from the professional florist who is able through the use of greenhouses glass roofed, and artificial heat, to force plants that they may bloom in any season

With the coming of spring different flowers come into their own seasons and the lady of the house has an even greater desire to see upon her dining room table some of the bright blooms These too, may be secured long before their season in the Nebraska climate of extremes, by calling on the florist

Bruce's, one of the newer shops in Lincoln, has established in connection with its confectionery and luncheon facilities, the flower shop Candy and flowers belong in the same category, admittedly, why not put them under the same roof? And now Bruce's realizing the importance of flowers in the home, is furnishing the bouquets for the house at Stratford avenue and Rathbone road, through the days when the Manor will be open for inspection

With the addition of flowers the house is truly furnished, and shows just as the fastidious hostess would wish her home to appear when she entertains interested and critical guests

A set of lady's personal brushes is to be included in the large bedroom of the house where dressing table conveniences are extremely important. The Fuller brush is specially constructed, and is unusual in that its curved brush basis is supposed to better handle the problem of cleaning than that usually adopted The clothes brush with its stiff bristles, the hat brush which is softer, the hair brush with its dainty handle, and the small comb which matches it these are the pieces which are included in the home beautiful

Furnishing a house is no small matter for not only must the chairs and tables be chosen with care and consideration as to their harmonization with one another and with the style of the house in which they are to be placed, not only must the draperies and curtains be especially selected for the positions they are to occupy, but much careful consideration must be given to the nominally smaller things, such as the silverware

The Century pattern in Holmes and Edwards silverware is to be used for the flat silver at the Manor house Fitting admirably into the scheme of decoration, which follows almost literally the architecture of the house, it has the simplicity of design, coupled with solidity, which characterizes the Manor's type

Elongated handles with square corners are the distinctive feature of this particular style and the dainty figure of the top square finishing off the handle to perfection adds appreciably to the effectiveness of the silverware

The heavy long buffet which is a part of the dining room furniture suite is graced by a set of silverware in the Dutch reproduction style. BUDGETING FOR A HOME NOT HARD

Owning a home is all very well, the cynic says, but how do you pay the upkeep after you have the house?

To the average person, admittedly, the budget presents difficulties It is hard to imagine at the beginning of each month just what expenditures will be necessary under each of the headings It is harder, indeed, to stay within a predetermined limit. A bargain sale will tempt the lady of the house, the right rear tire will suddenly blow out, the baby's shoes will need replacing But these inconveniences are at length adjusted, if one is patient and long-suffering in his attempts to observe his own prepared expenditure list.

Visitors at the Manor will be asked to sign a register, and to the people whose names appear here, the First National bank has agreed to send bulletins outlining the possible budget and explaining the tendencies in this line of thought

To keep a budget, or systematized record of income and expenses, estimate the money you will spend during the month for the items listed under the various headings shown on the form for record of expenditures Capital, household, food, clothing, recreation, health, advancement, and miscellaneous, each divided into various subdivisions Then show these amounts in spaces opposite "estimate for the month" When you spend any money, enter the same amount in the proper column on the date

"Capital," the first division under expenditures, includes savings, investments property, furniture, and life insurance Under the household list come rent mortgage interest, taxes fire insurance light, fuel, water laundry cleaning carfare telephone servants, repairs, and a special subdivision for miscellaneous expenditures Groceries meat, vegetables, fruit, and meals eaten in restaurants and cafes are included under the general heading, 'Food"

Sports, theaters vacations, tobacco, candy and club expenses are all included under the recreation headings, and under health we find money paid to doctors, dentists, and nurses, with medicine and expenses at the gymnasium in preventative health training Education, books, periodicals, and travel are all forms of advancement, and are included in one general heading Unclassified expenditures are those for church charities and the ever-present but increasingly expensive automobile

SELECTS FURNITURE

A. L. Guile has had a large part in selecting furnishings and draperies for Stratford Manor, and through the Perkins-Huffman company has obtained for the house the most suitable furniture Quality consistent with price has been the important factor in choice of furnishings for the Manor, and in order that the most suitable pieces may be installed there will probably be changes in furniture within the time that the house is opened for inspection

CLEANLINESS IN MANOR ASSURED

Professional Window Washers Have Cleaned the 484 Panes.

Finishing of Sashes Has Been a Matter of Greatest Care.

Cleanliness is next to godliness obviously enough And to the mind of the practical housewife, this statement has more than usual force when it comes to moving into a different house

A new house is especially hard to clean, for there are paint marks, and scars of moving furniture, and all the thousand and-one annoyances which can make the first few days of moving in and settling arduous ones indeed

The mistress of Stratford Manor stands practically alone in her good fortune, for there will be no necessity for her to spend hours in cleaning her house The residence which opens for inspection this afternoon is ready for occupancy, and none of the debris of building or painting is in evidence

Four hundred and eighty-four window panes are included in the house with its casement windows, its French doors and its divided sashes Endless task to wash them all, inside and out! Yet the housewife who could move in today at the Manor would not find this annoyance Thursday and Friday professional window-washers were on duty at the house, washing windows, using sharp razor blades to scrape off the putty and the drops of paint inadvertently spilled during the process of construction

Five Coats of Paint.

The windows are indeed important details especially when at the time the house is almost completed their finishing must be completed Paint, in coats to the number of five, must be applied around the edges to make smooth the woodwork. Sandpapering follows each of these coats as it is dried Then putty is applied just before the papering is completed, to fill in the little corners around the sash and eliminate danger of cracks through wind and rain, or melting snow, may be admitted to the rooms

At the Manor, the debris of building and painting has also been cleared away as it must be at any newly-constructed house Paint cans and finish containers, shavings of wood, broken brushes paint-hardened bristles, short lengths of flooring or of building lumber all these must be cleared out of the way before the furniture already chosen, can be moved into the house

The cement drives at the house, leading from the street to the garage and past the French doors which enter the end of the long living room have been scrubbed to cleanliness, the garage will be different from the ordinary car-storage place in that not a speck of dust or of spilled paint, will be left

So is Stratford Manor prepared for occupancy With the care of the housewife yet with the speed of the professional working under pressure, it has been put into final condition and the sparkling glass and the clean floors make an unbelievable amount of difference in the attractiveness of the house over which hundreds will exclaim today in admiration

BRONZE WORK IS IN ACCORD WITH STYLE OF HOUSE

Hardware For Stratford Manor Selected With Utmost Care.

Every Detail Harmonizes With English Type of Achitecture.

Bronze hardware, harmonizing with the English style of architecture, is used at Stratford Manor In keeping with the heavy entrance door, the permanent-looking interior doors, and the dark finish of the woodwork throughout the first floor, especially heavy knobs and hinges are used.

The entrance door, opening on the circular garden at the front of the house, is fitted with a sectional handle latch, made of white metal, with the black hammered in so that it too is a part of the finished product. This gives the hand-hammered effect, and adds immeasurably to the appearance of weight for the latch and lock Made with a rough hewn square escutcheon or back ground to the latch, this sitting is a definite improvement in carrying out the style of the house

These lever handles on the French doors are also of white metal, to prevent rust, and are enhanced in attractiveness by the use of black hammered into the metal in the mediaeval style 'Rosettes," or minature circular plates fastened to the door as background for the knobs or lever are made of the same material, to add uniformity and to conform definitely with the style of the house

Similar rosettes and fixtures are used on the second and third floors, where glass knobs are substituted for the heavier ones of the principal rooms Easy-spring locks are used throughout the house, fitted with coil springs rather than the flat ones usually found Screwless spindles are used in fastening on the knobs, and the hardware man can show you the knob-holders, graduated within a quarter of inch for closer adjustment than was possible to secure with the old-style type which had but two holes, some three-quarters of an inch apart. The elimination of door-knob rattling is the advantage claimed for the newer style of installation

Ball-bearing self-retainers are used in the hinges on the doors, with non-rising pins, so that when the knob above the hinge rises, the mechanism is stopped Thus the spring is kept in good condition, and the doors are never permitted to sag

How many times have you heard some busy housewife, in that unavoidable last minute rush just before the dinner is served, call to the small boy or the young girl who has tried to help her, "Shut that ice-box door!'

In the attempt to save the ice, more inconveniences than mere carefulness in closing the door to the refrigerator have been suffered Wrapping of heavy chunks of ice in newspapers, care in placing materials within the storage space, and the nuisance of emptying heavy pans of ice-water have been only a few of the nuisances in connection with the use of ice in refrigeration

But just as the 'horseless carriage' has come to stay, and 'flameless light' has become a commonplace and a necessity, so the newest departure in house keeping convenience, iceless refrigeration, is now a recognized convenience

Electricity has become in truth the slave of man, who uses this great power not only for light and heat, but for generating cold

Plant Is Simple.

The "frigidaire" plant consists of the ice-box proper and a motor, either in the basement of the house or in the compartment below the refrigerator This motor connects with a coil in the space used in ordinary refrigerators for holding chunks of ice, and the central space left by the coil is utilized for trays which freeze cubes of ice for cold drinks, or make frozen puddings and desserts.

An automatic switch turns on the electric power whenever the temperature in the box goes above a certain figure, and turns it off when the proper coldness has been reached. Experience in Lincoln shows that the average plant is in use about four hours a day, using about one kilowatt of electricity, at a daily cost of something between 3¼ cents and 5 cents

Free Aid from Bank.

Visitors at the Manor will be asked to sign a register, and to the people whose names appear here, the First National bank has agreed to send bulletins outlining the possible budget and explaining the tendencies in this line of thought.

To keep a budget, or systematized record of income and expenses, estimate the money you will spend during the month for the items listed under the various headings shown on the form for record of expenditures: Capital, household, food, clothing, recreation, health, advancement, and miscellaneous, each divided into various subdivisions. Then show these amounts in spaces opposite "estimate for the month." When you spend any money, enter the same amount in the proper column on the date.

"Capital," the first division under expenditures, includes savings, investments, property, furniture, and life insurance. Under the household list come rent mortgage, interest, taxes, fire insurance, light, fuel, water laundry, cleaning, carfare, telephone, servants, repairs, and a special subdivision for miscellaneous expenditures. Groceries meat, vegetables, fruit, and meals eaten in restaurants and cafes are included under the general heading, "Food."

Sports, theaters, vacations, tobacco, candy and club expenses are all included under the recreation headings, and under health we find money paid to doctors, dentists, and nurses, with medicine and expenses at the gymnasium in preventative health training. Education, books, periodicals, and travel are all forms of advancement, and are included in one general heading. Unclassified expenditures are those for church, charities, and the ever-present but increasingly expensive automobile.

SELECTS FURNITURE

A. L. Guile has had a large part in selecting furnishings and draperies for Stratford Manor, and through the Perkins-Huffman company has obtained for the house the most suitable furniture. Quality consistent with price has been the important factor in choice of furnishings for the Manor, and in order that the most suitable pieces may be installed, there will probably be changes in furniture within the time that the house is opened for inspection.

CLEANLINESS IN MANOR ASSURED

Finishing of Sashes Has Been a Matter of Greatest Care.

Cleanliness is next to godliness, obviously enough. And to the mind of the practical housewife, this statement has more than usual force when it comes to moving into a different house.

A new house is especially hard to clean, for there are paint marks, and scars of moving furniture, and all the thousand-and-one anoyances which can make the first few days of moving in and settling arduous ones indeed.

The mistress of Stratford Manor stands practically alone in her good fortune, for there will be no necessity for her to spend hours in cleaning her house. The residence which opens for inspection this afternoon is ready for occupancy, and none of the debris of building or painting is in evidence.

Four hundred and eighty-four window panes are included in the house, with its casement windows, its French doors, and its divided sashes. Endless task to wash them all, inside and out! Yet the housewife who could move in today at the Manor would not find this annoyance. Thursday and Friday, professional window-washers were on duty at the house, washing windows, using sharp razor blades to scrape off the putty and the drops of paint inadvertently spilled during the process of construction.

Five Coats of Paint.

The windows are indeed important details, especially when, at the time the house is almost completed, their finishing must be completed. Paint, in coats to the number of five, must be applied around the edges to make smooth the woodwork. Sandpapering follows each of these coats as it is dried. Then putty is applied just before the papering is completed, to fill in the little corners around the sash and eliminate danger of cracks through wind and rain, or melting snow, may be admitted to the rooms.

At the Manor, the debris of building and painting has also been cleared away,, as it must be at any newly-constructed house. Paint cans and finish containers, shavings of wood, broken brushes, paint-hardened bristles, short lengths of flooring or of building lumber: all these must be cleared out of the way before the furniture, already chosen, can be moved into the house.

The cement drives at the house, leading from the street to the garage and past the French doors which enter the end of the long living room, have been scrubbed to cleanliness; the garage will be different from the ordinary car-storage place in that not a speck of dust or of spilled paint, will be left.

So is Stratford Manor prepared for occupancy. With the care of the housewife, yet with the speed of the professional working under pressure, it has been put into final condition, and the sparkling glass and the clean floors make an unbelievable amount of difference in the attractiveness of the house over which hundreds will exclaim today in admiration.

BRONZE WORK IS IN ACCORD WITH STYLE OF HOUSE

Hardware For Stratford Manor Selected With Utmost Care.

Every Detail Harmonizes With English Type of Achitecture.

Bronze hardware, harmonizing with the English style of architecture, is used at Stratford Manor. In keeping with the heavy entrance door, the permanent-looking interior doors, and the dark finish of the woodwork throughout the first floor, especially heavy knobs and hinges are used.

The entrance door, opening on the circular garden at the front of the house, is fitted with a sectional handle latch, made of white metal, with the black hammered in so that it too is a part of the finished product. This gives the hand-hammered effect, and adds immeasurably to the appearance of weight for the latch and lock. Made with a rough-hewn square escutcheon or back ground to the latch, this sitting is a definite improvement in carrying out the style of the house.

These lever handles on the French doors are also of white metal, to prevent rust, and are enhanced in attractiveness by the use of black hammered into the metal in the mediaeval style. "Rosettes," or minature cricular plates fastened to the door as background for the knobs or lever, are made of the same material, to add uniformity and to conform definitely with the style of the house.

Similar rosettes and fixtures are used on the second and third floors, where glass knobs are substituted for the heavier ones of the principal rooms. Easy-spring locks are used throughout the house, fitted with coil springs rather than the flat ones usually found. Screwless spindles are used in fastening on the knobs, and the hardware man can show you the knob-holders, graduated within a quarter of inch for closer adjustment than was possible to secure with the old-style type which had but two holes, some three-quarters of an inch apart. The elimination of door-knob rattling is the advantage claimed for the newer style of installation.

Ball-bearing self-retainers are used in the hinges on the doors, with non-rising pins, so that when the knob above the hinge rises, the mechanism is stopped. Thus the spring is kept in good condition, and the doors are never permitted to sag.

FRIGIDAIRE PUTS ICE WORRIES OUT

"Shut that ice-box door!"

How many times have you heard some busy housewife, in that unavoidable last-minute rush just before the dinner is served, call to the small boy or the young girl who has tried to help her, "Shut that ice-box door!"

In the attempt to save the ice, more inconveniences than mere carefulness in closing the door to the refrigerator have been suffered. Wrapping of heavy chunks of ice in newspapers, care in placing materials within the storage space, and the nuisance of emptying heavy pans of ice-water have been only a few of the nuisances in connection with the use of ice in refrigeration.

But just as the "horseless carriage" has come to stay, and "flameless light" has become a commonplace and a necessity, so the newest departure in housekeeping convenience, iceless refrigeration, is now a recognized convenience.

Electricity has become in truth the slave of man, who uses this great power not only for light and heat, but for generating cold.

Plant Is Simple.

The "frigidaire" plant consists of the ice-box proper and a motor, either in the basement of the house or in the compartment below the refrigerator. This motor connects with a coil in the space used in ordinary refrigerators for holding chunks of ice, and the central space left by the coil is utilized for trays which freeze cubes of ice for cold drinks, or make frozen puddings and desserts.

An automatic switch turns on the electric power whenever the temperature in the box goes above a certain figure, and turns it off when the proper coldness has been reached. Experience in Lincoln shows that the average plant is in use about four hours a day, using about one kilowatt of electricity, at a daily cost of something between 3½ cents and 5 cents.

TASTY LUNCH AT HOME BEAUTIFUL

Lincoln Dealers Unite In Giving Real Welcome To Visitors.

Staples and Delicacies Already On Shelves At Manor House.

If food wins the way to the heart Stratford Manor should receive a hearty welcome from Lincoln people. For sandwiches and coffee are to be served at the Manor beginning today and lasting through the exhibition days for Lincoln's home beautiful.

Delicious aromatic coffee, served out of doors, from a booth facing the large double doorway which gives upon the terrace to the back of the house! Large sandwiches made ribbon-fashion, and others cut in fancy shapes and sizes! What more could one want to make the house seem in very truth a home?

Food is, after all, a large part of the successful home, and the use of good food materials will go a long way toward appetizing cookery. For this reason, the food stuffs to be installed at the house were chosen with especial care, and the food materials served to visitors will carry out the quality idea used in those foods stacked on the well-stocked shelves of the kitchen cupboards, and on the trays of the refrigerator.

Canned goods, fresh fruits and vegetables, and staple groceries are in place on the proper shelves of the kitchen, and in the "frigidaire," ready so that the housewife might go in at any time to prepare a meal. Hamilton's Market has supplied the staple and fancy groceries, and imported sardines and delicious preserves, which are used in the house, just as the more common flour and sugar sacks are included in the stocks of food.

At the booth, food will be served to those who, having spent some time in realization and admiration of the features of the Manor, find the desire for food paramount.

Mrs. Mary Schmunk of the Hamilton market is in active charge of the booth from which sandwiches and coffee are dispensed. She is assisted by Mrs. Felicia Zarbaugh, who is serving Milday coffee, piping hot, and prepared to the individual taste. Mrs Zarbaugh knows how to make coffee, as Lincoln people who have seen her in local stores and at the fall food shows can testify.

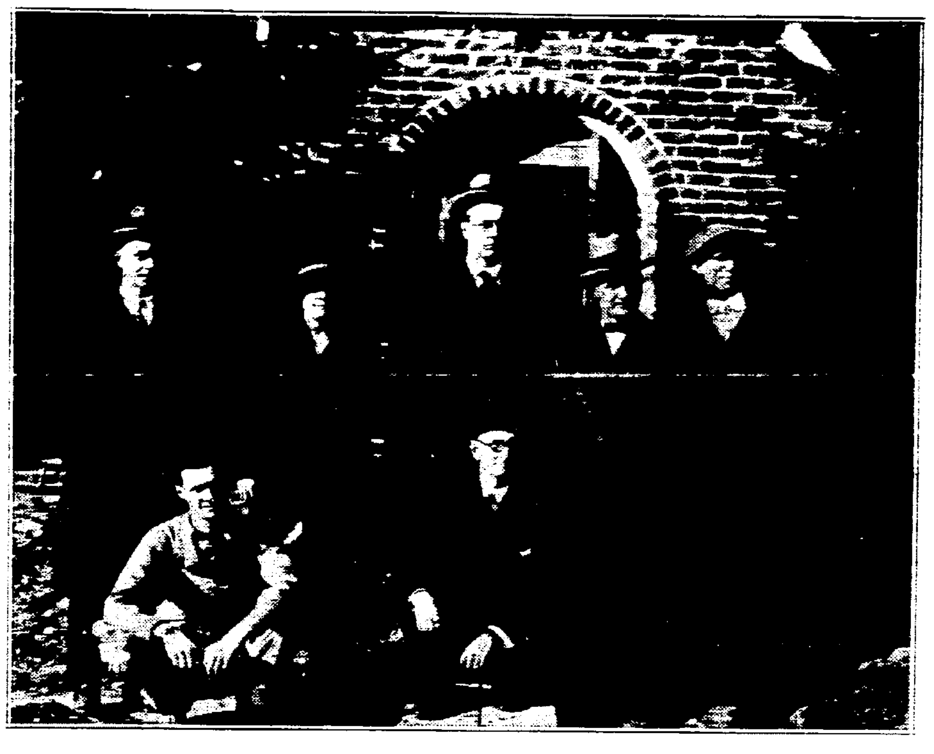
Sandwiches are served by demonstrators from the Gooch factory and Garvey concern, which manufactures its products "here in Lincoln" bakery, and peanut butter from the will be used as filler for some of them. The Dernehl sandwich filler, for which the Lindermann company is local jobber, will be used in other food. Crisp crackers, spread with thousand-island dressing, are served for those whose tastes does not run to ordinary sandwiches, but which craves something spicier and crisper. Iten's are furnishing the crackers, and the dressing comes from the Lau company.

To make the serving of food easier, the "frigidaire" unit in the kitchen, a means of iceless regrigeration, is called into service.

Lincoln-made and Lincoln-retailed products are used exclusively in the food preparations for the serving at Stratford Manor during its exhibition period. For in the home beautiful, typifying the sort of a house possible and desirable to people here, materials readily available are used exclusively.

That Lincoln is a "city of homes" has been said again and again; that her homes have made her the city she is today is a foregone conclusion. And that the addition of Stratford Manor, the beautiful home built within the standards of the average Lincoln home-owner, will be a decided improvement in facilities for the people here, is equally obvious.

Helped To Build and Finish Manor



—MacDonald.

Lincoln firms and Lincoln people have handled the work of building and finishing and furnishing Stratford Manor, and the photograph above shows some of them, paying a visit to the house just before their own shares in the work came in. The upper row shows B. Boyd of the Boyd Jewelry company, which furnishes silverware; Mrs. Mary Schmunk of the Hamilton market, which will stock pantry and refrigerator; Curry D. Bryson of the Korsmeyer company, which installed electric fixtures; L. J. Allen of the Nash company, which furnishes the official car; and E. H. Arminstrout of the Lincoln Traction company, the firm from which the electric ironer is supplied. W. E. Nash, jr., decorator, and A. L. Guile of the Perkins-Huffman company, supplying furniture and draperies, are shown in the lower row.

NO HEAT WORRY FOR OWNERS OF HOME BEAUTIFUL

Automatic Regulators Care For Furnace Week In and Week Out.

Fireplace All Right For Beauty, But "Sunoco" Does the Work.

Heating problems will hold no terrors for the master of Stratford Manor, for the most modern equipment for the proper regulation of temperature has been installed at the home beautiful, and is ready to function.

From the older days of architecture when the kitchen stove was the center around which the whole family gathered, to the present day, when houses are kept at unvarying temperatures throughout the cold months, the modern furnace has so far improved over the original furnaces that it is hard to realize the strides of progress.

The fireplace of today is installed in the house more for its aesthetic value than because of the heat it will furnish. Its principal recommendation lies not in the fact that it makes the home the more comfortable, but that it makes it the more beautiful. Thus, although the spacious fireplace is included in plans and in the house, its influence on maintenance of any given temperaure is practically none, and the heating equipment must be carefully planned and carefully installed.

In the installation of the furnace, the first important detal is planning the house in such a way that it is possible to conduct heat to the various rooms withou difficulty. Flues must be properly provided for, and provision must be made for the installation of pipes within the walls without in any way affecting the exterior appearance or without too many crooks and bends

Careful Installation.

F. H. Dudley installed the large hot air furnace at the Manor. The huge stove in the basement is installed with greatest care and attention to detail, and to the man who is well informed on the heating apparatus and the heating question as well has one prime recommendation: the name on its door is "Front Rank."

The "Sunoco" heater, installed inside the furnace, is an arrangement whereby any ordinary hot air or hot water furnace may be transformed into an oil burner. It narrows the heating problem down to the comparatively simple operation of adjusting a "thermostat," which regulates the temperature of the room. The miniature "pilot light" ignites the oil only when the temperature has fallen below the desired figure.

The troublesome detail of banking the fire at night has also been eliminated by the use of the Sunoco, which is automatically controlled so that at a given time each night the heat is turned off, and at a predetermined hour in the morning, the flame is again started.

Oil companies here are already handling the fuel used in such burners, and some of the coal companies, are beginning to equip themselves for furnishing it.

In the refining process, crude petroleum is used, and passes through various stages of refinement, after each of which one of the products is drawn off. The final product is gasoline; preceding that is "coal oil," or "kerosene," and just before that is the finer grade of distillate, used in oil furnaces. Thirty-five or forty is the gravity test of this product, according to L. Martin of the State Oil company.

The oil is delivered in large quantities, usually about 500 gallons at a time, at the residence where it is to be burned, and stored in a large tank, usually half-submerged in the back yard. Sometimes, however, the tank is installed in the basement. For the average home, Mr. Martin thinks, five or six loads, delivered by the tank car without the delivery annoyance of coal or kindling, will be sufficient for the winter. At the average price, this would bring the annual cost to somewhere between $125 and $175.

The delivery convenience of the oil burner's fuel is the important factor in the eyes of the housewife; in the eyes of the man who tends the furnace, the important point is that the simple twist of a lever does all the work formerly adjudged so heavy that many a college boy has earned his way by caring for heating equipment.

For the peope who will live in Stratford Manor, the heating problem then is no longer a problem, for all the difficulties have been removed by the addition of the most modern type of apparatus within the almost medieval setting of the English residence.

AIDED IN PLANS

To Mrs. Harvey Rathbone goes much of the credit for the beauty and convenience of the house, for she personally chose the draperies to be used at the Manor, and also spent a busy morning mapping out the details of placement for built-in furniture in the kitchen. Thus the housewife is given the best possible opportunity to cook with loss of energy, and with that convenience which lightens labor.

NASH CAR TO BE READY IN GARAGE

Auto Will Remove All Worries of Manor's Distance From Town.

"But the Manor is so far out," is the remark that many Lincoln people have made in the past few weeks since the Manor has so neared completion that the matter of inhabiting it has become a real question.

Street car service with vehicles running only at intervals, is slow and unsatisfactory even under ideal conditions, and the matter of transportation from the Manor has become a serious question in the minds of many people who have watched the progress of the house. The problem would be an acute one without the intervention of the automobile.

The Nash four-door sedan has solved the problem, and one of these cars in the latest model will be installed in the Nash nook, which is built in at the side of the house. Thus the automobile adds the last word in convenience to this ideal home, where the maximum of effort has been expended in an attempt to give the greatest comfort and convenience.

The car, equipped with four-wheel brakes, disc wheels, balloon tires, force-feed oil lubrication, and special steering mechanism, which makes for fine-point control is distinguished for its fine and faultless performance. Its long life is one of ehe principal points in its favor, according to F. A. Roehl, local dealer.

Fitting Vehicle.

Beautifully appointed, the automobile is a fitting vehicle for the mistress of the Manor. Black and taupe striped mohair is used for the interior upholstery, and silken curtains add to the sumptuousness of the interior. Old empire silver finish is used in the portable vanity case and the smoking set and in the reading and dome lights installed Mechanical window lifts are part of the equipment, so that the beauty of Nebraska spring days need not be lost to the lady who rides within the closed car.

The instrument board is an interesting detail of the four-door sedan for its reliable clock and its gasoline gauge are installed there. No danger that the driver of the car will be inconvenienced by exhausting gasoline supply at an unexpected moment! A transmission lock is the safeguard against theft which is placed upon the car.

A windshield wiper and rear vision mirror are installed also for the comfort, convenience and safety of the driver. Door locks are also used to guard against possible inconvenience regarding removal of minor parts.

A steel trunk is built in at the back of the car, with polished aluminum cleats for greater convenience and for attractiveness.

Nash cars are also manufactured with similar specifications in other models: a five-passenger touring car, an open model seven-passenger car, a most attractive roadster, a five-passenger sedan with two doors or with four, the Victoria, and the seven-passenger sedan.

Closet Space Is Housewife's Joy

Closet space adds immeasurably to the ease of housekeeping, for the abundance of storage space is an invaluable asset in convenience. The use of a third-floor storage room gives the housewife the opportunity to keep her living rooms free from unnecessary furniture or unsuitable pieces.

NO HEAT WORRY FOR OWNERS OF HOME BEAUTIFUL

Automatic Regulators Care For Furnace Week In and Week Out.

Fireplace All Right For Beauty, But "Sunoco" Does the Work.

Heating problems will hold no terrors for the master of Stratford Manor, for the most modern equipment for the proper regulation of temperature has been installed at the home beautiful, and is ready to function.

From the older days of architecture when the kitchen stove was the center around which the whole family gathered, to the present day, when houses are kept at unvarying temperatures throughout the cold months, the modern furnace has so far improved over the original furnaces that it is hard to realize the strides of progress.

The fireplace of today is installed in the house more for its aesthetic value than because of the heat it will furnish. Its principal recommendation lies not in the fact that it makes the home the more comfortable, but that it makes it the more beautiful. Thus, although the spacious fireplace is included in plans and in the house, its influence on maintenance of any given temperaure is practically none, and the heating equipment must be carefully planned and carefully installed.

In the installation of the furnace, the first important detal is planning the house in such a way that it is possible to conduct heat to the various rooms withou difficulty. Flues must be properly provided for, and provision must be made for the installation of pipes within the walls without in any way affecting the exterior appearance or without too many crooks and bends.

Careful Installation.

F. H. Dudley installed the large hot air furnace at the Manor. The huge stove in the basement is installed with greatest care and attention to detail, and to the man who is well informed on the heating apparatus and the heating question as well has one prime recommendation: the name on its door is "Front Rank."

The "Sunoco" heater, installed inside the furnace, is an arrangement whereby any ordinary hot air or hot water furnace may be transformed into an oil burner. It narrows the heating problem down to the comparatively simple operation of adjusting a "thermostat," which regulates the temperature of the room. The miniature "pilot light" ignites the oil only when the temperature has fallen below the desired figure.

The troublesome detail of banking the fire at night has also been eliminated by the use of the Sunoco, which is automatically controlled so that at a given time each night the heat is turned off, and at a predetermined hour in the morning, the flame is again started.

Oil companies here are already handling the fuel used in such burners, and some of the coal companies, are beginning to equip themselves for furnishing it.

In the refining process, crude petroleum is used, and passes through various stages of refinement, after each of which one of the products is drawn off. The final product is gasoline; preceding that is "coal oil," or "kerosene," and just before that is the finer grade of distillate, used in oil furnaces. Thirty-five or forty is the gravity test of this product, according to L. Martin of the State Oil company.

The oil is delivered in large quantities, usually about 500 gallons at a time, at the residence where it is to be burned, and stored in a large tank, usually half-submerged in the back yard. Sometimes, however, the tank is installed in the basement. For the average home, Mr. Martin thinks, five or six loads, delivered by the tank car without the delivery annoyance of coal or kindling, will be sufficient for the winter. At the average price, this would bring the annual cost to somewhere between $125 and $175.

The delivery convenience of the oil burner's fuel is the important factor in the eyes of the housewife; in the eyes of the man who tends the furnace, the important point is that the simple twist of a lever does all the work formerly adjudged so heavy that many a college boy has earned his way by caring for heating equipment.

For the peope who will live in Stratford Manor, the heating problem then is no longer a problem, for all the difficulties have been removed by the addition of the most modern type of apparatus within the almost medieval setting of the English residence.

MacMillan To Tell of Arctic Trips In Closing Number of Junior League Lecture Series

The Junior League of Lincoln announces for its final number in its lecture series Donald MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, who will speak at the high school auditorium March 17. The MacMillan story has often been told.

Radio, that mystic communication that never until 1923 served an Arctic expedition from start to finish, told it as the last expedition unfolded from day to day; press associations spread the tale broadcast over the land as gleanings came out of the Northland; the arrival last September of the sturdy little auxiliary schooner Bowdoin brought the explorer himself, who has since told his own vivid descriptions and with the aid of the first motion pictures to be taken at the top of the world the interesting facts of a year and a quarter in the frozen North to many audiences.

Is Virile Speaker.

Captain MacMillan is a speaker of winning and virile personality, who knows how to say things and, unquestionably, has plenty to say. This lecture will be illustrated wholly with moving pictures. While not more artistic, perhaps, than the slides with which MacMillan has illustrated his previous lectures the motion pictures give a much more vivid idea of life on board the "Bowdoin," and among the Eskimos. There will be nine reels of these pictures, which the youngsters in the audience will find as full of exciting adventures and narrow escapes as their favorite thrillers. They will enable one to make the acquaintance of the crew and to follow pretty closely their doings from June 1923 to September of the following year.

Impresses Board of Education.

So impressed was the Omaha board of education with the lecture given by Captain MacMillan early in the season before the Fine Arts society that it engeged him for two days so that the school children and the adults not members of the Fine Arts society, may have an opportunity to hear his wonderful tale. Captain MacMillan does not undertake his exploits merely in a spirit of adventure, but as an agent of the Carnegie institute studying the effect of terrestrial magnetism and atmospheric electricity. He will return with his old crew in June to continue the work of science and to carry the comforts of civilization to the natives.

Those holding season tickets are entitled to the lecture, as it replaces the one to have been given by Heywood Broun. Single tickets will be on sale Monday at the Ross P. Curtice company.

MacMillan To Tell of Arctic Trips In Closing Number of Junior League Lecture Series

The Junior League of Lincoln announces for its final number in its lecture series Donald MacMillan, the Arctic explorer, who will speak at the high school auditorium March 17. The MacMillan story has often been told.

Radio, that mystic communication that never until 1923 served an Arctic expedition from start to finish, told it as the last expedition unfolded from day to day; press associations spread the tale broadcast over the land as gleanings came out of the Northland; the arrival last September of the sturdy little auxiliary schooner Bowdoin brought the explorer himself, who has since told his own vivid descriptions and with the aid of the first motion pictures to be taken at the top of the world the interesting facts of a year and a quarter in the frozen North to many audiences.

Is Virile Speaker.

Captain MacMillan is a speaker of winning and virile personality, who knows how to say things and, unquestionably, has plenty to say. This lecture will be illustrated wholly with moving pictures. While not more artistic, perhaps, than the slides with which MacMillan has illustrated his previous lectures the motion pictures give a much more vivid idea of life on board the "Bowdoin," and among the Eskimos. There will be nine reels of these pictures, which the youngsters in the audience will find as full of exciting adventures and narnow escapes as their favorite thrillers. They will enable one to make the acquaintance of the crew and to follow pretty closely their doings from June 1923 to September of the following year.

Impresses Board of Education.

So impressed was the Omaha board of education with the lecture given by Captain MacMillan early in the season before the Fine Arts society that it engeged him for two days so that the school children and the adults not members of the Fine Arts society, may have an opportunity to hear his wonderful tale, Captain MacMillan does not undertake his exploits merely in a spirit of adventure, but as an agent of the Carnegie institute studying the effect of terrestrial magnetism and atmospheric electricity. He will return with his old crew in June to continue the work of science and to carry the comforts of civilization to the natives.

Those holding season tickets are entitled to the lecture, as it replaces the one to have been given by Heywood Broun. Single tickets will be on sale Monday at the Ross P. Curtice company.

INTERESTING SURVEY MADE BY NEBRASKA LEAGUE.

An interesting survey made by the Nebraska League of Women Voters recently included the remodeling of court houses to make them fit for women jurors, reveals that many of them need repairing.

Miss Helen M. Rocca, secretary of the political education in the national league says "If better and more efficient county government is to be realized in the 3,000 or more counties of this country, the present unwieldy, expensive, complex and inefficient machinery must be recast." Miss Rocca's observations are being received by league members with marked interest Outstanding defects of county agovernment as detailed by a recent discussion of Miss Rocca's survey with the following recommendations for changes in county government are advocated by the Nebraska league.

1—The form of county government should be recast, avoiding the slavish uniformity which has characterized the forms of county government and paying particular attention to the problems and needs of different types of counties. In many states, county boards should be made smaller.

2—The ballot in county government should be very materially shortened by abolishing some officers altogether, consolidating others, and filling most of the remaining ones by appontment.

3—The development of a real county executive, probably a county manager with powers and duties similar to those of a city manager, and improvement in employment methods in particular, placing county employees under civil service rules.

4—Methods of handling county finances should be imprved by installing scientific accunting methods, the adoption of the budget system, and centralization of the appropriating power.

5—The county in many states should assume many functions now exercised by the township and on the other hand certain powers which the county now has could best be exercised by the state.

6—All county officers should be placed on a salary basis exclusively, thus abolishing the fee system.

"Newspaper correspondent, novelist and president of the National Feminist association of Spain, the Senora Isabel de Palencia was one of the most popular speakers who has visited the college this year. The assembly room was filled to overflowing. Her lecture was partly in the form of an exhibition of old regional costumes of Spain, beautiful and vivid garments rich with embroidery and quaint with shawl and mantilla that showed a wide range of influence and adaptatior.

These garments are also interesting as a revelation of the artistic tendencies of the Spanish people . They are both an inspiation to artists and a means of retaining national spirit and interest. The origin of some of the costumes dates back to the fourth century.

Her English is admirable and her lecture has substance as well as charm. Both the faculty and students enjoyed her.

Irene Castle Frocks Are Here

The new March collection of stunning Irene Castle styles are now being shown by Orkins. The dresses are gorgeous—the desire of every woman—and the coats are simply wonderful. "I know that skirts are being worn very short," says Mr. Wassermann, the manager, "but I hope that Lincoln women will not wear them too short. Paris dictates knee length, but I do not believe the American women will stand for that extreme. New materials are mostly Jooseena and the light shades, as moonstone, and Coolidge gray.

"In addition to the Irene Castle line we are showing smart new dresses of Orkin's own creation, and we advise women who are wanting beautiful dresses to see them in our windows where we are displaying them Sunday and Monday. And they want to act quickly, for these frocks are such splendid values that they will be picked up quickly by the many women waiting for them."

And when you are down town Monday, Mr. Wasserman invites you to stop in and get a copy of Irene Castle Corticelli Fashions booklet for March.

One Of

New York's most charming dancer's, Lenore Huges, is frequently cited by fashion authorities as an example of a smartly dressed woman. Her new dance frocks are mostly made with the full, elaborately trimmed skirt and the simple, molded bodice. Miss Hughes seems to prefer the medium waistline, neither too long nor too close to normal.

They'll Wear Out, But They'll Take a Long Time About It,"

Was a remark I overheard about some lovely hosiery that I had found at Speier's. They're real money-savers, are these, for they are full fashioned, have a medium-high heel made of finest lisle covered with silk, come in two weights, service weight for the street and sheerest chiffon for dress and cost $1.50 per pair And, girls, they have a twenty-inch silk boot — full length — so you can wear these Gordon hose though March winds blow and not worry about lisle tops showing. Colors, soft tans and grays that blend with your costume, and others. Mail orders promptly filled. Write Speier's at Tenth and O streets or to Patricia Ann.

There Is More Trimming

On skirts, especially on those of party frocks. Big, gay flowers in silken materials, leaves, petals, ribbons and jeweled ornaments add much to many otherwise simple frocks.

The Bustle Bow

Is making its appearance. One of gorgeous, brilliant red was perched at the waistline on the back of a simple white satin gown.

Brilliant Colors

They Cost You Nothing

There's rumor about that the price of coal at the City Fuel company has gone up since they started to give S. & H. Green Trading Stamps away. Don't believe it, for it's not true. The City Fuel has installed this extra service for your benefit. The frugal folks are saving their stamps for the attractive premiums they can get. Bernice, Acme Ozark and other coals are priced now as they were before. Call B3291.

Slippers a la Mode

And according to the advanced mode, at that. Blond satin and blond kid—the apex of fashion. And you should see those that Gold's are showing. One partic-heel back combined with a black and back combined with a black patent leather toe. Stunning! Another unusual number is of black satin trimmed with iridescent patent leather—an imported material which scintillates purple, gold and green in various lights. A patent leather model of unusual attractiveness has many small cut-outs and is particularly modish when worn with light colored hose. All patent, all satin, tan calfskin, tan kid, and combinations with full Spanish, Junior Spanish, full Cuban, Junior Cuban or low heels are very good. Lovely hose in fashionable tints to match may be found in the hosiery department, priced at $1.25, $1 59 and $1.95.

Congo Jewelry

Taking its name from the South African natives whose queer ornaments and decorations it imitates, Congo jewelry offers to fashionable women something distinctive and attractive in costume jewelry. Coral, pearls and filigree metal are combined to make choker necklaces, flexible bracelets and unusual belts.

SENORA DE PALENCIA MEETS WITH SUCCESS.

Smith College Weekly of Northamton, Mass., has forwarded the following information of Senora de Palencia to Mrs. A. E. Sheldon, president of the Lincoln Branch of American Association of University women. The senora will speak before the A. A. U. W. of Lincoln in a short time and these notes give a brief glimpse of this most talented woman.

"Newspaper correspondent, novelist and president of the National Feminist association of Spain, the Senora Isabel de Palencia was one of the most popular speakers who has visited the college this year. The assembly room was filled to overflowing. Her lecture was partly in the form of an exhibition of old regional costumes of Spain, beautiful and vivid garments rich with embroidery and quaint with shawl and mantilla that showed a wide range of influence and adaptation.

These garments are also interesting as a revelation of the artistic tendencies of the Spanish people. They are both an inspiation to artists and a means of retaining national spirit and interest. The origin of some of the costumes dates back to the fourth century.

Her English is admirable and her lecture has substance as well as charm. Both the faculty and students enjoyed her.

VICTORIAN CIRCLE HAS REGULAR LESSON.

The Victorian Chautauqua circle met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. C. B. Hendricks, 3415 T street. Fourteen answered to roll call with current events. Mrs. George Chatburn presented the following program:

Irene Castle Frocks Are Here

The new March collection of stunning Irene Castle styles are now being shown by Orkins. The dresses are gorgeous—the desire of every woman—and the coats are simply wonderful. "I know that skirts are being worn very short," says Mr. Wassermann, the manager, "but I hope that Lincoln women will not wear them too short. Paris dictates knee length, but I do not believe the American women will stand for that extreme. New materials are mostly Jooseena and the light shades, as moonstone, and Coolidge gray.

"In addition to the Irene Castle line we are showing smart new dresses of Orkin's own creation, and we advise women who are wanting beautiful dresses to see them in our windows where we are displaying them Sunday and Monday. And they want to act quickly, for these frocks are such splendid values that they will be picked up quickly by the many women waiting for them."

And when you are down town Monday, Mr. Wasserman invites you to stop in and get a copy of Irene Castle Corticelli Fashions booklet for March.

One Of

New York's most charming dancer's, Lenore Huges, is frequently cited by fashion authorities as an example of a smartly dressed woman. Her new dance frocks are mostly made with the full, elaborately trimmed skirt and the simple, molded bodice. Miss Hughes seems to prefer the medium waistline, neither too long nor too close to normal.

They'll Wear Out, But They'll Take a Long Time About It,"

Was a remark I overheard about some lovely hosiery that I had found at Speier's. They're real money-savers, are these, for they are full fashioned, have a medium-high heel made of finest lisle covered with silk, come in two weights, service weight for the street and sheerest chiffon for dress and cost $1.50 per pair. And, girls, they have a twenty-inch silk boot — full length — so you can wear these Gordon hose though March winds blow and not worry about lisle tops showing. Colors, soft tans and grays that blend with your costume, and others. Mail orders promptly filled. Write Speier's at Tenth and O streets or to Patricia Ann.

There Is More Trimming

On skirts, especially on those of party frocks. Big, gay flowers in silken materials, leaves, petals, ribbons and jeweled ornaments add much to many otherwise simple frocks.

The Bustle Bow

Is making its appearance. One of gorgeous, brilliant red was perched at the waistline on the back of a simple white satin gown.

Brilliant Colors

They Cost You Nothing

There's rumor about that the price of coal at the City Fuel company has gone up since they started to give S. & H. Green Trading Stamps away. Don't believe it, for it's not true. The City Fuel has installed this extra service for your benefit. The frugal folks are saving their stamps for the attractive premiums they can get. Bernice, Acme Ozark and other coals are priced now as they were before. Call B3291.

Slippers a la Mode

And according to the advanced mode, at that. Blond satin and blond kid—the apex of fashion. And you should see those that Gold's are showing. One partic- heel back combined with a black and back combined with a black patent leather toe. Stunning! Another unusual number is of black satin trimmed with iridescent patent leather—an imported material which scintillates purple, gold and green in various lights. A patent leather model of unusual attractiveness has many small cut-outs and is particularly modish when worn with light colored hose. All patent, all satin, tan calfskin, tan kid, and combinations with full Spanish, Junior Spanish, full Cuban, Junior Cuban or low heels are very good. Lovely hose in fashionable tints to match may be found in the hosiery department, priced at $1.25, $1.59 and $1.95.

Congo Jewelry

Taking its name from the South African natives whose queer ornaments and decorations it imitates, Congo jewelry offers to fashionable women something distinctive and attractive in costume jewelry. Coral, pearls and filigree metal are combined to make choker necklaces, flexible bracelets and unusual belts.

Religious History Omaha and State

The history of the beginning of Christian work in Omaha, in Nebraska, and the middle west is a volume just written by Dr. A. A. DeLarme. It contains an account of the thrilling events connected with the pioneers of Nebraska going back to the year 1833. It is a book of 52 pages illustrated with over forty pictures of former and present ministers and laymen active in the work of Nebraska chuches. The book is 7 1-2 by 10 1-2 inches and handsomely bound. One of the principal features is that it carries in chronological order the date and circumstance of the founding of the churches of the various denominations in Omaha, the first ordination of any minister and the first dedication of any church in the State.

Horse and Mule Mired In Creek

After rescuing a horse and a mule from the mire of Stevens creek about five miles east of University Place Saturday evening, Humane Superintendent C. E. McClain had to destroy the animals. They were the property of J. H. Dehman, and had become mired in the mud when they went to the creek for water.

McClain was notified of the condition of the animals by Amos Cossman, 208 West Sixteenth street, who walked from the farm to the suburb to give the alarm. He was one of a troop of about thirty Boy Scouts who, while returning from a hike found the animals in the stream. Using heavy ropes they helped the humane officer pull the horse and the mule from the water.

Religious History Omaha and State

The history of the beginning of Christian work in Omaha, in Nebraska, and the middle west is a volume just written by Dr. A. A. DeLarme. It contains an account of the thrilling events connected with the pioneers of Nebraska going back to the year 1833. It is a book of 52 pages illustrated with over forty pictures of former and present ministers and laymen active in the work of Nebraska chuches. The book is 7 1-2 by 10 1-2 inches and handsomely bound. One of the principal features is that it carries in chronological order the date and circumstance of the founding of the churches of the various denominations in Omaha, the first ordination of any minister and the first dedication of any church in the State.

After rescuing a horse and a mule from the mire of Stevens creek about five miles east of University Place Saturday evening, Humane Superintendent C. E. McClain had to destroy the animals. They were the property of J. H. Dehman, and had become mired in the mud when they went to the creek for water.

McClain was notified of the condition of the animals by Amos Cossman, 208 West Sixteenth street, who walked from the farm to the suburb to give the alarm. He was one of a troop of about thirty Boy Scouts who, while returning from a hike found the animals in the stream. Using heavy ropes they helped the humane officer pull the horse and the mule from the water.

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, famous duo pianists who will appear in concert Tuesday night at the City auditorium on the Great Artists' course, have been acclaimed in all parts of the country. Comments by the critics have been most favorable, as shown by the following notices:

"A recital that sent one home tingling with the very joy of being alive was that given in the Pabst theatre Sunday afternoon, by Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, the famous duo pianists who have elevated two piano playing from something to be endured to the highest pinnacle of fine art."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

"That magical pair, Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, Castor and Pollux of the piano, closed the Friday night symphony concert. Three times they came back to play encores and each re-appearance brought a thunder of applause. If the two had played on until midnight the audience would have remained."—Minnesota Daily Star.

"It was not alone because professional musicians, connoisseurs, and teachers were thrilled by the playing of Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, Monday night, that they are worthy of comment. The fact that they held laymen enthralled was of even more significance. The entire audience seemed to enjoy the program, not just because it was unusual in its nature, but because of the sheer beauty of the playing."—Houston Chronicle.

London's Covent Garden, the royal opera house, has been turned into a dance hall for the next two months. The lease has been acquired by B. N. Brook of the Olympic Dance club, and the hall was opened to the public in February—the dance floor being taken from Olympia specially for the purpose. It is understood that this arrangement will in no way interfere with rehearsal for the forthcoming opera season.

A strong addition to the Eisteddfod or music competition movement in Southern California is furnished by the projected contests for Pasadena this spring. This Eisteddfod will probably take place during the week of the national music week, May 3-9, and will, in fact, be Pasadena's music week. The local chamber of commerce is backing the movement with a guarantee of $5,000 covering the expenses. The community's endorsement of the project was effected at a meeting of leaders in the music, drama and art life of the city, held at the chamber of commerce.

Among those who spoke in favor of the project were Cecil F. Martin, director of the playground community service, Spencer B. Kingman, chairman of the local committee to investigate the movement and Alexander Stewart, executive secretary of the Civic Music and Art association of Southern California which is stimulating the movement throughout that section. Mr. Stewart stated that Eisteddfods were also in the process of formation at Glendale, Redlands, Santa Monica, Santa Barbara and the Imperial Valley.

The tract was purchased recently by the city as an extension to Memorial drive.

It has been a dream of the Woman's club to carry out this plan and give to posterity a history of the state in shrubs and flowers. The civic department of the club is already planning to hold a picnic there.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S LEAGUE.

The New York League of Business and Professional Women recently discovered eight blind business women in their city, and gave a reception in their club house for those women who are supporting themselves in occupations beside men and women endowed with all their faculties. The director of the New York state commission explained that she had learned that a blind girl must be even better equipped for her business than others if she is to succeed. When these girls leave school the commission gives them special training in office work at high pressure; a blind ditaphone operator, for instance, teaches them the use of that machine, typewriting, touch spelling, the enlargement of her vocabulary, as she is unable to consult a dictionary, and other needful knowledge is imparted. These eight blind girls have held their original positions for long periods, the lowest being four years, with four salary increases during that time. Only two of these girls live at home. Helen Keller has been an inspiration for all these girls in her magnificent accomplishments against this handicap.

The local Business Women's league will hold its regular dinner on Thursday evening of this week, March 12, in the nature of a St. Patrick's party. Business matters to be discussed including the placing of the Jeannette Nelson scholarship fund. It is the desire that a full discussion and thorough consideration be given this subject that the greatest good may come therefrom to the business girls most in need of assistance. The dinner chairman on this occasion will be Miss Emma Hedges and the house chairman Miss Bertha Hugg.

Monday evening the recreation hour will be resumed. This was interrupted by the strenuous work entailed by preparation for the carnival.

About twenty-five guardians attended a meeting of the Lincoln Guardians' association, Tuesday, March 3, at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. E. Beltzer. Each guardian reported what her camp fire was planning to send to the exhibit, what they were going to give to the hiking cabin, the number of her girls who would take rank at the grand council fire and the number who would qualify for the Kiwanis honor medals in the "Make Camp Fire Burn Brighter" contest. Following this business session, Leonard Worley president of the Bruner Bird club spoke on "The Birds of Southeastern Nebraska" helping them afterwards to identify at least twenty wild birds from colored charts, so that they might help their girls in the earning of the nature honors during March. At the close of the meeting Bee Jackson, Louise Menzendof, Hilda Parker and Florence Steevers, Trinity church guardians, served refreshments of ice ceam and little cakes.

The camp fire chorus met for a final rehearsal of their program for the parents' tea, Wednesday, March 4 at the First Baptist church. The following fourteen girls were chosen to present the program: Ruth Stednitz, and Lilia Moore, high soprano; Irma Collinsworth, Louise Westover, Frances Turpin, Betty Sain, Mable Williams, Estle Anderson, Virginia Todd, soprano; Dorothy Jean Thorson, Janice Mickey, Thelma Geiger, Barbara Windham and Kathryn Kirlin, alto. The girls will sing "The Camp Fire Girls," "The Boating Song," by Neidlinger, with motions, and Neidlingers "Guest Song" with special words written to the mothers and dads, besides some Camp Kiwanis songs. Cornelia Gant is the pianist for the chorus.

Wednesday afternoon, March 11, the chorus will start work on special music for the Birthday grand council fire. Only girls who attend all rehearsals for this music will sing the special numbers for the council fire.

Tuesday, March 10, there will be a meeting of Wohelo court at the camp fire office at 4 o'clock. The office must be notified one day in advance of all girls planning to attend or they may not be examined.

Saturday, March 14, Leonard Worley will meet with all camp fire girls who wish to earn bird honors at 2:30 at the camp fire office and help the girls to earn honors, which they will need especially if they are working in the make camp fire burn brighter contest.

Sunday, March 15, is camp fire Sunday and will be observed in some way by each church camp fire. The office would like to know the plans of all church groups, especially those who are planning to give ceremonials for the church services.

Eluta camp fire held a most beautiful patriotic ceremonial Saturday, February 28, at the First Baptist church. Minnehaha camp fire and their guardian, Mrs. Jennie Edwards were the guests of honor and also the members of the Violet Bluebird Nest, Canary Bluebird Nest and Daffodil Bluebirds, whose leaders, Cornelia Gant, Virginia Larson and Theodosia Summers, are members of Eluta camp fire. The mothers of some of the bluebirds were also guests at the council fire. Following the wohelo call and the entrance of the girls singing "Oh Wohelo" the whole group sang "America the Beautiful." The candles of work, health and love were lit by Cornelia Gant, Nellie Hawkins and Theodosia Summers; Mary Letitia Pollard repeated the "Ode to Fire" and the girls sang "Burn Fire Burn." Julia Haifke was received into the group as a new member and honor beads were awarded to 12 girls. The woodgatherer's rank was given to Betty Christy and Virginia Todd, and the gown ceremony performed for Virginia Todd. The firemaker's rank was given to Irma Collinsworth, Norma Harvey, Thelma Geiger, Theodosia Summers, Betty Gayle and Mary Letitia Pollard. Then the Violet Bluebirds sang with the motions "This is the way we fly around," the Canary Bluebirds have a dance in clever little white costumes and the Daffodil Bluebirds sang a blue bird song. The guardain then gave a little talk on meaning of the camp fire crede, followed by the repeating of the crede by Cornelia Gant, the singing of "Mammy Moon," the extinguishing of the candles by Barbara Hall, Betty Gayle and Virginia Toadd, and the singing of "Lay Me to Sleep."

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, famous duo pianists who will appear in concert Tuesday night at the City auditorium on the Great Artists' course, have been acclaimed in all parts of the country. Comments by the critics have been most favorable, as shown by the following notices:

"A recital that sent one home tingling with the very joy of being alive was that given in the Pabst theatre Sunday afternoon, by Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, the famous duo pianists who have elevated two piano playing from something to be endured to the highest pinnacle of fine art."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

"That magical pair, Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, Castor and Pollux of the piano, closed the Friday night symphony concert. Three times they came back to play encores and each re-appearance brought a thunder of applause. If the two had played on until midnight the audience would have remained."—Minnesota Daily Star.

"It was not alone because professional musicians, connoisseurs, and teachers were thrilled by the playing of Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, Monday night, that they are worthy of comment. The fact that they held laymen enthralled was of even more significance. The entire audience seemed to enjoy the program, not just because it was unusual in its nature, but because of the sheer beauty of the playing."—Houston Chronicle.

London's Covent Garden, the royal opera house, has been turned into a dance hall for the next two months. The lease has been acquired by B. N. Brook of the Olympic Dance club, and the hall was opened to the public in February—the dance floor being taken from Olympia specially for the purpose. It is understood that this arrangement will in no way interfere with rehearsal for the forthcoming opera season.

A strong addition to the Eisteddfod or music competition movement in Southern California is furnished by the projected contests for Pasadena this spring. This Eisteddfod will probably take place during the week of the national music week, May 3-9, and will, in fact, be Pasadena's music week. The local chamber of commerce is backing the movement with a guarantee of $3,000 covering the expenses. The community's endorsement of the project was effected at a meeting of leaders in the music, drama and art life of the city, held at the chamber of commerce.

Among those who spoke in favor of the project were Cecil F. Martin, director of the playground community service; Spencer B. Kingman, chairman of the local committee to investigate the movement and Alexander Stewart, executive secretary of the Civic Music and Art association of Southern California which is stimulating the movement throughout that section. Mr. Stewart stated that Eisteddfods were also in the process of formation at Glendale, Redlands, Santa Monica, Santa Barbara and the Imperial Valley.

The tract was purchased recently by the city as an extension to Memorial drive.

It has been a dream of the Woman's club to carry out this plan and give to posterity a history of the state in shrubs and flowers. The civic department of the club is already planning to hold a picnic there.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S LEAGUE.

The New York League of Business and Professional Women recently discovered eight blind business women in their city, and gave a reception in their club house for those women who are supporting themselves in occupations beside men and women endowed with all their faculties. The director of the New York state commission explained that she had learned that a blind girl must be even better equipped for her business than others if she is to succeed. When these girls leave school the commission gives them special training in office work at high pressure; a blind ditaphone operator, for instance, teaches them the use of that machine, typewriting, touch spelling, the enlargement of her vocabulary, as she is unable to consult a dictionary, and other needful knowledge is imparted. These eight blind girls have held their original positions for long periods, the lowest being four years, with four salary increases during that time. Only two of these girls live at home. Helen Keller has been an inspiration for all these girls in her magnificent accomplishments against this handicap.

The local Business Women's league will hold its regular dinner on Thursday evening of this week, March 12, in the nature of a St. Patrick's party. Business matters to be discussed including the placing of the Jeannette Nelson scholarship fund. It is the desire that a full discussion and thorough consideration be given this subject, that the greatest good may come therefrom to the business girls most in need of assistance. On Saturday March 14 hundreds of Phi Delts from Nebraska Alpha scattered throughout the United States and other countries as well will pay tribute to the fiftieth anniversary of the chartering of the chapter at the University of Nebraska.

It was in 1875 that the charter of Phi Delta Theta was first granted to Nebraska but because of the lack of approval and support it was suspended

In 1883 Arthur F Anderson a member of Indiana Gamma at Butler university was persuaded to stop in Lincoln on his way back to school and look over the Nebraska university which was rather small at that time Mr Anderson s parents had just moved to Nebraska and that fact together with his liking for the school caused him to register at Nebraska instead of returning to Butler

But One Fraternity Here

At that time there was but one fraternity at Nebraska Sigma Chi which had been chartered since the suspension of the first Phi Delta Theta charter

Mr Anderson said he looked around that fall and picked out a group of fellows that he thought would be good Phi timber and then he wrote to H U Brown at that time national president of the fraternity and a personal friends Mr Brown was also a member of Indiana Gamma He took the matter up at the next general council meeting and it wasn t very long before a charter was sent to Nebraska

After the granting of the charter seven students were initiated into the fraternity at the home of Professor McMillan whose son Conway McMillan was a member of the new fraternity

Webster Helps Chapter

"Then came the question of a meeting place The chapter president Mr Anderson went to see Judge J R Webster about holding fraternity meetings in his office

What kind of an organization is it? Judge Webster asked

It s a Greek letter fraternity Mr Anderson replied and told him the name

Judge Webster was delighted and told Mr Anderson that he was a Phi Delt from Indiana Beta and he did all he could to arrange a meeting place for the boys For a while the meetings were held in his law office and later in the Masonic temple which was located in the old First National bank building at Tenth and O streets

That meeting was once every two weeks and there were parties occasionally about once or twice a year according to Mrs Harry Harley who is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma which was chartered soon after Phi Delta Theta had been rechartered

They called them open nights and they were really quite the social events of the school at that time Mrs Harley said There were just three Greek letter societies at Nebraska then Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Chi and Kappa Kappa Gamma

A chapter letter to the Scroll written by Conway McMillan in June of 1883 tells of a banquet which the Phi Delts gave in honor of the Kappas The letter says that Sigma Chi was to have had a banquet for the Kappa girls but those young ladies refused to attend it, but accepted the invitation from Phi Delta Theta. The letter also mentions something about festivities until three o'clock in the morning but it was commencement week and that made it permissible Besides, the banquet was held in 1883

The First Chapter House

There are no records definite ones at least concerning the first chapter house The meetings continued at the Masonic temple for several years and according to Emory Hardy the first chapter house was somewhere close to the university but just where he doesn t remember It burned, and its exact location will probably never be determined

The Phi Delts moved from one house to another after that until the purchase of the present home in 1918 The house was formerly owned by the late Judge Allen Field and is one of the most attractive homes in the city

The huge living room with its davenports and easy chairs, the magnificent dining room the deep rugs shaded lights and the smartness of every detail of the house would no doubt be a paradise to some of the first Phi Delts, who lived back of the chapter rooms at Tenth and O streets fifty years ago

On Saturday, March 14, hundreds of Phi Delts from Nebraska Alpha scattered throughout the United States and other countries as well, will pay tribute to the fiftieth anniversary of the chartering of the chapter at the University of Nebraska.

It was in 1875 that the charter of Phi Delta Theta was first granted to Nebraska, but because of the lack of approval and support it was suspended.

In 1883 Arthur E. Anderson, a member of Indiana Gamma at Butler university was persuaded to stop in Lincoln on his way back to school, and look over the Nebraska university, which was rather small at that time. Mr. Anderson's parents had just moved to Nebraska, and that fact, together with his liking for the school, caused him to register at Nebraska instead of returning to Butler.

But One Fraternity Here.

At that time there was but one fraternity at Nebraska, Sigma Chi, which had been chartered since the suspension of the first Phi Delta Theta charter.

Mr. Anderson said he looked around that fall and picked out a group of fellows that he thought would be good Phi timber, and then he wrote to H. U. Brown, at that time national president of the fraternity, and a personal friends. Mr. Brown was also a member of Indiana Gamma. He took the matter up at the next general council meeting and it wasn't very long before a charter was sent to Nebraska.

After the granting of the charter, seven students were initiated into the fraternity, at the home of Professor McMillan, whose son, Conway McMillan, was a member of the new fraternity.

Webster Helps Chapter.

Then came the question of a meeting place. The chapter president, Mr. Anderson, went to see Judge J. R. Webster about holding fraternity meetings in his office.

"What kind of an organization is it?" Judge Webster asked.

"It's a Greek letter fraternity," Mr. Anderson replied, and told him the name.

Judge Webster was delighted and told Mr. Anderson that he was a Phi Delt from Indiana Beta, and he did all he could to arrange a meeting place for the boys. For a while the meetings were held in his law office, and later in the Masonic temple, which was located in the old First National bank building at Tenth and O streets.

"Frat" meeting was once every two weeks, and there were parties occasionally, about once or twice a year, according to Mrs. Harry Harley, who is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, which was chartered soon after Phi Delta Theta had been re-chartered.

"They called them 'open nights' and they were really quite the social events of the school at that time," Mrs. Harley said. There were just three Greek letter societies at Nebraska then, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Chi, and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

A chapter letter to the Scroll, written by Conway McMillan in June of 1883, tells of a banquet which the Phi Delts gave in honor of the Kappas. The letter says that Sigma Chi was to have had a banquet for the Kappa girls, but those young ladies refused to attend it, but accepted the invitation from Phi Delta Theta. The letter also mentions something about festivities until three o'clock in the morning, but it was commencement week and that made it permissible. Besides, the banquet was held in 1883.

The First Chapter House.

There are no records, definite ones, at least, concerning the first chapter house. The meetings continued at the Masonic temple for several years, and according to Emory Hardy, the first chapter house was somewhere close to the university, but just where he doesn't remember. It burned, and its exact location will probably never be determined.

The Phi Delts moved from one house to another after that until the purchase of the present home in 1918. The house was formerly owned by the late Judge Allen Field, and is one of the most attractive homes in the city.

The huge living room with its davenports and easy chairs, the magnificent dining room, the deep rugs, shaded lights and the smartness of every detail of the house, would no doubt be a paradise to some of the first Phi Delts, who lived back of the chapter rooms at Tenth and O streets fifty years ago.

One of Strong Fraternities.

Phi Delta Theta has been, and still continues to be one of the strongest fraternities at the University of Nebraska, and is one of the foremost national fraternities. Several very prominent men are members of Nebraska Alpha, and many of the successful business men in Lincoln are also members.

A fitting program has been arranged by the active chapter to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the fraternty in Nebaska.
